Antagonism Expected to the Homestead Measure—Decisive Action on the Cuban Matter Now Expected. Talk of Holiday Recess.

Washington, Dec. 14.—The ineffectual effort of last week to side-track the immigration bill indicates that that measure will be maintained as the unfinished business until it has been put to the final vote. By unanimous consent the house bill providing for free homesteads on the public lands in Oklahoma territory for actual and bona fide settlers and reserving the public lands for that purpose has been made the special order to follow the immigration bill. The homestead bill is likely to arouse some antagonism, but it is believed that it will come to a vote without unusual delay. Beyond these two subjects there is nothing on the calendar having the right of way. Mr. Morrill's resolution prohibiting the use of the congressional library for the purpose of the inaugural ball is likely to be reported from the committee and called up. The friends of the resolution claim that it will readily pass when it has been reported. Cuban affairs are also likely to come to the front, probably to-day, and it is believed that the reported assassination of Maceo while under a flag of truce, unless speedily proved to be untrue, will cause congress to take decisive action in the Cuban matter. Mr. Allen, who, the other day, called up the Dingley bill, will do so again when a favorable opportunity offers itself. In the house of representative to-day is District of Columbia day under the rules. The bill defining the rights of the purchasers of the property of the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad company, sold under foreclosure of the mortgage authorized by the act of 1871, will come up, probably, to-morrow. It is within the power of the house, under the conditions, now prevailing to give as much time as may be desired to the consideration of this measure. The military appropriation bill is expected to be on the calendar in time for discussion Wednesday, and the legislative, executive and judicial bill by Thursday. It is among the probabilities that adjournment for the holiday recess will be taken on Friday. The subject was discussed by the republican members of the committee on ways and means Saturday, but no conclusion was reached. The recess, whenever it begins, is expected to extend until Monday or Tuesday after New Year's Day.

Wants Major McKinley Upheld.

San Francisco, Dec. 14.—In an address issued to the bimetallists of the United States, chairman Charles D. Lane of the national bimetallist committee urges them to accept the verdict of the country and uphold Major McKinley as president. He advises them to cease active agitation on the subject of free coinage, in the hope that the theories advocated by the republican party will bring relief, but says the struggle should be renewed until bimetallism is an accomplished fact, if the republicans break their pledges and resort to the issuing of bonds to maintain the country's credit.

Woman Suffrage in Idaho.

Boise City, Idaho, Dec. 14.—By the decision Saturday of the state supreme court woman suffrage is an accomplished fact. The decision is to the effect that when any proposed amendment to the constitution receives a majority of the votes cast on the proposition, whether or not it is a majority of all the votes cast at that election, the amendment is carried. The woman suffrage amendment received 5,000 votes more than those cast against it, though not a majority of those cast at the election.

A CLASH ABOUT JURIES.

FRANK BERGEN WRITES A SHARP LETTER TO EX-SHERIFF KYTE.

In Which an Unfavorable Contrast is Drawn Between the Jurors Selected by the Former and Present Sheriff—A Reply

It is alleged in inner political circles at Elizabeth that war has been proclaimed between former Sheriff George Kyte, of Union county, and former City Counsel Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth, says The World this morning. The trouble, it is said, arose over a stinging letter which, it is alleged, Lawyer Bergen sent recently to the former Sheriff scoring him in caustic language for the petit juries he selected while Sheriff, and contrasting them very unfavorably with the jury just picked out for the January term by Sheriff Kirk, who recently succeeded Mr. Kyte.

The receipt of this criticism has made Mr. Kyte hopping mad, from all accounts, and he is reported to be preparing a reply to Mr. Bergen, which those who have seen it declare will prove a sensation. It is alleged also that Mr. Kyte accuses Mr. Bergen of being a paid emmissary of the trusts especially, and that he charges the attorney with using his influence to obtain for the Consolidated Traction Company a valuable franchise from the city of Elizabeth without paying for the privilege. There are other things in the letter which will, it is claimed, make Lawyer Bergen angry when he peruses them.

The conflict between these two eminent Republican leaders in Union county promises to be of a bitter and breezy character, and the correspondence between them is likely to be made public.

When seen last night about the controversy between himself and former Sheriff Kyte, Mr. Bergen did not deny writing the objectionable letter, and remarked:

"I simply reminded him plainly of the duties of his office and what the community had expected of him but failed to get. If he is angry about this I cannot help it. I have not as yet received any reply from him, and am not aware he intends making one."

REV. DR. BARNES TO LEAVE.

But He Will Depart With Best of Feeling Between Parishioners and Himself.

In the working of the itinerancy of the Methodist Episcopal church, it will come to pass that very many changes of pastors will be made at the next session of the conference. The year following very few changes will be likely to occur. After a frank and friendly conference between Dr. Barnes and his official board, the conclusion has been reached that it will be to the advantage of both church and pastor to avail themselves of the changing season. The Bishop approving, there will, therefore, be a new pastor assigned to the church next April, and Dr. Barnes will take work elsewhere. Although this change will occur a year before it would have to, according to the rule of the denomination, it will not in any wise interfere with the cordial relations existing between Dr. Barnes and the church.

COFFINS IN BRIGHT COLORS.

The Fashion Has Developed in San Francisco as an Offset to Gloom.

They are distinctly progressive on the Pacific coast. It has long been suspected, but now there is no doubt of it, for there has been a decided advance in funeral customs.

For some time past there has been a desire to make these ceremonies less dismal than formerly. Flowers and brightness have been demanded instead of darkness and a general effect of despair. The feeling seems to grow out of the teachings of some of the new ethical societies, which hold that the dead are only going to a better and happier life, and there is no need for friends to feel sad about an event that must bring joy to the departed.

An undertaker by the name of Metzler was the first to perceive the growing popular tendency. He lay awake nights devising means to meet the new demand, which did not seem to be satisfied with merely a lightening of the hitherto sorrowful services and the use of brighter colored flowers. As a result of his much thinking he devised a coffin, covered, not with gloomy black, but with a handsome blue and gray cloth, the colors lying longitudinally in wide stripes.

This, he concluded, would about express the popular notion, being neat and elegant and not too gaudy, for while the whole effect was light and airy, the colors chosen were still emblematic of the more sombre shades of human feeling

Still, it was with some perturbation that the undertaker placed the novelty in his shop window. He was surprised and gratified to have a customer for it the same day. The customer was fascinated. He would have nothing else that the undertaker, or, indeed, the city, had to offer. It was not so sad looking, he remarked, as those black coffins.

At the funeral the undertaker noted the effect with anxious eye. The blue and gray coffin made a sensation, to be sure, but it looked well among the flowers (carefully selected to harmonize), and the undertaker heard no word or saw no look save of admiration.

He immediately made another, which likewise sold the day it was put in the window. Then orders began to come in, and other undertakers began to copy. Metzler was at last emboldened to make one in sky blue and white, and it was sold within an hour. San Francisco Call.

French School Uniforms.

Nothing must seem stranger to Americans accustomed to see schoolboys of all ages come and go freely through the streets dressed according to their parents' taste and means than to watch those long lines of French boys, sometimes nearly grown to manhood, wearing a school uniform of semimilitary coats and caps, and led out for a walk like a flock of sheep by a shepherd. Their uniform is worn without any pretension to strict regimental regulation; the little fellows look ridiculous, as their brass-buttoned coats are generally too long and ill-fitting. Their sole care seems to be directed toward playing the worst tricks they can on the usher who is leading them. Schoolboy slang dubs this overseer a pion, a chess pawn, and there is no more perfect example of a butt than this subaltern functionary. His tyrannical supervision, his power to inflict punishment for the slightest peccadillo, necessarily make him hated by those whose words and least actions he watches during recess as well as during study hours. If the usher is vulgar or coarse at times, the boys in general are far from having good manners. —Th. Bentzon, in Century.

PARKS AT THE TOP NOW

THEY HEAD THE CONTESTANTS IN JOURNAL BOWLING LEAGUE.

Defeated the Westfield Bowlers Last Night in a Game Filled With Sensational Plays—Some Exciting Features

It takes good bowlers to get to the top but that's what they have over at the Park Club. Yes, the bowlers of the Park Club have risen to the dignity of number one in the Central Journal Bowling League and now they are there they intend to stay there. The necessary victories to put them above the renowned Cranfordites were secured last evening on the Park Club alleys after two fierce contests with the team from the Westfield Athletic Club, the old rivals of the Parks.

It was no cinch for the home team, not by any means, and the spectators were treated to two very exciting games. In the first game, Westfield stepped to the front at the very start and led the first frame by nine pins. Westfield continued to lead for the next two frames but it was only by a small margin. Then the lead went to the Parks but they had to work hard to maintain it. The battle was a fierce one up through the sixth frame when Plainfield led by only two pins. Westfield was not prepared for the surprise that was ready for her; all the Park bowlers waked up and the pins fell in a most remarkable manner. Somebody or something, perhaps it was the genial "Charley" Lyman, effectually hoodooed the visitors and they went to pieces, giving the Parks the lead in the seventh frame by fifty-one pins. That ended the fun for victory was now assured as the Westfield men missed pin after pin. "Doc" Thiers did some great bowling; the pins collapsed at his command in a very obedient fashion and he had some wonderful luck. Luck and skill combined gave the veteran bowler the high score of the evening. Worth met with hard luck and that discouraged him so that he only kept eighteen pins ahead of his frame.

The second game was one of the most exciting games ever rolled on the Park Club alleys and it showed the wonderful power of Park Club rooting. The Westfield men started in with the determination of doing or dying. Strike followed strike until the faces of the home team were as long as President Cleveland's message. Some how, the Plainfield men couldn't bowl, while the other fellows beg in putting up phenominal scores. The lead in the first frame was 28, in the second it was increased to 61 pins. A few despairing kicks on the part of the home team reduced that to 50 in the third and 44 in the fourth. In the fifth, Baker, of the Westfield's, rolled his fifth consecutive strike, while the others did their share of the work, and the lead was again increased to 70. Then the rooters came to the rescue, and with real old Park Club enthusiasm, started in. Never was reinforcement more welcome, for, to all appearances, the game was a sure victory for the visitors. All the Park Club team looked gloomy except "Doc" Thiers, who kept telling his club mates that they were going to win. The sixth frame was a clean one for the home team, while their opponents began to slide and their lead went down to 41.

Still the rooters kept at work and in the teams drew nearer and nearer together. VanBuren was putting in strikes and spares while the others realized the necessity of good bowling. The Westfield men had begun to slide with considerable rapidity and on the eighth frame the Parks took the lead by 5 pins. The windup was exciting but the home team got the best of it. Ball, Matthews and Thiers responded to the calls of the excited spectators and finished in good style. A strike from Smith of the Westfield's might have won the game but the strain was too much, or perhaps it was Mayor Hegeman's excited observations, and he broke at the all exciting moment.

The wonderful manner in which the home team recovered themselves when on the very verge of defeat was truly remarkable and showed that the leaders in the Journal League are never beaten until the last pin is rolled.

The individual scores were as follows:

SUNDAY LIQUOR SALES.

IT IS SAID THAT THERE IS A A PLAN TO LEGALIZE THE TRAFFIC.

The Christian Citizenship Union Will Nip it in the Bub if Possible, However, by Public Agitation Against Such a Law.

The Executive Committee of the Christian Citizenship held a meeting at Trenton, yesterday, at which they discussed the story to the effect that the liquor dealers of the State would attempt to have a bill passed at the next Legislature allowing them to sell liquor on Sunday. They decided to fight any such legislation and passed resolutions urging pastors throughout the state to protest against such legislation. They also decided to suggest to the friends of temperance that an effort be made next fall to elect one Assemblyman from each county who would oppose all attempts at any future legislation of this kind.

These officers were elected: President, Rev. S. Edward Young, Newark; vice-president, Albert G. Lawson, Camden; secretary, Rev. W. E. Davis, Lebanon; treasurer, Edgar W. Moore, Elizabeth.

The Anti-Liquor League of New Jersey held its annual convention yesterday. Addresses were delivered by Rev. A. G. Lawson, of Camden, and S. Z. Batten, of Morristown, and the following officers elected: President, A. G. Lawson, of Camden; secretary, DeHart Breun, of Belvidere; treasurer, Ross Slack, of Trenton. The Executive Committee were empowered to prevent the passage of any liquor laws by the Legislature. It was also decided to reintroduce at the next session the "Twelve Signers" bill and measure known as the "Screen and Blind" bill.

CENTRAL HALL TO BE THE SCENE OF BEAUTY AND GAYETY.

Booths Filled With Many Articles That Will Provide a Source of Profit to Engine Company No. 2—Those in Charge

The firemen's fair under the auspices of Engine Company No. 2, of the city fire department, opened last evening in Central hall and will continue during the week.

The hall has been attractively decorated with red, white and blue bunting and the various booths are arranged to the best advantage so as to allow plenty of room for dancing which commences each evening at 9.30.

The firemen, through their several committees, have put forth every effort to present a fair of merit and it is to be hoped that their many friends will not fail to patronize them and thereby enrich their treasury which is essential.

Among the gifts to the fair worthy of mention are three quilts. One from Mrs. D. W. Rogers and two from the Woman's Relief Corps. Another substantial gift is a handsome rocking chair from G. Q. Packer, the furniture dealer. There are a numbers of other fine gifts to numerous to specify.

One of the greatest attractions is the phonograph in charge of Thomas Schaefer. He has the latest and best selections, some of which are entirely new. They consists of quartette, solo vocal and instrumental music, marches and sacred music. One selection is the only confession made by Holmes, the murderer. Mr. Schaefer is painstaking in giving everybody satisfaction.

Following are the names of those in charge of the fair: Chairman, Wm. C. Chamberlain; secretaries, R. B. Rogers, James Dawe; treasurers, R D. Eick, Frank Schuck, James Dawe; music committee, R. B. Rogers, Jacob Benner, C. J. Newman; hall committee, James Dawe, C. J. Newman, Harry Connett; refreshment committee, Frank Hand, Theodore Smith, Harry Connett, Wm. Townley; decorating committee, A. D. Jennings, Alex. Manning, W. S. Marsh, Wm. Townley, J. Kiederling, F. B. Randolph; fancy and useful articles, Mrs. W. C. Chamberlain, Mrs. C. J. Newman, Mrs. Charles Kaeding; supper room, Mrs. Wm. Townley, Mrs. C. W. Smith, the Misses Doyle; candy booth, Mrs. Frank Schuck, Miss Lottie Chamberlain, Miss Mabel Smith; soft drinks, W. S. Marsh, Jas. Dawe, Theodore Martin, Mifford Giles.

The coat room is in charge of Frank Schuck, Jr. Music for dancing is furnished by Bert Naylor, violin, and Miss Benner, piano.

The attendance last evening was very encouraging, considering it was the first night, but the firemen are expecting to see the hall filled every night with their friends.

Many of his young friends were there to enjoy the afternoon with him, and was remembered very kindly by all of them. Among those present were the following: The Misses Mollie Templen, Cerene Mulford, Bessie Pound, Julia Crane, Ethel Lanton, Hazel Grant, Florence Smalley, Florence May Morrison, Anna Morrison; Masters David Smalley, Levi Angleman, Herbert Grant, Edmund Templen, Louis Mulford, Roy Mulford, Walter Calwell, Martie Bowman, Leland Manning, Gerry Manning, Harry Morrison, Albert Coddington and Elmer Hays Morrison; Mrs. James Manning, Miss Hays and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Morrison.

Dissatisfied With the Sale.

Considerable dissatisfaction exists among some of the members of the Independent Gun Club over the sale of the Dunellen club-house to Mr. Day. It is alleged that the sale was made without the knowledge or consent of the members and without even calling a meeting to consider the matter. It is quite likely that an attachment will be served on the purchaser and the building held until some adjustment can be made.

A Farewell Reception.

A farewell reception was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Scipio Whindleton, of Sycamore street, last night, in honor of Miss Rosa Plummer and Messrs. Frank and Charles Plummer, who expect to depart Wednesday morning for North Carolina. The guests were from Pelatina, N. J., Philadelphia, New York city and Richmond, Va. The evening was delightfully spent with games and amusements.

Frank Church, of Craig place, is in Philadelphia on business.

A NOTED MAN, PROBABLY

"THE MAN WITH AN IRON MASK" DISCUSSED BY E. C. PERKINS.

The Lecture Delivered Before the Monday Afternoon Club, Whose Members Also Discussed the Subject.

The members of the Monday Afternoon Club enjoyed a rare treat yesterday afternoon at the Casino, when they had the pleasure of listening to Lawyer Edward C. Perkins deliver a lecture on the interesting subject, "The Man With the Iron Mask." Mr. Perkins said among other things: "That there were a few facts, but nothing definite regarding this mysterious man. However, the man was brought to the Bastile in France in 1698 and he was made to wear a mask. One fact noticeable was that he was lodged and fed better than the ordinary prisoner, and he was greatly respected. In 1703 he died and was buried near the Bastile. Later, when the Bastile was taken the prison register was found, and one page was missing which, from the corresponding dates on the other pages, gave evidence that it related to the man of mystery.

"Facts show that he was a person of great importance and that he was so well-known that if his face was seen it would be recognized, or else he looked like one who was well-known and his face would have told the secret why he was masked.

"The theory seems to be that he was a twin brother of Louis XIV, which is improbable though not impossible."

Following Mr. Perkins' lecture several members of the club engaged in an informal discussion of the subject, but they all formed the same opinion as given by Mr. Perkins.

WILL BE A BATTLE ROYAL.

Park and Country Clubs to Participate in An All-Around Contest.

The rival clubs of Plainfield and North Plainfield will meet again in the various indoor contests that form such a pleasant feature of the club life. Two years ago the representatives of the Park Club and the Union County Country Club met in this way and a very delightful evening resulted. An attempt ws made last year to hold another of these all-around contests, but the plan was not started until too late in the season.

This year the Country Club has taken the lead, and a challange, or rather an invitation, was sent to the Park Club for a contest in whist, bowling, billiards and pool. The date set was for Friday evening, but it was finally decided to postpone the meeting until after the holidays. The whist teams will consist of eight men each, the bowling teams of ten men each, the teams for billiards two men each and the pool teams of the same number.

STREET CAR AND WAGON COLLIDE.

The Driver of the Latter Was Turning Around and Didn't See the Car.

Car No. 6, of the street railway, and a milk wagon owned by C. E. Sage, of Washingtonville, came together this morning about 6 o'clock in front of the Arlington Hotel on Somerset street, and the result was disastrous to the milk wagon. The car was going towards the mountain, when Sage was making a turn in front of the hotel to go in the same direction. The repeated ringing of the gong did not have any effect, and in an instant the two came together. Both axles on the wagon were broken and 100 quarts of milk was allowed to escape. Fortunately there was no damage to Mr. Sage or his horse. Mr. Sage seemed to be very indignant, but it can hardly be claimed that the motorman was to blame, so it is said by those who saw the accident.

May Not Affect the Proposed Road.

It appears that although H. Close has filed a caveat against the opening of the new road from Dunellen to Bound Brook, it may not affect the opening of the road as seriously as thought at first, as the New Jersey Mutual Realty Company are interested in over a mile of frontage on the proposed road, and will open it up through their property as soon as their plans and the condition of the ground will permit. Should they do this, it is thought that other property-owners will do the same. The party who filed the caveat does not own any property along the proposed road and, it is said, his residence is over a quarter of a mile back from the present road, being reached by a lane.

The old lady was right when she said the child might die if they waited for the doctor. She saved the little one's life with a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure. She had used it for croup before. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

MAY ESCAPE HANGING.

SOMERSET'S MURDERERS CAUSE OF RESENTMENT AMONG FARMERS.

It is Feared That They Will Never Expiate Their Crimes on the Gallows—Only One White Man Hung in Somerset.

There is a strong feeling of resentment among the farmers of Somerset county arising from the belief that both Elmer Clawson and Jacob S. Johnson, convicted murderers, will ultimately escape the gallows, as has been the case for more than 100 years with every man and woman who has been convicted of murder in that county, although there have been a number of convictions for murder in the first degree. The court records show that Samuel McDonald, who was hanged in the year 1786 for the murder of John Connett, was the only white man ever put to death in the county under civil law. The hanging of McDonald, who was a son of Col. McDonald, of Revolutionary fame, nearly precipitated a riot, as the residents were divided in their view of capital punishment.

The county records state that it was necessary to escort McDonald to the place of execution under a strong guard of soldiers, so intent were his followers on releasing him. On the morning of the exection Col. McDonald sent a paper to the Captain of the Guard, purporting to be from the Governor, ordering the hanging to be delayed. The Captain sent the paper to Attorney-General Frelinghuysen at Millstone, six miles away, and he pronounced it a forgery. McDonald was then led to Gallows Hill and hanged amid the greatest excitement ever experienced in the county.

The old residents, however, had no scruples about putting negroes to death, as the records show that Abraham, a slave of Jacob VanEste, was burned to a stake at Millstone in 1753 for the murder of his master, and that three negroes, known as Sam the Elder and Sam the Younger and Dine the Mother, were hanged on Gallows Hill at this place in 1788 for setting fire to their master's barn.

There was a belief among many of the Dutch settlers of the county that life imprisonment was a sufficient and just punishment for wilful murderers, but that the murderer should have deeply branded on his forehead the letter M.

Royal Arcanum Elect.

Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, met last evening and elected officers for the coming year as follows: Regent, Marion L. Bullock; vice regeant, Murray Burtis; orator, Arthur Crane; past regent, H. C. Adams; secretary, F. J. Pope; collector, Elliott Burr; treasurer, D. W. Littell; chaplain, E. C. Pease; guide, Fred Smith; warden, J. E. Townsend; sentry, A. W. Winckler; representative to grand council, H. C. Adams; alternate, A. W. Ray; trustee, A. W. Kleinecke.

After the election two members were initiated in the good of the order, and there were speeches and songs and everybody had a pleasant time.

Increased Attendance.

The increase in the number of pupils at the North Plainfield Public School during the last year has been remarkable. A glance at the records of the school shows clearly what the gain has been. In November, 1895, the enrollment was 718, and in November, 1896, the enrollment was 815, making a gain in enrollment of 97. The average attendance during November, 1895, was 612; in November 1896, it was 731, an increase of 119 in the average attendance.

Breaking The Record.

The record doesn't seem to be in it at all with the growing possibilities of man's endurance. Just think of that wonderful performance of Hale's, the cyclist—pedaling 1911 miles in 142 hours! That's about 1910 more miles than the most of you would have to go to see the best assortment of Christmas presents for the money in the market—to Collier's, 103 Park avenue.

Thrown From a Wagon.

While Mrs. L. W. Serrell, Jr., of Crescent avenue, and her brother, James Chilton, of East Orange, were driving on Central avenue, yesterday afternoon, the horse turned a corner too short and Mr. Chilton was thrown out. He was driving at the time and pluckily hung to the reins, probably preventing a runaway. His injuries were but slight.

New Officers for the Year.

At a regular communication of Stone Square Lodge, No. 38, F. and A. M., held last evening, the following officers were elected: Master, James Walker; senior warden, M. J. Pollard; junior warden, Nelson Batts; treasurer, W. H. Jones; secretary, John W. Reed. The appointive officers will be announced later.

SHE TALKED TOO MUCH.

"MISTRESS" TOBIN EXCITES THE COURT TO LAUGHTER.

She Was Being Sued For $200 Damages by Mrs. Edward Kelly on the Ground of Illegal Ejectment From a House Lately

It was, indeed, a sad performance that was witnessed in the city court room this morning when the case of Mrs. Edward Kelly against "Mistress" Mary Jane Tobin, in tort, was tried. The poor, unfortunate plaintiff, who recently lost her husband, and who has been left alone in the world wtihout the smallest heritage, was certainly a pitiable object, while the defendant, brazen and defiant in her actions, was in striking contrast to the modest and aged woman who was only seeking her rights from the court. Lawyer H. C. Runyon appeared for the plaintiff and Lawyer S. S. Swackhamer for the defendant, while Justice Newcorn was on the bench.

The defendant when placed on the stand kept everyone in the court room filled with laughter by her never ceasing talk of the wildest character. She was the only one who had any rights, according to her words, and she thought it was a shame that she should be called into court in such a matter. She accused the plaintiff and her late husband of doing everything that was wrong, and in expressive words and tones related many things that would not bear repeating.

Several witnesses were called to substantiate the claim made by plaintiff and defendant.

Mr. Kelly told her story in a simple and plain manner, how she and her husband had been ill treated by the defendant, and had their goods set out doors and themselves ejected from the house.

Throughout the trial the defendant had considerable to say that was not pleasant to hear. When she was asked a question by the lawyer the plaintiff's counsel objected, but, the woman explained "I don't object," and she thought she was right in so declaring herself.

The case was hotly contested throughout, and at noon it was given to the jury.

The jury was out for over two hours when they finally returned with a verdict for the plaintiff for the full amount, $200.

DELAYED THREE MONTHS IN SAILING.

Misunderstanding About a Steamship Ticket Causes Frank Linke Trouble.

For three months has Frank Linke, of West Front street, expected his father to arrive in this country, but has not yet put in an appearance here although he is expected to arrive at New York on Sunday one one of the Hamburgh-American liners. Three months ago, Mr. Linke purchased a ticket on that line and sent it to his father.

When the elder Mr. Linke, who lives in Germany, tried to use the ticket, he was told that the ticket was not good as no notification of its sale had reached them. When Mr. Linke, of this city, learned of the refusal of the company to take the ticket, he began to investigate. The steamship company blamed the trouble on the agent and the latter blamed it on the company. At last the company found that that had overlooked the ticket and had not notified their agent on the other side of the sale of the ticket.

They promised to right all wrongs, and so Mr. Linke is waiting to see if his father is on the next steamer which arrives on Sunday. Of course the elder Mr. Linke was kept waiting on the other side all the time the company was looking into the matter. They took about three months from the time the ticket was sent over to the waiting father.

Camera Club Officers.

A regular meeting of the Plainfield Camera Club was held last evening in the club rooms in the Babcock building. The most important business was the annual election of officers, which resulted as follows: President, Harold Serrell; vice-president, John E. Stewart; secretary, J. Hervey Doane; treasurer, Mrs. E. M. Rand; other members of the board, Otto Arens, R. L. Lee and Harry Coward. Edmund Rushmore was elected a member of the club. The club is now preparing to have a set of slides of their own, which will be exhibited after the first of the year.

WORK IN CONGRESS

Vote on Immigration Bill To Be Taken Thursday.

CUBAN AND TURKISH RESOLUTIONS

Senator Peffer Wants a Committee Appointed to Study Finance in Relation to Business---Miscellaneous Matters in the House.

Washington, Dec. 15.—The reported assassination of the Cuban general, Antonio Maceo, while under a flag of truce, was the text of a resolution offered in the senate by Mr. Call, dem., Fla., and referred to the committee on foreign relations. The resolution characterized the affair as a violation of the rules of civilized warfare and as a cowardly act of treachery. It declared the government which authorized and permitted it, or failed to punish the assassin, "an outcast from the family of nations, and from the pale of civilization and public law." The committee on foreign relations is instructed to inquire into the facts and report to the senate at an early day. Another resolution of Mr. Call's, which was similarly referred, requests the president of the United States to demand the release of all United Staees citizens held by the Spanish government as prisoners in Cuba. A war blast was also blown against Turkey in the shape of resolutions passed by a church congregation in New Hampshire, presented and approved by Senator Gallinger of that state, declaring that the Armenian outrages should be suppressed by the civilized powers, at the cost, if necessary, of the dismemberment of the Turkish empire. A resolution was offerred by Mr. Peffer, pop., Kan., and laid on the table for the present for the appointment of a commission of five (one from each of the four parties—republican, democratic, national democratic and populist—and one other to be chosen by these four) to examine and study the general subject of finance in reference to its practical relations to business. A resolution offered last week by Mr. Allen, pop., Neb., denying the constitutional power of any state to impair the obligation of contracts, was taken up and made the basis of a speech by him, in which he defended the populist governor and legislature of Nebraska from all imputations of an intention to enact legislation hostile to capital, and declared that all such fears were groundless. He especially disclaimed all purpose to act in hostility to railroad companies. In the course of his speech he severely criticized a charge made by Senator Hoar of Massachusetts in a recent speech in Boston, as to the state of Nebraska having, in voting for Bryan and free silver, "engaged in a crazy attempt at revolution and a passionate attempt at dishonor." Such a statement, Mr. Allen declared, was "unwarranted, dishonest and ungracious." Mr. Hoar explained and justified his language and applied to the resolution the terms "puerile and trifling." Mr. Platt, rep., Conn., also referred to it as "clap-trap." It was referred to the judiciary committe. The immigration bill was taken up and went over under an agreement that a vote shall be taken on its passage at 4 p. m. Thursday. The resolution of the house for the holiday recess was referred to the committee on appropriations. The senate then took up and passed all the pension bills on the calendar, fifty-five.

House of Representatives.

Miscellaneous business will probably occupy the attention of the house until Thursday when District of Columbia bills will be taken up, their consideration having been postponed until that date. By a vote of yeas 98, noes 85, the house refused to pass over the president's veto a bill granting a pension to the divorced wife of Lowell Taft of the Eighteenth regiment, Connecticut Volunteer infantry, who died of alcoholism in a soldiers' home. A joint resolution was passed providing for a holiday recess from December 22 to January 5.

Camden, N. J., Dec. 15.—Mrs. Mary E. Hesser of this city believes that the Edward Nutter whom George Erb, now incarcerated at Harrisburg, Pa., confessed to having killed at Fort Smith, Ark., is her son. J., cigar manufacturing firm.

Views of the Minority Leader.

Apropos of the action of the republican majority of the committee on ways and means regarding tariff hearings, Mr. Turner of Georgia, the ranking member of the minority, said that the committee did not have the power to formulate a bill for the next congress. He also suggested that if current rumors were to be credited, the chairman (Mr. Dingley) might better wait until under the next administration he might, as secretary of the treasury, give advice and instructions on the subject to those who will be asked to legislate upon it.

BROOKLYN BRIDGE TRAFFIC.

Statistics of the Great Structure Connecting New York and the City of Churches.

New York, Dec. 15.—The annual report of the trustees of the New York and Brooklyn bridge, just issued, shows, among other things, as follows: The receipts from tolls during the year have been $1,201,758.13, divided as follows: Carriageways, $88,800.86; railroad, $1,112,957.27. During the twelve months the number of passengers carried on the railroad was 43,996,459. The number carried in the previous year was 44,564,329, giving a revenue of $1,130,608.84. The receipts from all sources were $1,712,061.19. The expenditures were $1,640,490.24, leaving a balance of $71,570.95. During the year there were 247 arrests, 42 runaways, 94 persons accidentally injured, 60 persons taken ill and two sudden deaths on the structure. Three vessels lost their topmasts while passing under it. One surprising statement in the report is as follows: "The total amount of time lost on the railway by delays from all causes was four hours and forty-eight minutes, an average of forty-seven seconds per day of twenty-four hours, or one minute for each 152,765 passengers carried."

BISHOP WHIPPLE'S BRIDE.

How She Obtained a Fortune from Her Former Husband.

Mrs. Evangeline Simpson's recent marriage in New York city to Rt. Rev Henry B. Whipple, bishop of Minnesota, has aroused great interest among those who know of the bride's romantic previous marriage. She is now 40 years old; her husband is 73. Mrs. Whipple is well remembered in the country town of Saxonville, Mass., as the widow of Michael Simpson, a wealthy manufacturer of carpets and horse blankets, who made an enormous fortune during and after the war. In his day he was the king of Saxonville, nearly the whole of which town he owned. At the age of 75 he won the hand—and some say the heart, also—of Eva Mars, who was

Two years after his marriage Mr. Simpson died. By his will he left his widow $1,000,000 in cash. She subsequently received another $1,000,000 from the sale of property in Boston belonging to the estate. Mrs. Simpson has been deeply interested of late years in Episcopal missions and charitable work and has also taken an active interest in the reformatory for women in Sherburn. She has been acquainted with Bishop Whipple for many years and was an intimate friend of his first wife.

The Antiquity of Soap.

Soap has been in use for 3,000 years and is twice mentioned in the Bible. A few years ago a soap-boiler's shop was discovered in Pompeii, having been buried beneath the terrible rain of ashes that fell upon the city 79 A. D. The soap found in the shop had not lost all its efficacy, although it had been buried 1,800 years.

Some say that the hypophosphites alone are sufficient to prevent and cure consumption, if taken in time. Without doubt they exert great good in the beginning stages; they improve the appetite, promote digestion, and tone up the nervous system. But they lack the peculiar medicinal properties and the fat found in cod-liver oil. The hypophosphites are valuable, and the cod-liver oil is valuable.

of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites contains both of these in the most desirable form. The oil is thoroughly emulsified; that is, partly digested. Sensitive stomachs can bear an emulsion when the raw oil cannot be retained. As the hypophosphites, the medicinal agents in the oil, and the fat itself are each good, why not have the benefit of all?

SCOTT'S EMULSION has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. (Ask your doctor.) This is because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

SPAIN WILL PROTECT HER.

Laurada May Enter Valencia, But Official Hope She Will Avoid Spanish Ports.

Madrid, Dec. 15.—Admiral Beranger minister of marine, states that the maritime commander at Vanlencia has been ordered to receive the American steamer Laurada precisely as he would any other merchant vessel entering that port, and to furnish her with every facility for the continuation of her voyage. Should she need supplies the marine authorities will furnish them, if private persons refuse to do so The admiral hopes, however, that the Laurada will avoid Spain, as her presence at Valencia might cause disorders with a view of preventing which the cruiser Maria Teresa and the gunboat Vulcana are anchored off that place.

MACE AND DONOVAN MEET.

Many Well-Known Pugilists Watch the Old-Timers Box.

New York, Dec. 15.—About 2,500 people attended the Mace-Donovan benefit at the Broadway Athletic club last night. In addition to the ex-heavyweight champion of the world and the one time American middle-weight champion, a host of other by-gone stars were in evidence. The science of the present day was represented by James J. Corbett. Among the spectators were men well-known in the higher walks of life, who were present to show their appreciation of sport. A tremendous burst of applause greeted John L. Sullivan as he was announced to make a short speech. He received another ovation as he retired. Billy Edwards, the ex-lightweight champion, and Arthur Chambers of Philadelphia, his old rival, then sparred three rounds. A great reception was accorded to Corbett as he came into the right to box three rounds with Jim McVey, his sparring partner. The champion looked in good shape. He was as lively as a kitten and gave a beautiful exhibition of science. Then the stars of the evening, Mace and Donovan, entered the ring. The veterans had on long white trousers and were stripped above the belt. Parson Davies announced that there would be no decision as the set-to was to be a scientific exhibition of a friendly nature. Donovan was very active on his feet and danced around the old Englishman, tapping him lightly on the face and body with open gloves. Mace, despite his years, was quick and used his left well. In the second round Mace took out his false teeth and threw them to his second. In the third Mace shoved his left in straight a couple of times and Mike sent a pretty hot one to the jaw. They did some lively tapping in the last round, and the old fellows looked to be in earnest for a second, when Parson Davies called time. They shook hands and there were loud cries of "draw!" "draw!"

BIG FIRE AT ALTOONA.

Several Business Buildings Destroyed and the Postoffice Damaged.

Altoona, Pa., Dec. 15.—Fire that started in the large dry-goods store of Frank M. Morrow at Eleventh avenue and Twelfth street last night while the store was crowded with customers soon destroyed that structure, then spread to the large Morrow building, which was completely destroyed, and communicated to the wholesale drug store of Turner & Kantner on the south. Next the flames attacked the large three-story brick building owned by the Wolf heirs and occupied by Charles A. Carpenter, wholesale tobacconist. This building was destroyed, and the flames spread to the postoffice building, which is owned by the Odd Fellows. On the east the flames gutted the top floors of the Blumenthal building, which is occupied by the Temple Clothing company, and its large stock was ruined. Opposite the Morrow building, the First National bank, Johnson's shoe store, George Fresh's sporting goods store, M. Mayer milliner, the Altoona Candy company and George Streit's shoe store were damaged by fire and water. The losses will aggregate $100,000.

Prof. Sargen's Residence Damaged.

Brookline, Mass., Dec. 15.—A fire occurred last night in the magnificent country residence of Prof. Charles S. Sargent of Harvard university. The south wing of the building was practically destroyed. The furniture, valuable heirlooms, and most of the costly furnishings were taken from the house, but they were somewhat damaged by smoke. The loss is estimated at $25,000; fully insured. The fire started in a servant's room.

Lost Schooner Identified.

Greenport, L. I., Dec. 15.—The identity of the schooner which went down in the sound last Thursday, east of Faulkner island, has been positively established. It was the Freestone Capt. Bushnell, which sailed from New York with a cargo of coal for this place. Capt. Edward Bushnell, first mate Thomas McAvoy and steward Schuman, all of Greenport, perished. The captain and mate leave widows and several children.

Gov. Morton Denies a Newspaper Story

Albany, Dec. 15.—Gov. Morton when shown an article published in a New York paper stating that he had sent a telegram to President-elect McKinley inviting him to Washington to discuss the most feasible plan to be followed concerning the attitude of the United States towards Cuba during the remainder of President Cleveland's term of office, said that the story is absolutely without foundation.

Hanged Herself in Jail.

Walkerton, Ont., Dec. 15. — Miss Catherine Halk of Culross, who had been committed to the Walkerton jail as a lunatic, committed suicide last night by hanging herself to a cell door with a rope made of her apron. She was 34 years of age.

FOR CUBA'S FREEDOM

Important and Material Move Just Made in New York.

A POWERFUL LEAGUE ORGANIZED

Ex-Gov. Flower, Chauncey Depew, Hon George Hoadley, Charles A. Dana, Gen. Butterfield and Many Others Among the Organizers.

New York, Dec. 15.—The first step towards helping Cuba in the fight with Spain, and the first material evidence of aid from the citizens of this city to the cause of the little island were taken last night in the Fifth Avenue hotel, when the "Cuban league of the United States of America" was formally organized. The men behind this movement are so well known and carry so much weight that it is beyond a doubt that this is the beginning of a movement that will take no small part in the history of both countries—having, as it does, the complete independence of Cuba from Spain for its principal object. No time was lost in jingo speeches. The meeting quickly organized with Col Ethan Allen as president and the following vice-presidents: Charles A Dana, Roswell P. Flower, Thomas L James, Chauncey M. Depew, John R Dos Passos, Theodore Roosevelt, Thomas F. Gilroy, George Hoadly, J Edward Simmons and C. H. Dennison Francis Wayland Glen was elected secretary; Darwin R. James, treasurer, and the executive committee is composed of John Jacob Astor, Paul Dana, Gen. Daniel Butterfield, Frederick D. Grant and Walter Logan. The call for the meeting declares it to be the object of the league to secure for Cuba by all lawful, peaceful and honorable means the political independence which her patriots are now endeavoring, by tremendous sacrifice of treasure and life, to gain; to encourage them with our sympathy and moral support, and to arouse the whole nation to demand an end of the campaign of murder and destruction in that island. The help our fathers received in a similar struggle more than a century ago is recalled, and, constrained by a sense of gratitude, it is the desire to return to Cuba the kindness which was so effectively given to us when in need. Closing, the call says it is apparent to all that Spain has not the power to crush the patriots, and this republic has the power to end the cruel struggle, and that it is in honor called upon to do so for the highest good of all the parties directly concerned. After the formation of the league it was decided to hold a monster mass-meeting in Cooper union next Monday night, when Senator Morgan of the foreign relations committee and Congressman Hitt of the same committee of the house, Congressman Reed of Maine and Senator Cullom of Illinois will speak. Col. Allen predicted that the movement thus started would become historic.

MANY WANT TO ENLIST.

Cuban Junta Overrun with Men Anxious To Aid the Patriots.

New York, Dec. 15.—The Cuban junta in New street has had more callers during the past two days than for a similar time since its establishment. Strong-limbed Americans to the number of between 700 and 800—nearly enough to constitute a regiment—tramped up-stairs, threw out their chests and in resolute tones asked that the be enlisted in the army of Cuba. Not one of them were accepted. The laws of the United States prohibit the enlistment of men here for foreign armies. The men who want to fight in the cause for which Maceo died are and have been so numerous lately that the Cuban leaders here now issue to applicants by letter a printed form declining the services of the sympathizers. Delegate Palma has received over a score of telegrams from Jacksonville, Key West, Tampa, Dallas, Tex.; Paris, France; Hayti and different points in Mexico, stating that meetings were being held for the discussion of the Cuban question, and asking for intelligence regarding Maceo's alleged death. The Cuban junta had not yet received from their southern agents or from Havana the complete list of the names of those of Gen. Maceo's staff who were killed with their chief. Neither have they any record of those Americans who are supposed to have been with the insurgent general. Some of the gallant little band that fell with Maceo are supposed to have been from California, but the junta cannot confirm that report. One thing is certain, a part of the staff, which consisted of sixteen men, were recruited in this city. Dr. J. D. Castillo said to a reporter this morning that he could not remember the names of the men who were from this city and who eventually became Maceo's confidants in the struggle for Cuban victory.

Mobilizing Men at St. Louis.

St. Louis, Dec. 15.—Volunteers for the relief of the Cuban insurgents are being mobilized in this city, and next Friday, if all plans are carried out successfully, 1,000 men will leave New Orleans for Cuba. Julius Van Gerst of New Orleans will be in charge of the expedition, with W. C. Carter, J. L. Goodneer and Cornelius Knott of this city as aides.

Urged To Enlist for Cuba.

Columbus, O., Dec. 15.—An evening paper in a guarded editorial urges soldiers in the United States army here who may be discharged and others of military training to join the Cuban insurgent movement. It also suggests that a fund in aid of the Cubans be raised here.

A PRACTICAL SYSTEM.

An entirely new system of grading scholars has been adopted in Elizabeth schools that is rich with a practical conception of school work. It is the appliance of a method whereby those who learn rapidly may not be retarded by those who are not so quick to grasp the instructions, and yet at certain periods are in the same grade. Under the old system even those who were capable of being advanced at an early period from grammar to high school, were obliged to wait till the end of the school year in June, when, with those who had learned more slowly, they were advanced. By this new method, however, the brighter pupils are transferred from the grammar to the high school as soon as they are able to pass the examinations, thus receiving the benefit of individual rather than average class work, and shortening the time they will be obliged to devote to master the curriculum of studies. The most popular feature of the system, but by no means the most important, will doubtless be the saving of money to the taxpayers. The children will make more rapid progress, and as it costs less to teach three years than it does to teach five, the money will go just so much further in carrying on the public schools.

Mayor-elect Fisk, of Plainfield, would do well to heed the request of the Woman's Improvement Association that two women shall be appointed as members of the Board of Health. It will be healthier for him and all the rest of Plainfield when such representation is allowed.—New York Press.

Though Joseph H. Choate, the eminent New York lawyer, has won all kinds of lawsuits in the face of all kinds of law, he had to condescend to paying a $1 fine in a police court yesterday because the lamps on his carriage were not lighted. Such is fate.

New Jersey has 1,763 public school buildings. The past year thirty-eight buildings have been erected and sixty-five enlarged.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mr. and Mrs. Scipio Whindleton were the guests of friends in Elizabeth, Sunday.

Robert Hamilton and family, of Stone street, moved their household effects yesterday to 42 Orchard place.

Mrs. Charles Grader, of Duer street, is seriously ill suffering from typhoid fever. Dr. D. C. Adams is in attendance.

Mrs. Emeline Fox, of Phœnixville, Pa., is being entertained by Mr. and Mrs. William O. Worth, of Duer street.

Dr. G. W. Endicott was called to Stapleton, S. I., yesterday, to see Mrs. J. F. Weechers, who is seriously ill with typhoid fever.

THEATRICAL.

The Corse Payton Comedy Company was announced as the best repertoire company on the road, when Manager Willey booked them for this week at Music Hall, and at the opening performance last night they well sustained that statement in "The Parisian Princess" with a capable caste of performers and a wealth of special scenery. The piece is a French comedy-drama affording a good test of the acting abilities of the whole company, and in it they acquitted themselves in such a manner that the large audience frequently gave their enthusiastic applause. In the dual character of "Mary Greenwood," an innocent country girl wronged by the scheming villian, afterwards known as "Fanchet Fontain," a French adventuress, who outpoints the villian at his own game, Miss Etta Reed displayed her versatile talent in successfully acting two characters widely divergent in their conception. As the comedian with a quartette name, Corse Payton raised the risibilities of the audience to the exploding point at frequent intervals and scored a hit. Will D. Corbett, in the leading male character of "George Claymore," gave a finished piece of acting. The supporting company was excellent. Throughout all the acts specialties were interspersed, and they were all very good. Tonight "The Galley Slave" will be presented. Matinees will be given tomorrow and Saturday afternoons.

The Fact that Doctors

frequently advise change of air and climate to those suffering from catarrh is proof that catarrh is a local and climatic disease. Therefore, unless you can leave home and business, you should use Ely's Cream Balm. Applied directly to the seat of the disease, it effects instant relief and a satisfactory cure after short continuance. No mercury or injurious drug is contained in the Balm.

THEY ALL SWING THEIR ARMS.

Singular Habit Alleged Against Women of Chicago While Out Walking.

The women of Chicago, old and young, matrons and schoolgirls, all have a habit that is distinctly their own. They swing their arms. It matters little whether they come from the North or West side, the fashionable suburb of Buena Park or from Cicero, when they promenade their right arms swing to and fro with the regularity of an eight-day clock. The well-gowned and well-groomed maidens who take their constitutional either on the Lake Shore or along Michigan boulevard are as much addicted to the disagreeable mannishism as their sisters who take their grooming on South Halsted street, or who promenade after long hours spent in a factory out on Archer road.

Sometimes the maid or dame who rushes from one shop to another in the retail district of Chicago swings only one arm backward and forward as she hurries on, bent upon securing a good bargain. But if her haste is exceedingly great both are often in motion and not always do they move in unison. When the promenade is well filled with women, even if their costumes are rich and gay, the gloss is taken from the throng by this ungainly habit.

The belles who walk on Fifth avenue, New York, and in Hyde Park, London, do not appear to affect this unpleasant habit and, although some physicians are of the opinion, that the swinging of the arms comes from too snug a fitting corsage, this cannot be true, for the fashionable dames of London are noted the world over for the smallness of their waists. The only way that physical culturists can account for the mannerism is that the women do not realize that they have acquired a motion in walking that throws their arms with each step. A well-known teacher of Delsarte insists that if the mothers of Chicago would but watch for a couple of hours one of the promenades that girls frequent they would surely make an effort to overcome this peculiar habit of their daughters, for it is too ugly a mannerism to permit to grow more than it has.—Chicago Chronicle.

Electric Bitters

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

"By Jove," said Wentworth, "I believe I shall try it. I want to let him know, anyhow, what sort of a man his nephew is. I'll go and see him."

"I would," said the other, turning to his work. And so George Wentworth, putting the cablegram in his pocket, went to see old Mr. Longworth in a frame of mind in which no man should see his fellow-man. He did not wait to be announced, but walked, to the astonishment of the clerk, straight through into Mr. Longworth's room. He found the old man seated at his desk.

"Good day, Mr. Wentworth," said the financier, cordially.

"Good day," replied George, curtly. "I have come to read a cable dispatch to you, or to let you read it." He threw the dispatch down before the old gentleman, who adjusted his spectacles and read it. Then he looked up inquiringly at Wentworth.

"You don't understand it, do you?" said the latter.

"I confess I do not. The Longworth in this telegram does not refer to me, does it?"

"No, it does not refer to you, but it refers to one of your house. Your nephew, William Longworth, is a scoundrel!"

"Ah," said the old man, placing the dispatch on the desk again and removing his glasses. "Have you come to tell me that?"

"Yes, I have. Did you know it before?"

"No, I did not," answered the old gentleman, his color rising, "and I do not know it now. I know you say so, and I think very likely you will be glad to take back what you have said. I will at least give you the opportunity."

"So far from taking it back, Mr. Longworth, I shall prove it. Your nephew formed a partnership with my friend Kenyon and myself to float on the London market a certain Canadian mine."

"My dear sir," broke in the old gentleman, "I have no desire to hear of my nephew's private speculations. I have nothing to do with them. I have nothing to do with your mine. The matter is of no interest whatever to me, and I must decline to hear anything about it. You are, also, if you will excuse my saying so, not in a fit state of temper to talk to any gentleman. If you like to come back here when you are calmer, I shall be very pleased to listen to what you have to say."

"I shall never be calmer on this subject. I have told you that your nephew is a scoundrel. You are pleased to deny the accusation."

"I do not deny it; I merely said I did not know it was the case, and I do not believe it, that is all."

"Very well; the moment I begin to show you proofs that things are as I say—"

"My dear sir," cried the elder man, with some heat, "you are not showing proof. You are merely making assertions, and assertions about a man who is absent—who is not here to defend himself. If you have anything to say against William Longworth, come and say it when he is here, and he shall answer for himself. It is cowardly of you, and ungenerous to me, to make a number of accusations which I am in no wise able to refute."

"Will you listen to what I have to say?"

"No; I will not."

"Then, by God, you shall!" and with that Wentworth strode to the door and turned the key, while the old man rose from his seat and faced him.

"Do you mean to threaten me, sir, in my own office?"

"I mean to say, Mr. Longworth, that I have made a statement which I am going to prove to you. I mean that you shall listen to me, and listen to me now."

"And, I say, if you have anything to charge against my nephew, come and say it when he is here."

"When he is here, Mr. Longworth, it will be too late to say it; at present you can repair the injury he has done. When he returns to England you cannot do so, no matter how much you might wish to make the attempt."

The old man stood irresolute for a moment; then he sat down in his chair again.

"Very well," he said, with a sigh, "I am not so combative as I once was. Go on with your story."

"My story is very short," said Wentworth. "It simply amounts to this: I know your nephew formed a partnership with us in relation to the Canadian mine?"

"I know nothing about it, I tell you" answered Mr. Longworth.

"Very well, you know it now."

"I know you say so,"

"Do you doubt my word?"

"I will tell you more about that when I hear what you have to say. Go on."

"Well, your nephew, pretending to aid us in forming this company, did everything to retard our progress. He engaged offices that took a long time to fit up, and which we had, at last, to take a hand in ourselves. Then he left for a week, leaving no address, and refusing to answer the letters I sent to his office for him. On one pretext or another the forming of the company was delayed, until, at length, when the option by which Mr. Kenyon held the mine had only a month to run, your nephew went to America in company with Mr. Melville, ostensibly to see and report upon the property. After waiting a certain length of time and hearing nothing from him (he had promised to cable us), Kenyon went to America to get a renewal of the option. This cablegram explains his success. He finds, on going there, that your nephew has secured the option of the mine in his own name, and, as Kenyon says, we are cheated. Now, have you any doubt whether your nephew is a scoundrel or not?"

Mr. Longworth mused for a few moments on what the young man had told him.

"If what you say is exactly true, there is no doubt that William has been guilty of a piece of very sharp practice."

"Sharp practice!" cried the other. "You might as well call robbery sharp practice!"

"My dear sir, I have listened to you: now I ask you to listen to me. If, as I say, what you have stated is true, my nephew has done something which I think an honorable man would not do: but as to that I cannot judge until I hear his side of the story. It may put a different complexion on the matter, and I have no doubt it will; but, even granting your version is true in every particular, what have I to do with it? I am not responsible for my nephew's actions. He has entered into a business connection, it seems, with two young men and has outwitted them. That is probably what the world would say about it. Perhaps, as you say, he has been guilty of something worse, and has cheated his partners. But even admitting everything to be true, I do not see how I am responsible in any way."

"Legally, you are not; morally, I think, you are."

"Why?"

"If he were your son—"

"But he is not my son; he is my nephew."

"If your son had committed a theft, would you not do everything in your power to counteract the evil he had done?"

"I might and I might not. Some fathers pay their son's debts, others do not. I cannot say what action I should take in a purely suppositious case."

"Very well, all I have to say is, our option runs out in two or three days. Twenty thousand pounds will secure the mine for us. I want that £20,000 before the option ceases."

"And do you expect me to pay you £20,000 for this?"

"Yes, I do."

Old Mr. Longworth leaned back in his office chair and looked at the young man in amazement.

"To think that you, a man of the city, would come to me, another man of the city, with such an absurd idea in your head, is simply grotesque."

"Then the name of the Longworths is nothing to you—the good name, I mean?"

"The good name of the Longworths, my dear sir, is everything to me; but I think it will be able to take care of itself without any assistance from you."

There was silence for a few moments. Then Wentworth said in a voice of suppressed anguish: "I thought, Mr. Longworth, one of your family was a scoundrel. I now wish to say I believe the epithet covers uncle as well as nephew. You have a chance to repair the mischief one of your family has done. You have answered me with contempt. You have not shown me the slightest indication of wishing to make amends."

He unlocked the door.

"Come, now," said old Mr. Longworth, rising, "that will do, that will do, Mr. Wentworth." Then he pressed an electric bell, and when the clerk appeared, he said: "Show this young gentleman the door, please, and if he ever calls again, do not admit him."

And so George Wentworth, clenching his hands with rage, was shown to the door. He had the rest of the day to ponder on the fact that an angry man seldom accomplishes his purpose.

CHAPTER XXII.

The stormy interview with Wentworth disturbed the usual serenity of Mr. Longworth's temper. He went home earlier than was customary with him that night, and the more he thought over the attack, the more unjustifiable it seemed. He wondered what his nephew had been at, and tried to remember what Wentworth had charged against him. He could not recollect, the angrier portions of the interview having, as it were, blotted the charges from his mind. There remained, however, a bitter resentment against Wentworth. Mr. Longworth searched his conscience to see if he could be in the least to blame, but he found nothing in the recollection of his dealings with the young men to justify him in feeling at all responsible for the disaster that had overtaken them. He read his favorite evening paper with less than his usual interest, for every now and then the episode in his office would crop up in his mind. Finally he said sharply:

"Edith?"

"Yes, father," answered his daughter.

"You remember a person named Wentworth whom you had here the evening William went away?"

"Yes, father."

"Very well. Never invite him to this house again."

"What has he been doing?" asked the young woman, in a rather tremulous voice.

"I desire you never to ask anyone connected with him, that man Kenyon, for instance," continued her father, ignoring her question.

"I thought," she answered, "that Mr. Kenyon was not in this country at present."

"He is not, but he will be back again, I suppose. At any rate I wish to have nothing more to do with those people. You understand that?"

"Yes, father."

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry work will receive your work.

A CHILD'S VIEW.

Her Idea of the Deity and the Credit She Gave.

After all it is the child who takes the really practical view of things. It is the child who is the realist. We may think sometimes that we look at matters in a more prosaic way, but our realism, is idyllic romance compared with the child's when it comes to details.

For instance, we are inclined to give the Deity credit for doing certain things without going into the question of his methods. We say that he made heaven and earth, but we are not realists enough to come right down to the question of his methods. We say that he made heaven and earth, but we are not realists enough to come right down to the question as to how he did it. And that's where we show ourselves inferior to the child, who comes right down to dates and figures when necessary.

"Mary," said a little Woodlawn Park girl to her younger sister last Sunday, "I guess you don't stop to think how good God is to you."

Mary was somewhat staggered by the suggestion at first, but after thinking it over she seemed to come to the conclusion that she really didn't care much about it anyway. But her elder sister wouldn't have it that way.

"You ought to think about it sometimes, Mary," she persisted. "God is awful good to you. He gives you everything you have."

Mary still did not appear to be impressed.

"He makes it all himself, too," continued the elder. "Did you know he gave you your doll?"

Mary shook her head and undertook to enter a protest on the theory that her grandmother had given her the doll, but her sister broke in again.

"Well, he did," she answered positively. "An he gave me my desk too, an he gave us all our playthings, an—an—everything we have in this world."

She paused to note the effect of her words and evidently made up her mind that she had not been practical enough, so she added:

"He made this house for us too, an—an—you just better believe it's mighty hard work carrying bricks up a ladder."—Chicago Post.

An Aid to Progress.

"I guess we'd better tell that errand boy he'll have to give up his habit of whistling," said the business man.

"I shouldn't do that," his partner replied. "The only time he hurries is when he is keeping time to a march."—Washington Star.

INTERNATIONAL BIMETALLISM.

Republican Senators Discuss the Subject—Wolcott Says All Favor the Plan.

Washington, Dec. 15.—Discussing the work of the caucus committee of which he is chairman, Senator Wolcott last evening said: "The republican senate caucus committee to report legislation in furtherance of an international bimetallic conference had a full meeting to-day, and the subject was discussed at some length. The subject was carefully considered with a view to so framing legislation that the incoming president will be at liberty to act immediately upon his inauguration and without waiting for further legislative action. There are thousands of republican in the west and in the great middle states, who believe the financial plank in the St. Louis platform to be a sacred pledge committing the party to an earnest effort to secure international bimetallism. So far as I can observe, the sentiment is practically unanimous among republican senators in favor of an earnest and steadfast effort towards international agreement. I do not anticipate any serious trouble in the way of securing such legislation as has been outlined and which will prepare the way for this effort. So far as I can learn, there is no opposition on the part of either democrats or populists to some such legislation as has been proposed."

MURDERED HIS FATHER.

Shocking Deed of a Boy Believed To Be Religious-Crazed.

South Vineland, N. J., Dec. 15.—Antonio Jeroio, aged 65 years, was brutally murdered by his son, Tony, yesterday. The Jeroio family was composed of old man Jeroio, and four sons, Antonio, Nicholas, Louis and Charles. Three weeks ago Nicholas died and since that time the family has been acting very strangely. About two weeks ago the two younger boys were arrested for disturbing the peace by continually praying around the Catholic churches. Saturday last they brutally attacked their father and drove him from the house. He returned yesterday and was again attacked. He fled across the fields closely pursued by Antonio, who overtook him and hit him over the head with a cordwood stick, felling him to the ground and killing him instantly. The only cause for the crime is that Antonio, being crazed with grief over the loss of his brother, committed the horrible murder as a sacrifice, as he claimed such a sacrifice would restore the lost relative. He admits the killing.

J. Phelps filed personal letters with the president endorsing Mr. Prouty in a cordial manner.

PURELY SOCIAL VISIT

McKinley's Chicago Trip of No Political Significance.

TO BE GONE ONLY A FEW DAYS

He Will Not Accept Invitations to Formal Social Functions or Deliver Speeches — Will Return with Mrs. McKinley.

Canton, O., Dec. 15.—Major McKinley says his visit to Chicago the latter part of this week has no political significance, and that he arranged the proposed trip solely for a few days' rest and to accompany Mrs. McKinley on her return to Canton. He will probably leave on the journey Thursday night, and remain in Chicago until Monday or Tuesday of next week. He says he is not going to Chicago to accept invitations to formal social functions or to make speeches, but to rest quietly among his personal friends and relatives. He will not expect to meet all of his political supporters during the short time he is in Chicago, and feels that his desire for rest and quiet will be respected. Although the visit is said to be a social one, it is possible that a number of important conferences will take place during his stay there. Among Major McKinley's callers last evening was John M. Carson of Washington, who was chief clerk of the house committee on ways and means when the president-elect was chairman. The cabinet forecasters have been idle for the past day or two and no new names appear on their slates.

Mrs. McKinley Still Fatigued.

Chicago, Dec. 15.—Mrs. Wm. McKinley, wife of the president-elect, who is a visitor at the McWilliams home, is gradually recovering from the fatigue of the campaign, but she is not able to go out except for short drives. There have been no callers except members of the family and relatives. It is expected that Maj. McKinley will make a flying trip at the end of the week to take his wife home to Canton.

CHOATE IS A CANDIDATE.

Why He Is Willing To Enter the Race for the New York Senatorship.

New York, Dec. 15.—Hon. Joseph H. Choate announces his candidacy for the United States senate in the following letter, addressed to W. D. Guthrie: "You have handed me a copy of the resolutions adopted by the Union League club of the city of New York, and have asked me to declare whether I would be a candidate for the position of United States senator, in accordance with these resolutions. In view of the present political conditions in this state I have no hesitation in saying that I will be a candidate, and if elected will try to serve the people of the state and the nation to the best of my ability. I am deeply grateful for the compliment paid me by the Union League club, foremost as it has ever been among organizations devoted to the success of the republican party, for whose candidates I have voted from the beginning and whose principles I have always believed. To that party the country must look now as it ever has for national safety and prosperity and the preservation of the constitution. Yours very truly,

"JOSEPH H. CHOATE."

Miss Collins Body Sent Home.

Boston, Dec. 15.—The body of Miss Mary A. Collins, the free thinker lecturer, who was found asphyxiated in a room here Saturday with Samuel P. Putnam, the well known free thinker of Chicago, has been sent to Midway, Ky., her former home. The medical examiner's certificate stated that the deaths of Miss Collins and Mr. Putnam were due to accidental poisoning by gas, and no suspicion of suicide is entertained by competent judges. A memorial service for Miss Collins will be held by the free thinkers in Paine hall one week from next Sunday, the day on which she was to speak there. No autopsy was held in the case.

Will of the Late Thomas Hodgson.

The balance of the estate, consisting of personal property valued at $50,000, is left to his widow, Mrs. Emma Hodgson, whose residence is given as the Westminster hotel, New York city.

Washington, Dec. 15.—The army appropriation bill as reported to the house carries an appropriation of $23,126,344, which is about $766,000 less than the estimates of the secretary of war and $158,000 below the appropriation for the present year.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Cyclists are warned of a large amount of broken glass that lies in the middle of South avenue, just beyond Scott's Press works, waiting to puncture some unwary wheelman's tire.

Some wheelmen and wheelwomen think because December has arrived that it is time to put away their wheels. The real cyclist has been out during the last spell of good weather and enjoying a spin on the good county roads which are still in excellent condition.

Eddie Blauvelt's Dayton triplet came to grief last Sunday afternoon when ridden by three of the Vim Bicycle Club of Newark. In trying to prevent a collision with a dog, the triplet upset and the tree riders were upset to the ground. One was knocked senseless and the others badly bruised by the fall.

The new road book of the New Jersey Division is now in course of preparation and will be ready for distribution early in the spring. It will be far better than the present book. The maps will be all new and carefully prepared. Information that is always sought after by the tourist will be found in it, and altogether it will be a fine work. There is a movement on foot to get out another book which will go to the wheelmen free and will be wanted by all. It will be a book of short tours that can be made in a day. As the matter is not wholly ready yet it would be premature to publish anything more in relation to it, but it is safe to say that every member of the league in New Jersey will get it, and they only, as the work is gotten up for their use. All wheelmen who desire this book may get it, when published, by joining the league.

The great success of the Crescent Wheelmen's minstrels last winter has encouraged the members of the club to again try some similar way to raise funds to decrease their indebtedness. By good management, the race meets of the last year were successful financially and the debt of the club has been cut down to about one half its former size, The generous support the club received from the townspeople last year was very pleasing to the committee and they hoped that the city would do as well by them this winter. The entertainment committee of the club is now laying plans for an entertainment to be given soon and their suggestions will soon be announced to the members of the club. While no details of the proposed entertainment have been given out, it is understood that it will be something on the same lines of the show last year. It will be given by local talent and lots of new features will be introduced. The experience of last year has helped the committee and they promise something well worth attending.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The overshadowing question of the hour in Union county now is: Does the palm for sporting prowess belong to Elizabeth or Plainfield? Plainfield is small compared to Elizabeth, but it has all the confidence and daring of youth and is not a bit modest in saying that it "can knock the spots off the Elizabeth crackerjacks." That has aroused Elizabeth's ire, and Plainfield has been challenged to send along a team that knows anything about any kind of sport.—New York Tribune.

PUNTS AND PASSES.

The Amateur Athlete, a weekly publication devoted to the interests of pure sport, presents its readers in the current issue with a neatly compiled statistical table of the football games played during the season of 1896. It is the most complete and authentic table published thus far this year, and should prove of considerable interest to the football enthusiasts.

Bought a Residential Property.

E. H. Holmes, the coal dealer, has purchased the Mrs. Geo. Vermeule property at 317 West Second street, between Madison and Central avenues, which he will repaint and thoroughly repair so as to have it ready for occupancy early in the spring. A portion of the lot will be used to enlarge his coal yard which his increasing business demands.

At the Traps.

Several of Plainfield's sporting men will go over to Morristown Thursday to attend a shoot at the Morristown Driving Park. There will be a match between Hathaway, of Morristown, and Astfalk, of Elizabeth, at 25 birds for $125 a side. Timmons, of Morristown, and Woodruff, of Elizabeth, will shoot a match of 50 birds for $100 a side.

A PEOPLE OF FEW WORDS

"Let your speech be yea, yea, and nay, nay," says the Good Book, "for whosoever is more than these cometh of evil. The Shakers abide by the spirit of this rule. Their words are few, simple, sincere and direct. They waste no energy in idle talk; they use it in thinking and doing. And whatever they do they do with their might. They are content with nothing short of the essence and principle of the things they investigate. They take pains and are patient. And thus the doors of many strange truths open to them. In this way they discovered what may almost be called the unity of disease. A venerable Shaker says of it: "It is said that one man's meat is another man's poison. That is but half the truth. Any man's meat is any man's poison, under certain conditions. If the grain never got further than the hopper we should never have bread; and if bread never got further than the stomach we should never have strength. When the stomach is torpid, helpless and inflamed the food lies in it and rots. This fermentation produces poisons which may, and often do, disorder every other organ and function of the body. This is indigestion or dyspepsia, with many symptoms and disguises. Cure it and you cure nintenths of your complaints." These words were uttered many years ago. Since then they have found a remedy, now known as the Shaker Digestive Cordial. It is made from medicinal plants cultivated by them. It is a food and digests other foods. Taken while eating it rests the stomach and nourishes the system. The pain and and distresses of dyspepsia disappear before it. It prevents fermentation and soon restores full power to the digestion. It succeeds in the worst cases. It is worthy the name of the people whose name it bears. Any druggist will sell you a trial bottle for ten cents.

The work on the new ice house at the Wilson pond, near Washingtonville, is being pushed as rapidly as possible. The new structure will be three times as large as the old building and will be better equipped for the purpose. The Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company, which is building the ice house, hopes to have it completed by the first of the year ready for the storing of the ice as soon as it is ready for cutting.

Delinquent Tax Sale in Bayonne.

Under the Martin Tax act, the city authorities of Bayonne held today in the Council chamber a sale of realty, the owners of which are delinquent for taxes, assessments and water rents. The property comprises almost 200 parcels. The city authorities hope to realize several hundred thousand dollars from the sale.

Soothing, and not irritating, strengthening, and not weakening, small but effective—such are the qualities of DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

THE OLD WAYBACK GAZETTE.

Excuse me, Mr. Editor. I just dropped in to say
That if you've any papers you are goin to throw away,
I'd feel most mighty gratified if somehow I could get
A fairly recent copy of the old Wayback Gazette.

Of course it ain't a daily, but still it seems to me
A paper printed once a week is just the right idee.
I always find within it all the news I really need,
While city papers dish up stuff that no one wants to read.

I've been here now a fortnight with my daughter Mandy's folks.
Hain't seen a thing worth readin but a lot of chestnut jokes.
I hope it ain't presumin, sir, too much for me to say,
I don't see how you manage so to let news get away.

I've read your paper reg'lar, but it makes me fairly foam
When I never find a cussed word about the folks at home.
I hope that you'll excuse me if I emphasize my views,
But you show most blamed poor judgment in selectin of your news.

Who cares about the sultan of New Jersey, anyway?
I want to know how Wayback went for mayor t'other day.
Who cares for Venezoola or for Cuba or for Spain?
Who cares how many turkeys Abdul Hamid's folks have slain?

We all know that McKinley was elected president,
But what I want to know now is how Wayback township went.
Who cares a continental how they build the cabinet?
Has Biffkins sold his grocery? Is huskin ended yet?

I've read your special telegrams from every foreign spot,
But they don't tell whether Jenkins is a justice now or not.
Why couldn't you just spare a line or two some time to say
How Bill Jones ran for office? Did the office get away?

And why not take sufficient space to add upon the side
That old man Wilkins' brindle cow got well at last or died?
Confound your foreign fixin's! Give me the news, you bet!
And the only paper that prints it is the old Wayback Gazette.

—Frank S. Pixley in Chicago Times-Herald.

Both Were Captured.

At the second battle of Bull Run a Michigan regiment, in making a change of position, came upon a Confederate soldier sitting astride of a Federal, who was lying on his back. Each had a firm hold of the other, and neither could break the hold. As the troops came up the "reb" was taken in, and as the "Yank" rose to his feet he was asked how he had got into such a fix.

"Why, I captured the Johnny," he replied.

"Then how did he come to be on top?"

"That's what makes me so mad," shouted the bluecoat. "He captured me the same time I did him, and then he wouldn't toss up to see who had the bulge. He's no gentleman; no, sir, he ain't."—Florida Sun.

An Appropriate Maxim.

"What kind of weather had we better predict?" inquired the clerk at the weather bureau.

"Much colder," replied his superior promptly.

"But we've been saying that for the last three or four days, and every time we predicted 'much colder' the weather has seemed to get much warmer."

"My boy, never forget that to this business as well as to any other the old motto applies, 'Keeping everlastingly at it brings success.'"—Washington Star.

On the Wedding Trip.

"You can't both ride on a single ticket," said the conductor sharply.

"Oh, I guess we kin," answered Josh with perfect confidence as he threw his arm around his blushing companion. "If you'll look at this here dockament, you'll see that me and Marthy's jest been made one."—Detroit Free Press.

Sticking to the Truth.

"Have you steam heat?" asked the prospective tenant.

And the janitor, who had been through a "revival," could only answer, "We have steam pipes."—Indianapolis Journal.

COMETS AND METEORS.

INTELLIGENTLY EXPLAINED AT THE UNIVERSITY EXTENSION LECTURE.

The Distinguished Features About These Heavenly Bodies Discussed by Prof. Prentiss in an Interesting Manner.

The attendance at the last astronomical lecture in the University Extension course, which was delivered by Prof. Prentiss last night in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, was not as large as usual, owing to the exceedingly bleak and unpleasant weather, but everyone who was present was thoroughly repaid for coming, by the great interest of the lecture and the fine views which illustrated it. "Comets and Meteors" was Prof. Prentiss' subject, an unusually fascinating one, and a fitting close to the course of lectures which have set before the people of Plainfield the most important facts in the most majestic of sciences, astronomy.

The first picture thrown on the screen was one showing the sort of telescope used in the study of comets, those bodies, very different from the stars and planets, which from time to time appear in the heavens, remain visible for some weeks or months, pursue a longer or shorter path, and then vanish in the distance. When one of them is bright enough to be seen by the naked eye, it looks like a star surrounded by a luminous fog, and usually carries with it a streaming tail of hazy light. The majority are faint wisps of light, visible only with the telescope.

Comets obey Newton's law of gravitation. A few, called periodic comets, move in elipses; the greater number, however, move in parabolas, and never return to the solar system after one visit. They consist of the nucleus, a shinning bright point, or star-like body; the coma, or hazy mass surrounding the comet; the tail, a very thin appendage repelled from the sun, and in some bright comets the envelopes or streams of matter exhaled from time to time. The size of a comet is often enormous, while the quantity of matter in it is small. Its approach to the sun is attended by increasing brightness, the formation of a tail, faster motion and the throwing off of successive envelopes, which stream behind entering into the tail. Other irregular and curious phenomena are manifested by many comets, greatly complicating their explanation.

The most remarkable thing about comets which has lately been made known, is the identity of their orbits with the pats of great meteor swarms. Indeed, the most widely accepted explanation of their physical constitution is that they are clouds of meteoric particles closely aggregated.

Mr. Prentiss then turned his attention to meteors, or shooting stars, those brilliant points of light or small bodies that shoot across the sky, sometimes leaving a luminous train behind them. The greater part of them are consumed as they are heated to incandescence by contact with the air, but many of them have been large enough to reach the earth. Some are stones; some masses of pure iron. They are composed of the same substances as the earth, and seem to be of a fiery origin. The pieces weigh from a few grains to 500 pounds or more. Their most distinctive external feature is the black, varnish like crust that covers them, formed by the fusion of the surface during the meteor's swift flight through the air.

Meteors seem to be the dust of space slowly settling on the earth's surface. At particular seasons of the year, in August and November, they appear in great numbers or "showers," and seem to radiate from one point in the heavens, therefore called the "radiant." The periodic recurrence of these showers led to the discovery that they were swarms of meteors disposed in a ring revolving in a fixed orbit about the sun. The November shower was proved to move in a long ellipse with a thirty-three year period. The next great shower will be in November, 1898. Schiaparelli showed that the August shower moved in the orbit of the comet of 1862. The November meteorite showers arise from the earth encountering a swarm of particles following Temple's comet in its orbit, and other swarms are shown to be related to other comets. The comet may be simply a more closely aggregated crowd of these meteors, and in the meteorite we may have "a part of a comet."

Meteorites have acquired great importance in recent years, because Lockyer has advanced the "Meteoritic Hypothesis," by which he proposes to show that all the heavenly bodies are either swarms of meteoric stones or have been formed by their aggregation.

MIND OF THE MISTRESS.

THE SERVANT GIRL QUESTION DISCUSSED BY WOMEN.

The Duty of the Employer Towards Domestic Help One of the Things Considered—Too Much Should Not be Asked

There is no more important question in the households of this country than the relation of mistress and servant, and so the discussion on that subject at the meeting of the Plainfield Branch Alliance of Unitarian and other Liberal Christian Women, held in All Soul's church, yesterday afternoon, proved a very interesting one. All the members had plenty of their own experiences to relate and many valuable ideas were presented.

The subject for discussion was in detail as follows: "Domestic Service. What are the duties of a mistress of a house towards a domestic? Is the relation a purely business one? Questions of recreation, good books, extravagance in dress, improvidence, protection of young girls. How can an employer advise and instruct without undue interference with the liberty of a domestic?" The vice-president, Mrs. E W. Conklin, was in the chair while Mrs. S. R. Krom filled her usual position as secretary.

The meeting opened with the reading of several communications of of interest only to the members of the society. Then the topic was taken up and a general discussion of the subject followed. It was remarked that the mistress should know all about the household duties that the domestic should perform so that she might know just what might be expected from her. The ignorance of many young housekeepers was spoken of and how much might be saved by proper training and practical knowledge. The effect on the servants was very deplorable as they would not have the respect for the housekeeper utterly ignorant of the practical phases of the work that they would for one well acquainted with all the details. One lady suggested that there should be regular training schools from which the help would be turned out thoroughly equipped for the work and several schools of that kind were referred to by the other members.

The subject was then taken up by topics. One member thought that the mistress should recognize that the domestic had not had all the advantages that she had enjoyed and should overlook her little faults and deal with her patiently. One lady asked if the others thought that a servant showed more respect to the mistress that took no interest in them whatever than to the one who listened to all their little troubles. The opinion seemed to be that servants should be treated in a kindly and Christian manner and not as mere machines.

As to whether the relation is a purely business one, the ladies seemed to think that it was not. One told of the way in which the colored people of the south were treated as one of the family in many cases, and the difference here. Various experiences were related.

The question of recreations was discussed, and it was advised that the mistresses should encourage the participating in good recreation. The worst, one lady said, with the Plainfield servants was that, as a general thing, they went out nights much more than they should. The work of Father Smythe and Father Miller among them was particularly well spoken of and the good results commended.

It was a question as to whether the mistress should try to influence her domestic against extravagance in dress and the ladies were of the opinion that a hint by word or example, now and then was a good thing.

The case that recently came up in the local courts between a lady and her domestic over a demand for wages when the domestic was discharged was discussed and all were of the opinion that a mistress should stand up for her rights even though it was rather unpleasant.

Many personal experiences were given, many of which were somewhat humorous, and the meeting proved an interesting one. All present took some part in the discussion and many new ideas were suggested.

A Wreck at White House.

UP THE RHINE AWHEEL.

REV. C. E. HERRING RELATES EXPERIENCES OF A FOREIGN TRIP.

The Remarks Illustrated With Stereopticon Views of Different Scenes Viewed on the Cycling Trip Last Summer.

The large audience that filled the First Presbyterian church last evening were delighted with the illustrated lecture given by the pastor, Rev. C. E. Herring, on the subject, "Up the Rhine on a Wheel."

Last summer Mr. Herring and his friend, Fred Bettman, took a wheeling trip abroad, and they gathered an immense amount of useful knowledge concerning the countries through which they passed, and the first lecture given last night was the outcome of the trip. The views exhibited were probably as fine as any ever produced. They beautifully described Belgium and Switzerland, with all the principal cities and towns. The world renowned Rhine in all its grandeur was shown to the best advantage and everyone present went away with far more knowledge of this beautiful body of water than they had before.

In connection with the principal places shown there was attached many traditions of thrilling nature and these points made the lecture one of great pleasure. One fact prominent above the others, was that the counties visited have some of the finest roads for wheeling to be found anywhere, and in every instance the wagon road runs parallel and adjacent to the railroad.

The last pictures shown by Mr. Herring were in Switzerland and they were exceedingly fine.

An excellent picture of Fred Bettman was shown and the audience gave evidences of their appreciation. The next lecture by Mr. Herring on "Italy" will no doubt receive the hearty commendation that was accorded the one of last evening.

FLYER TOOK HIS LIFE.

A HUNGARIAN FATALLY INJURED WHILE PICKING COAL.

The Accident Occurred at Fisher's Crossing, Near Bound Brook—Died Before He Arrived at the Hospital in This City.

A tragic death occurred last evening near Fisher,s crossing, above Bound Brook, on the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, when a Hungarian was almost instantly killed by the Royal Blue Line train which passes through this city, toward New York, at 9:55 o'clock. As far as can be learned, the aged man was picking coal on the tracks, and he did not hear the approaching flyer, which struck him near the head.

The engineer, knowing that he had struck a man, stopped his train, when it was learned that the Hungarian was horribly mangled. He was picked up and brought to this city on the following way train. It is said the life left the body by the time Grant avenue was reached.

When the train arrived at Plainfield the ambulance was called and the unfortunate man was removed to the hospital, where an examination was made, chiefly for the purpose of giving a burial permit.

Upon further inquiry it was learned that the man's name was Frank Runer, an Italian, aged thirty-eight years, and that he came to this country last March and settled at Bound Brook. The man had been out of work since coming to this country. He leaves a wife, who called at the hospital this morning and identified her husband. The coroner has been notified by the hospital authorities, and he will come to Plainfield today and give permission to have the body buried.

Masonic Officers Elected.

Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., held their annual election of officers in the Babcock building last evening and resulted as follows: Worshipful Master, Stephen Beeching; senior warden, H. O. Hance; junior warden, G. T. Dunham; secretary, Albert Yeager; treasurer, Alex. Titsworth; representative to Masonic Hall Association, Walter H. Freeman; trustees, L. B. Woolston, Dr. L. S. Pocock and Henry Liefke. The attendance of members was unusally large. The installation will take place on the first meeting night in January.

Scaly eruptions on the head, chapped hands and lips, cuts, bruises, scalds, burns are quickly cured by DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It is at present the article most used for piles, and it always cures them. L. W. Randolph, 143 East Front street.

SUBSCRIPTION DANCES.

SOCIAL EVENTS ARRANGED FOR THE WINTER AT THE CASINO.

Three Dances to Be Given That Will Afford Society People a Chance to Enjoy Themselves—The Patronesses.

Announcements were issued yesterday of a series of subscription dances to be given in the Casino during the coming winter. As the old assemblies have been given up it was feared that Plainfield might be without the regular winter dances, but the present announcement settles the matter very pleasantly.

The dances are to be three in number and will be given at the Casino of the Union County Country Club on the evenings of Thursday, Dec. 31st, Monday, Jan. 25th, and Monday, Feb. 22d.

Subscription for the series will be five dollars and may be paid to Clifton Wharton, Jr., 117 Hillside avenue. An answer is requested not later than Dec. 19th.

Sixteen patronesses will lend their names to insure the success of the new dances. The list is an admirable one in every way The following ladies are on the list:

Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman, Mrs. John T. Baker, Mrs Harry V. Borden, Mrs. Edgar T Corlies, Mrs. John B. Dumont, Mrs. Samuel Huntington, Mrs. John Doull Miller, Mrs. Wm. J. Roome, Mrs. William L Saunders, Mrs. Augustus D. Shepard, Mrs. Walter E. Stewart, Mrs. J. Evarts Tracy, Mrs. Evarts Tracy, Mrs. George H. Van Boskerck, Mrs. Orville T. Waring, Mrs. Clifton Wharton Jr.

The committee of gentlemen who have the detail of the affairs in charge is Howard W. Beebe, Harry V. Borden, Howard Huntington, O. G. Waring, Clifton Wharton, Jr. Under this management the dances should prove an undoubted success.

Besides these functions there will be the five dances of the Cotillion club, the dates of which are not yet announced. Taken together with the half kozen or so of private dances during the season these should effectually keep Plainfield from being dull.

A POSTOFFICE ROBBED.

THIEVES BREAK INTO THE STORE OF POSTMASTER STOVER, OAK TREE

Rifled the Stamp and Money Drawer, But Did Not Get Much Cash Booty—Ransacked the Other Part of the Store.

The postoffice and general grocery store of Postmaster Stover at Oak Tree was broken into and robbed some time during last night. The burglars pried open one of the windows in the office and once inside they first rifled the stamp and money drawer. A considerable number of postage stamps and a small amount of change was taken. In the store everything was found in disorder this morning, but aside from cigars and tobacco, nothing of great value was missing.

A pick and an ordinary ax were found this morning firmly embedded in the window casing.

The place is in an isolated locality, and it is thought the intruders may have been tramps. The location is some three miles from here, and the Plainfield police have no jurisdiction in the matter.

Mr. and Mrs. Powell to Speak.

The executive commitee of the American Purity Alliance will meet tomorrow afternoon in the United Charities building, trustees room, seventh floor, 105 East Twenty second street, New York, at which time Aaron M. Powell, president, and Anna Rice Powell, corresponding secretary of the Alliance, who have just returned from Europe, will give some account of the late Conference of the International Federation for the Abolition of State Regulation of Vice, at Berne, Switzerland; and of the recent Conference at Birmingham, to protest against the threatened revival of the Regulation System in England and India.

Fair Now in Full Blast.

There was a much larger attendance at the firemen's fair last night and everybody was given a good time. The sales were good and the dancing was a marked feature. As usual the phonograph was a great attraction.

The committee in charge will try to add new features each night during the rest of the week.

Victor to Dine the Defeated.

As was agreed between Mr. Martine and Mr. Fisk that the victorious candidate for Mayor should dine the defeated one, Mr. Fisk will dine Mr. Martine and a few friends tonight at the Union County Country Club. Of course naught but eloquence will flow on this occasion.

—The residence of R. C. Treadwell, of First place, is being painted.

TO BE A NOTABLE EVENT

BRILLIANT MEN TO BE PRESENT AT THE MAYOR'S DINNER.

The Date Fixed For Tuesday Evening, December 29th—Committee of Prominent Citizens Arranging the Details.

The committee of citizens who are in charge of the complimentary dinner to be given to Mayor Gilbert in honor of the completion of his Mayoralty term of six years, met at the home of Col. Mason W. Tyler, of West Seventh street, last night, and continued the work of arranging the details for this notable event in Plainfield's public life. The following gentlemen were present at the meeting: J. Evarts Tracy, Craig A. Marsh, J F. MacDonald, Wm. F. Arnold, DeWitt C. Ivins, George VanBoskerck, E. T. Barrows, Col. Mason W. Tyler, E. L. Walz, Mayor-elect Charles J. Fisk, E. C. Perkins, A. H. Atterbury, George Beebe, Ernest R. Ackerman and F. W. Runyon. Those of the committee who were unable to be present were J. Wesley Johnson, Rowland Cox and Stephen A. Ginna. It will be seen that there are a number of Democrats as well as Republicans mentioned among these gentlemen, so that the event will be a representative one in every respect.

At the previous preliminary meeting held last week, Col. Tyler was made chairman and Councilman Barrows secretary. They were made permanent officers of the committee, and W. F. Arnold was added as treasurer.

Last week Mayor elect Fisk was appointed to confer with Mayor Gilbert as to whether December 29th would be an agreeable time for the latter to have the dinner take place. Last night Mr. Fisk presented the following letter from Mr. Gilbert:

Mayor's Office.
Plainfield, N. J., December 12.

Hon. C. J. Fisk.

Dear Sir: I am in receipt of your favor of this date extending to me an invitation to meet my friends and fellow citizens at a dinner to be given in my honor on the evening of the 29th inst. Permit me to say that I accept the invitation with a great deal of pleasure and confess with as much modesty as I am the possessor of that I regard the proposed action as a very great honor to me.

Sincerely yours,
A. Gilbert.

After the reading of this letter it was decided to give the dinner in the Casino of the Union County Country Club on Tuesday evening, December 29th. The following sub-committees were appointed to arrange details: Programme, invitations, speakers, etc.: Roland Cox, E. C. Perkins, Craig A. Marsh, Col. Mason W. Tyler; dinner and house arrangements, C. J. Fisk, D. C. Ivins and F. W. Runyon.

That the affair will be one of the most notable gatherings ever held in Plainfield is an assured fact. It is calculated that there will be covers laid for between 150 and 200, and already seventy-eight have signified their intention of attending. Governor Griggs and Vice-President-elect Hobart have been invited. William Brookfield, the noted New York lawyer and Republican leader, who is a close personal friend of Mayor Gilbert, has signified his intention of accepting the invitation that has been extended to him to attend.

RECEIVED AN UNEXPECTED VISIT.

A Genuine Surprise Given to W. F. Hamilton in the Borough.

A surprise party, that was complete in every detail, was tendered to W. F. Hamilton at his home on Verdon avenue, North Plainfield, last evening. It was in commemoration of his birthday. The guests met at the residence of Thomas M. Neely, of Watchung avenue, and then went over to the home of Mr. Hamilton only to find him not "at home." They did not have to wait long, however, for he was soon heard coming up the steps leading to the front door, and the party then sang. "He's a Jolly Good Fellow." They brought gifts, most appropriate, and the evening was spent in dancing and divers other amusements. The guests included: Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Neely, Mr. and Mrs. John Berkhan, Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Kenney, Mr. and Mrs. Wilkins, Mrs. A. E. Kenney, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Baily, Mr. and Mrs. James Harper and Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Carney.

A Wayfarer.

A man giving the name of John Keyser, and his residence near Lake Superior, applied for a night's lodging in the borough last evening at 7 o'clock. The man stated that he was on his way to join relatives living in Massachusetts. Chief Marshal Wilson gave him a place in the lockup and this morning he started off feeling much better for a good night's rest.

The old lady was right when she said the child might die if they waited for the doctor. She saved the little one's life with a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure. She had used it for croup before. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

THE STORM KING HERE.

MAKES HIS SECOND WINTER BOW WITH A THRIFTY LITTLE BLIZZARD.

The Storm Started With Driving Sleet Last Night and Gradually Turned into a Heavy Snow that Drifted into Banks.

Winter, with its frosty train, has arrived and Plainfield now lies buried beneath a clouid of light, drifting, dazzling snow flakes, blown about by the biting north wind that came with the storm.

"Whew!" exclaimed a commuter as he shook the snow off that covered him from head to foot, "It's a regular blizzard." And so it was, for the light snow, blown by the northeaster that raged, piled up big drifts at all points until mountains and valleys were formed at every street corner through which the pedestrian had to struggle as he fought against the fury of the blast. It was dry sandy snow that cut as the high wind dashed it into the faces of those who had to be out in it. It gathered in the window sills and on the fence rails, but the tree trunks and branches were bare as they twisted about and groaned in the gale. The biting north wind was fierce and terrible as it shrieked around the eaves as if longing to get at those within. It seized the falling flakes and whirling them along built them into all sorts of strange looking mounds. Here it swept the street clean, exposing the bare earth below, there it piled the flakes into long drifts and piles that cared not for crossing or sidewalk but stretched along in white dazzling banks, half hidden by the clouds of other flakes that filled in and felt with unvarying steadiness. It was the second snow storm of the season and a record breaker at that.

The sun shone yesterday morning but there was a chill in the air that presaged the coming storm. Gradually the sun was obscured by thin grey clouds that appeared to spring from nowhere. The cold north wind whistled with increasing shrillness, and everybody said it was going to storm. As night came on the wind increased in violence and the mercury began to fall. Those who had to be out in the raw night air hurried along with head bowed to the blast and tightly wrapped in overcoat or cape.

The party that gathered around the blazing hearth was soon to break up, for the big clock in the hall had just struck 10 when something rattled on the window pane. Was it the cat trying to get in to her seat by the fire, or was it hail? Yes, it was the sleet, driven against the glass by the howling, shrieking wind; the storm had begun. Down came the hail into the faces of the pedestrians that were out at that hour, and it cut and stung as it struck them. Soon the sleet turned into a driving snow, covering the ground with a glistening mantle that grew steadily in thickness as the hours flew by.

The early rising milkmen found a small blizzard in progress when they started out, and had to break through drifts that were found on every road. Some were not more than a foot deep, while others were above the hubs of the slow-moving wagons. Then came private carriages and hacks and the smooth whiteness of the streets began to be broken. The commuters and business men plowed through the drifts, and the hitherto deserted station began to assume its usual appearance. Most of the commuters preferred to take refuge in the waiting rooms.

The Central Jersey railroad felt the effects of the storm but traffic was but little delayed. A wreck of several coal cars at White House blocked the road at that point and delayed the trains that came from that direction for several hours. The 8.48 was started from Somerville instead of High Bridge and arrived about a half an hour late. The storm made the clearing away of the wreck much more difficult than it otherwise would have been. The west bound trains were but little delayed although trouble was feared in the Fanwood cut as the snow was blown into it in large quantities.

The storm was expected by the weather bureau which predicted a storm. The barometer fell rapidly last evening and the conditions were about the same as those of the famous blizzard of '86. The mercury stood at 23 degrees above zero but the biting wind made it seem much colder. During the night the wind was very strong, blowing at a rate of 50 miles an hour. The gale decreased with the approach of daylight but still remained very high

At noon the trolley cars began to run on time excepting to Netherwood, and it is expected that the line to the latter place will be opened this afternoon. This morning three cars were

SENATE AND HOUSE

The Important Business Now Engaging Attention of Congress.

RADICAL EFFORTS TO AID CUBANS

Not Thought Probable That Any of the Extreme Measures Will Be Passed —Loud's Postal Bill in the House.

Washington, Dec. 16.—Although much of yesterday's session of the senate was devoted to Cuban affairs, several more speeches on the same subject are expected to-day, but it is not thought probable that any of the more radical resolutions will be passed. Senator Morgan, dem., Ala., occupied more than an hour in the senate in presenting arguments to show why the United States should at once intervene to put an end to the war in Cuba. He declared that the people and the fruits of the island were made the prey of commissioned guerillas who had become robbers, cut throats, assassins and pirates, and he said that if the United States were to intervene at all he would prefer open war and would vote it. At its conclusion the resolution offered by him requesting the president to communicate papers relating to the condition of affairs in Cuba was agreed to. A resolution for an inquiry into the alleged corrupt use of money in the late presidential election was offered by Mr. Allen, pop., Neb., and was, under the rule, referred to the committee on contingent expenses. It provides for a committee of nine senators, with instructions to inquire to what extent money was used in promoting the nominations or in influencing the choice of presidential electors; what contributions were made by the owners of silver mine and gold mines, by bankers, manufacturers, railroad and other corporations and millionaires; and by companies and persons residing abroad. The committee is to act by sub-committees and to sit during the present session and until the first Monday in December, 1897. The pension bill of Nancy G. Allabach, passed and vetoed last session, was taken up and was passed, notwithstanding the president's objections—41 to 11

House of Representatives.

The house rather unexpectedly entered upon the consideration of the bill of Mr. Loud, rep., Cal., to amend the postal law relating to second-class mail matter, and it is still the unfinished business. It was not taken up without opposition, however, several members endeavoring to postpone action, but by decisive votes the house rejected all efforts to delay the proceedings, and Mr. Loud opened the debate. He characterized the bill as the most important measure that would come before congress at this session—one whose disposition might involve the question of an issue of bonds by the new administration. By the shutting out from the mails, as the bill provided, of serial novel publications and "sample copy" newspapers, the government would save from $20,000,000 to $40,000,000 a year and make the postal service not only self-sustaining, but, on the basis of present operations, a source of profit. Most of the session was occupied in considering the senate bill to permit the purchasers of the Atlantic & Pacific railroad to form a new corporation, with the rights, privileges and obligations of the old one. It was amended in several particulars and passed.

Gov. Black's Inauguration.

Albany, Dec. 16.—Secretary of State Palmer has completed the arrangements for the inauguration of Gov. Black, which is to take place in the assembly chamber of the capitol. The Tenth battalion will meet the three separate companies of Troy at the station and will then march to the executive mansion and escort the governor to the capitol. This is all the parading that will be provided for.

Senator Allison's Condition.

Dubuque, Ia., Dec. 16.—Senator Allison is still too sick to be interviewed. His illness has been far more serious than has been generally known. He is not yet able to sit up, except for a short time. The report that he was offered the state secretaryship is denied by his intimate friends. It will be some time before the senator will be able to occupy his seat in the senate.

Franklin Pierce Statue.

Concord, N. H., Dec. 16.—The Franklin Pierce statue commission Gov. Mosiel presiding, voted yesterday afternoon that none of the models submitted are satisfactory and a recess was taken until the last week in January, to permit of the submission of other sketches.

Umbrella Manufacturers Fail.

Philadelphia, Dec. 16.—Abe Hirch & Co., umbrella manufacturers, have been forced to close their doors upon an execution of a judgment note for $45,436.25. One of the attorneys says the liabilities will reach $100,000.

Erie Canal Contract Awarded.

Albany, Dec. 16.—Superintendent of Public Works Aldridge has awarded the contract for rebuilding lock 96, Black river canal, to Dodge & McGregor of Buffalo, at $13,393.

Arkansas' Official Vote.

Little Rock, Ark., Dec. 16.—The official vote of Arkansas at the recent presidential election was as follows Democratic, 110,503; republican, 37,512; national, 1,893; prohibition, 839.

Reappointed to New Jersey's Health Board

Trenton, Dec. 16.—Gov. Griggs has reappointed Dr. Franklin Gaunt of Burlington as a member of the state board of health.

THE CHARTER ELECTIONS.

Result of the Vote in Several of the Cities and Towns in Massachusetts.

Boston, Dec. 16.—A mayor was not voted for this year, so that the chief contests yesterday were sectional fights over members of the common council and school board. Republicans gain one alderman over last year. The common council will stand forty-one democrats, thirty-four republicans against forty-five democrats and thirty republicans this year. John H. Duane, democrat, is elected street commissioner over Benjamin M. Cram, republican, by a vote of 30,228 to 29,819. The city majority for license will be not far from 10,000.

Lynn, Mass., Dec. 16.—In the city election yesterday W. L. Ramsdell was elected mayor by 1,899 votes, the vote being: Ramsdell, dem.-peoples'-party-citizens'-reform, 5,845; Charles H. Baker, rep., 3,946. The city went for license nearly two to one. Republican aldermen were elected.

Chelsea, Mass., Dec. 16.—H. W. Pratt, republican-citizens, was elected mayor over Hadaway, independent, by a vote of 3,519 to 1,214. License vote—No, 2,580; yes, 2,347.

Newburyport, Mass., Dec. 15.—In the city election here Mayor Curtis, independent-citizens, was re-elected without opposition. License vote—Yes, 1,192; no, 1,057.

North Adams, Mass., Dec. 16.—Mayor A. C. Houghton was re-elected yesterday by a considerably increased vote without opposition. License was carried by 292 majority.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 16.—The city election resulted in the success of the ticket headed by Alvin S. Sortwell, the Temple hall and Library hall nominee for mayor, over George A. Perkins, citizens' nomination papers. License was carried.

Bryan Pleased with the News.

Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 16.—The news of the result of the city election at Lynn, Mass., was received with considerable satisfaction by Mr. Bryan last night. In view of the fact that two of the factories in the Massachusetts town cut their wages since election, the change in sentiment, Mr. Bryan thinks, is not remarkable. Upon receipt of the news Mr. Bryan sent the following telegram to the mayor-elect of the famous shoe town: "Accept congratulations. Lynn has at last put its shoe on the right foot."

Sharkey's Denial.

San Francisco, Dec. 16.—Thomas Sharkey testified in his own behalf in Fitzsimmons' suit for possession of that $10,00 check, and his denials of the charges of crookedness were prompt and vigorous. Sharkey denied having any interest whatever in the National Athletic club, or that he had advanced that organization $2,500 or any other sum. The first he saw of Earp was when he saw his name in the papers before he went to Sausalito to see Fitzsimmons. The sailor was positive he had never talked to Lynch or anybody else about Earp. He went into the ring with no thought but to win a fair fight. He still insists that the knock-out blow he received was a foul.

To Retire from Diplomacy.

Paris, Dec. 16.—The Temps says semi-officially that Baron de Courcel, the French ambassador to Great Britain, has definitely decided to abandon diplomacy. He will not, however, retire from his post until the second fortnight in January in order not to impede negotiations now pending between France and Great Britain. Baron de Courcel became well known to Americans in 1893 as one of the arbitrators in the Behring sea seal fisheries dispute.

Peculiar Death of Young Girl.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Dec. 16.—Almira Hudsall, a beautiful girl aged 15 years, died suddenly at her home at Sibley, Pa., yesterday under peculiar circumstances. Monday night a party of Hungarians tried to break into the house where she was alone and reading. She gave a scream for help and the Hungarians were frightened away. During the night she complained of pain in her head and in the morning she died from heart failure.

To Banquet Bryan.

Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 16.—The Traveling Men's Bryan club of Lincoln is arranging a banquet to be tendered to W. J. Bryan on the evening of Dec. 28, previous to his departure on his lecture tour. All the incoming state officers will be present, and many of the leading silverites of the country have been invited.

Charged with Various Crimes.

Boston, Dec. 16.—John F. McKay, a lawyer, has been held in $6,000 for the grand jury. He is charged with the embezzlement of $3,000, the larceny of a $1,000 mortgage note, the uttering of a forged endorsement, and the uttering of a false certification to a deed of the register of deeds of Plymouth county.

Clawson Not To Hang To-day.

Somerville, N. J., Dec. 16.—Elmer Clawson will not be hanged to-day for the murder of Harry Hogetts. Sheriff Wyckoff has received an order from Chancellor McGill to stay the execution for an indefinite period. The case is now pending before the court of errors and appeals.

Colombia's Foreign Debt.

Colon, Dec. 16.—Advices from Bogota are to the effect that the Colombian congress has approved the arrangement entered into by the government with Mr. Passmore, agent of the British bondholders, for the payment of the foreign debt.

Alexander Salvini Dead.

Rome, Dec. 16.—Alexander Salvini author and son of the celebrated Italian tragedian Tomasso Salvini, died in Florence yesterday.

Fewer Banks in Boston.

Boston, Dec. 16.—It is reported that it has been decided that there will be fewer banks in Boston, and that those which go out of business will do so by the usual process of liquidation, with one important possible reservation. It is probable that six or eight banks will be dropped and that one large institution will be established in their stead.

Confirmed by the Senate.

Washington, Dec. 16.—The senate has confirmed the following nominations: Charles C. Nott of New York to be chief justice of the court of claims. United States district judges—Arthur L. Brown, district of Rhode Island; Andrew Kirkpatrick, district of New Jersey. Hiram P. MacIntosh, collector of customs at Newburyport, Mass.

Confronted by Five Wives.

New York, Dec. 16.—Clarence Foster was arraigned yesterday afternoon in the court of general sessions on the charge of bigamy. He pleaded not guilty, but changed his mind, as a jury was about to be empaneled, because he discovered five of his former wives in the courtroom.

$22,000 Fire at Kingston.

Kingston, N. Y., Dec. 16.—A fire which started yesterday afternoon in the dry-goods store of Ronald, Converse & Maynard on Wall street destroyed the building and stock and gutted the building adjoining. The loss is about $22,000.

Fourth-class Postmasters.

Washington, Dec. 16.—The following fourth-class postmasters have just been appointed: Maine—D. E. Jackson, Green Corner. New Hampshire—J. W. Condon, Berlin Mills. Pennsylvania—J. W. Kisecker, Kauffman.

Like a confidential friend we suggest the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, a reliable blood purifier and tonic; it has helped many others and will help you.

would make no impression on the number of the germs of consumption that exist in one affected lung. All germs are little enough, but those which cause consumption are very minute. Cod-liver oil won't kill them. We don't know a remedy which will. The germs float in the air and we can't keep from breathing them into our lungs. Then why don't all of us have consumption? Because a healthy throat, sound lungs, and a strong constitution won't allow the germs to gain a foothold.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, restores and maintains the strength, increases the weight, heals inflamed membranes and prevents serious lung trouble. This is why it is the food-medicine in coughs, colds, loss of flesh, and general debility.

THE POPULAR VOTE

McKinley Received 7,109,480, and a Plurality of 600,799.

TOTAL VOTE CAST, 13,924,633

Palmer and Buckner Received 132,056, and Levering 137,174---Free Silver Prohibitionists, 13,320---Social Labor, 33,942.

New York, Dec. 16.—The canvass of the vote of New York state practically completes the official vote by states and makes it possible for the first time to tabulate the popular vote for president. With the exception of Utah and South Dakota, where the counties have ordered the revision of the completed returns, the final official vote of all states has been collected by the United Associated Presses. In Texas the state canvassing board declared the vote without waiting for the returns from six small counties. These have been estimated and added to the result in that state. The total vote cast was 13,924,633. This was 1,813,124 more than the total vote of 1892. McKinley received 7,109,480 and Bryan 6,508,681, a plurality for McKinley of 600,799. The vote for Bryan and Sewall and that for Bryan and Watson are combined in the total vote given for Bryan. Only twelve states reported a separate vote for Bryan and Watson. His aggregate vote was 46,879. The democratic vote for Palmer and Buckner was 132,056. The prohibition vote for Levering was 127,174. The national or free silver prohibitionists cast 13,320 votes for Bentley. Matchett, the candidate of the socialist labor party, received 33,942.

RICE THE LION OF THE HOUR.

A Grand Ovation Tendered the Bicycle Rider at Wilkesbarre.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Dec. 26.—Joe Rice, the American champion six day bicycle rider, his trainers, Messrs. Campbell and Keller, and his backer, William Rutledge, arrived home over the Lehigh Valley railroad last night at 9 o'clock. A demonstration was tendered the plucky little "brownie" that he will never forget. At the depot a crowd estimated at 8,000 people were packed in a compact mass, and a parade was formed headed by the Ninth regiment band and composed of all the wheel clubs and several societies of this city. The procession marched to the Grand Opera house through streets crowded with people and aglow with fireworks and red fire. Rice was seated in a barouche drawn by four white horses and was tendered a constant ovation. At the Grand Opera house a mass meeting was held which was addressed by the mayor and other prominent citizens. Rice also made a short speech. The city is Rice-crazy and a handsome purse is being raised for the plucky rider which will be tendered to him on Christmas morning. It will not run short of $1,000.

President Woodmansee has called a meeting of this committee at the Ebbitt house, Washington, for Friday of this week to perfect plans for the part to be taken by the league at the inauguration of President-elect McKinley.

Trenton, Dec. 16.—The court of pardons has pardoned Emma Woods, a Newark woman, who shot and killed Lewis Brown, her common-law husband, and was sentenced in November, 1893, to seven years in state prison. There were numerous extenuating circumstances in the case, and many Newark men, including the county officials, sent in a petition for release.

CABINET SITUATION

Believed That No Portfolio Has Yet Been Tendered.

HANNA'S VISIT TO MAJOR M'KINLEY

Acquainted the President-elect with What Had Been Done in Inaugural Arrangements---Other Visitors at Canton.

Canton, O., Dec. 16.—The visit of Chairman Hanna to Canton yesterday afternoon has not in any way changed the cabinet situation so far as the public knows. There is still ample reason to believe that no portfolio has been tendered to a single person. Mr. Hanna has not determined upon his own course. He talked for an hour or more with Mr. McKinley about his trip to the east and acquainted him with what had been done in the way of arranging for the inaugural ceremonies. Mr. Hanna returned to Cleveland late last evening. Charles G. Dawes of Chicago arrived here during the morning and will remain a guest at the McKinley residence until this afternoon. When Major McKinley goes to Chicago the last of the week he expects to spend at least one day with Mr. and Mrs. Dawes at their suburban home at Evanston. Lieut.-Gov. Saxton of New York lunched with Major McKinley and had a conference with him. The situation in New York was discussed. Mr. Sexton said later: "There is no doubt of the election of Mr. Platt to the United States senate. He will have a very large majority of the republican votes in the legislature. I cannot say that New York is united on any one for the cabinet at present. There are a number of men who would make excellent cabinet officers. So far as I know, there is no popular movement in favor of any of them. Mr. Morton is out of the race." Brutus J. Clay discussed Kentucky politics with Major McKinley during the afternoon. "The trouble with Kentucky is that we have too many good republicans who want to go to the senate to succeed Mr. Blackburn," he said. "Gov. Bradley ought to go to the senate because he has, in my opinion, done the most for the party, but what is most important is that some good republican should go. Major McKinley impressed upon me the idea that it would not well do to lose that seat in the senate when we have so good a chance to get it. His notion is that we ought to sink all personal ambitions and animosities for the good of the party and country."

The Kentucky Senatorship.

Louisville, Dec. 16.—Gov. Bradley has given out a signed statement concerning the prospective senatorial vacancy and the manner of filling it. Blackburn's term will expire on March 4. The last legislature failed to elect. Gov. Bradley contends that a special session held before there is a vacancy cannot elect, and, also, that after March 4 he can appoint a senator who will be seated, and cites numerous cases. The Faulkner case, he says, is not a parallel, and he also takes positive issue with Senator Chandler. In the whole interview, however, he drops no hint as to what he will do. If he calls an early special session of the legislature he will surely appoint, but he may not call the session until after March 4.

Sneak Thieves at Newburgh.

Newburgh, N. Y., Dec. 16.—Sneak thieves entered the residence of Archibald Taggart last evening and stole a gold watch, diamonds and other jewelry and money, the whole amounting to about $1,000. Most of the property carried off belonged to Mr. Taggart's daughter, who is the wife of James T. Boothroyd, a New York lawyer. County clerk William Taggart, a son of Archibald, lost a diamond pin. There is no clue to the thieves.

Proposals for Central Pacific Bonds.

The bonds will be sold with all interest accrued and unpaid thereon.

Judge VanSyckel, of the Union Circuit Court, will resume the practice of law on his retirement from the bench. There are probably ten able lawyers in Elizabeth who already believe that they will succeed Judge VanSyckel.—New York Press.

General L. F. Colby, Assistant Attorney-General under President Harrison's administration, is fired with zeal in the Cuban cause of independence and the fighting ability of the Yankee. The General says that if he could only get backing for the expenses of organizing an army of 10,000 American men, he could visit Cuba and end General Weyler's reign of butchery in short order.

Says the Plainfield Press: "Charles J. Baxter, State Superintendent of Public schools, who makes his home in this city, has proven to be the right man in the right place, though a year ago when he was appointed to the position there were some expressions of surprise because of his not having a State reputation." There is a great deal of truth in the statement. Mr. Baxter seems to have given eminent satisfaction to all who have watched his endeavors to promote the interests of the State schools. It was feared that Mr. Poland's place would hardly be filled, but Mr. Baxter has made manifest his abundant qualification to fill the position to the State's advantage.—Elizabeth Journal.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Impersonating a Policeman.

"Mrs. Golightly had her husband arrested the other day."

"On what charge?"

"Impersonating a policeman. He kissed the cook."—Truth.

He Laughed Himself Sick.

I saw the reader smile and smile
By the bookstore shelf
Till long I wished I might enjoy
A pinch of wit myself.
The more I watched the more he laughed
Till tears rolled down his cheeks.
He seemed quite full enough of fun
To last him forty weeks.

When, weak with mirth, he laid the book
Back on the shelf again
And left the place in very truth
The happiest of men,
Being myself a trifle blue,
I paid my last poor dollar
And bore the volume safely home,
Prepared to scream and holler.

I read it through. Alas, no smile
In all that book I found!
At first amazed, then quite enraged,
With oaths my teeth I ground.
"Who was the fool who laughed so hard
When reading that?" This slur
Cast at the bookman. "Oh," said he,
"That was the author, sir!"

CLEVELAND'S BAKING POWDER PURE & SURE

THEATRICAL.

Another large audience attended Music Hall last night to witness the Corse Payton Company present the Galley Slave. It goes without saying that Monday night's success was repeated. Miss Etta Reed as Cicely Blaine portrayed her character in a very artistic and admirable manner. Mr. Payton as Franklin Fritts was just as funny as ever. Tonight will be presented Drifted Apart, when Mr. Payton will be seen in one of his greatest characters

In "Brian Boru," as presented by the Whitney Opera Company, the Broadway Theatre in New York has the greatest artistic and financial success it has enjoyed for several seasons. The 50th performance was celebrated on Monday evening, Nov. 30th, when beautiful silver card receivers were distributed. A fortnight ago the 69th Regiment attended in a body; lately the members of the New York Athletic Club saw the opera, and on the evening of Dec. 1st the Catholic Society, of New York, attended in a body. There has been a succession of crowded houses; the horse show or the opera has not diminished the patronage in the least. In fact, last week's business was larger than any previous week. Early in the spring, after filling engagements in Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago, "Brian Boru" will be seen in London by the Whitney Company The entire cast, scenery and properties will be sent over seas. This will be the first American opera company to visit the British capital.

Big crowds at the Pleasure Palace yesterday applauded mightily when "Teddy" Hale appeared. The winner of the six day race seemed none the worse for his effort, beyond a slight stiffness, which wore off before he had completed his exhibitions of bicycling riding. The star feature of the vaudeville was Richard Harlow, in "Catching an Heiress." Walter Stuart assisted him. The Rossow Brothers gave their athletic and wrestling exhibitions. The Vilona Sisters produced music with violins and piano, and the three Delphinos, French musical clowns, were amusing. Others on the bill were Mrs. Eddie Girard, Marie Heath, Blocksom and Page, Dailey and Hilton, Van and Vera, Lavarnie and Leseur, Dawson and Farlow, dancers; Marion and Pearl Violetta, transformation dancers, and Mabel Guyer, soubrette.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

PARTICULAR MENTION.

DUNELLEN AND NEW MARKET.

Harry Bennett has purchased a trick dog.

Thos. Frescoln, of Prospect avenue, is suffering from an attack of malaria.

Miss Hart has returned from the hospital, where she has been treated for pulmonary troubles.

The Baptist church at New Market has been refitted throughout with new chandeliers and side lamps.

Brakeman Frank Linsman, who is ill, has gone to Port Murray for a few weeks' recreation and rest.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Milliken will be "at home" to their friends on Thursday evening of this week.

Mrs. James Martin, of North avenue, has returned home from a pleasant visit with friends in Plainfield.

J. M. Kraetzer, of San Francisco, Cal., arrived in town yesterday, and is spending a few days at the Park Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. John Tingley, of West Dunellen, have been visiting their daughter, Mrs. William D. Clawson, of South Plainfield.

The borough council will not meet again until the first Monday night in January, unless some unforeseen measures demand earlier attention.

Mrs. A. Kohnoe left yesterday for her home in Long Island City, after a two weeks' visit with Mrs. George Churchhill, of Washington avenue.

Work is well now under way on Louis Titsworth's new frame house on Prospect avenue. The building will be ready for occupancy early in the spring.

S. Z. Dixson, of Greenbrook, who recently purchased the Wright property, near here, left for Denver, Colorada, yesterday, where he expects to remain indefinitely.

John H. Conklin, manager of the Dunellen Brick Works, was able to go out yesterday after a two weeks' confinement to the house, suffering from an aggravated carbuncle on his upper lip.

The finishing touches were put on the borough lockup cells, yesterday, and they are now ready for guests. It is to be hoped, however, that it will be a long time before any of them are occupied.

Real estate agent Eugene Runyon has leased the Goth building, on Main street, to A. Hecht, a merchant tailor from East 77th street, New York. The building will be converted into a wholesale and retail clothing and cloak manufactory.

Quite a delegation of railroad men and their wives and sweethearts from here will go to the railroad men's ball at Somerville, this evening. These entertainments have in former years proved most enjoyable and successful, and the one tonight will be no exception to the rule.

After several unsuccessful attempts to keep the Emorydale station in running order, Carson Johnson, formerly of Plainfield, will take possession today. Should he prosper, Mr. Johnson will put a barber chair in the station, next spring, and cater to the wants of the waiting passengers.

Dunellen is coming to the front in the matter of athletic sports, and while the number of members is comparatively small as yet, it is made up of some good wood. On Thursday night an entertainment is to be given in Lincoln School Hall, and the proceeds will go towards fitting up a gymnasium.

SCOTCH PLAINS

The condition of County Physician Westcott was yesterday reported as much improved.

Fourteen empty hay riggings went through the Plains last night, on the return trip from Newark.

John Collins, the courteous and efficient clerk at Blimm Bros. hotel, is becoming quite a favorite with the patrons of the place.

Until the present storm the roads hereabouts have been in a remarkably fine condition for bicycling, and the bottom for sleighing was never better than at present.

The scholars of the Baptist church Sunday-school, held another rehearsal of their Christmas carols last night and they are now becoming quite proficient in singing them.

The length of life may be increased by lessening its dangers. The majority of people die from lung troubles. These may be averted by promptly using One Minute Cough Cure. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report

Royal Baking Powder
ABSOLUTELY PURE

Mrs. Thomas R. Mead, formerly of this place and late of Spring Valley, New York State, recent advices state, is a patient in St. Luke's Hospital, New York, suffering from an aggravated case of tumor.

A team of horses owned by a farmer living near Feltville ran away down the mountain road yesterday afternoon, and turning Emery's corner kept up their speed until Cole's hill was reached. At this point they were stopped by a passer-by.

One or two of Scotch Plains many game fowls were taken over to Madison, this State, Monday night and entered in a cocking main. Madison, Summit and Murray Hill fowls were in the main, but the Scotch Plains birds got what they wanted after, i. e. first and second money, respectively.

Arrangements are making on the strict "q. t." for a full-fledged cock fight in or near this place within the next fortnight. It would be considered a little premature to give the full facts in the deal just now. Suffice to say birds will be entered from Plainfield, New Market, South Plainfield, Metuchen and New Brunswick.

Thomas Paff is negotiating with a New York party, who, by the way, is a capitalist, for the purchase of six acres of land near the intersection of Mountain and Park avenues. Provided the sale is consummated, which in all probability it will be, Scotch Plains may expect to see in the spring some new cottages erected and some new driveways opened.

WESTFIELD.

The members of the Westfield Club and their friends enjoyed a progressive euchre party in the club house, Monday evening. The room was prettily decorated with flowers and twelve tables were filled by the players. Mrs. J. B. Harrison won the first ladies' prize, a silver hat brush; the second ladies' prize, a glass cream pitcher with silver top, was won by Mrs. A. K. Jones. The first gentleman's prize a handsome pipe was awarded to William Hewett, and the second gentlemen's prize, a silver cigar cutter, to W. R. Brainerd.

Stands at the Head.

Aug. J. Bogel, the leading druggist of Shreveport, La., says: "Dr. King's New Discovery is the only thing that cures my cough, and it is the best seller I have." J. F. Campbell, merchant of Safford, Ariz., writes: "Dr. King's New Discovery is all that is claimed for it; it never fails, and is a sure cure for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I cannot say enough for its merits.'

Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds is not an experiment. It has been tried for a quarter of a century, and to-day stands at the head. It never disappoints. Free trial bottles at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

Electric Bitters

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

THE MISTRESS of the Mine.

or A Woman Intervenes.

By Robert Barr.

[Copyright, 1895, by Robert Barr.]

Mr. Longworth went on with his reading. Edith saw that her father was greatly disturbed, and she much desired to know what the reason was, but knew enough of human nature to believe that, in a very short time, he would relieve her anxiety. He again appeared to be trying to fix his attention on the paper. Then he threw it down and turned toward her.

"Did he say," she spoke at length, "in what way William had done wrong?"

"That man Wentworth," he said, bitterly, "behaved to-day in a most unjustifiable manner to me in my office. It seems that William and he and Kenyon embarked in some mine project. I knew nothing of their doings, and was not even consulted with regard to them. Now it appears William has gone to America and done something Wentworth considers wrong. Wentworth came to me and demanded £20,000—the most preposterous thing ever heard of—said I owed it to clear the good name of Longworth, as if the good name were dependent on him, or any one like him. I turned him out of the office."

Edith did not answer for a few moments, while her father gave expression to his indignation by various ejaculations that need not be here recorded.

"Did he say," she spoke at length, "in what way William had done wrong?"

"I do not remember now just what he said. I know I told him to come again when my nephew was present, and then make his charges against him, if he wanted to do so. Not that I admitted I had anything to do with the matter at all, but I simply refused to listen to charges against an absent man. I paid no attention to them."

"That certainly was reasonable," replied Edith. "What did he say to it?"

"Oh, he abused me, and abused William, and went on at a dreadful rate, until I was obliged to order him out of the office."

"But what did he say about meeting William at your office and making the charges against him then?"

"What did he say? I don't remember. Oh, yes, he said it would be too late then; that they had only a few days to do what business they have to do, and that is why he made the demand for £20,000. It was to repair the harm, whatever the harm was, William had done. I look on it simply as some blackmailing scheme of his, and I am astonished that a man belonging to as good a house as he does should try that game with me. I shall speak to the elder partner about it to-morrow, and if he does not make the young man apologize in the most abject manner, he will be the loser by it, I can tell him that."

"I would think no more about it, father, if I were you. Do not let it trouble you in the least."

"Oh, it doesn't trouble me; but young men nowadays seem to think they can say anything to their elders."

"I mean," she continued, "that I would not go to his partner for a day or two. Wait and see what happens. I have no doubt when he thinks over the matter, he will be thoroughly ashamed of himself."

"Well, I hope so!"

"Then give him the chance of being ashamed of himself, and take no further steps in the matter."

Edith, very shortly afterward, went to her own room, and there, clasping her hands behind her, she walked up and down, thinking, with a very troubled heart, on what she had heard. Her view of the matter was very different from that of her father. She felt certain something wrong had been done by her cousin. For a long time she had distrusted his supposed friendship for the two young men, and now she pictured to herself John Kenyon in the wilds of Canada, helpless and despondent because of the great wrong that had been done him. It was far into the night when she retired, and it was early next morning when she arose. Her father was bright and cheerful at breakfast, and had evidently forgotten all about the unpleasant incident of the day before. A good night's sleep had erased it from his memory. Edith was glad of this, she did not mention the subject. After he had gone to the city the young woman prepared to follow him. She did not take her carriage, but hailed a hansom and gave the driver the number of Wentworth's offices. That young man was evidently somewhat surprised to see her. He had been trying to write to Kenyon some account of his interview with old Mr. Longworth, and, somehow, after he had finished, he thought John Kenyon would not at all approve of his zeal, so had just torn the letter up.

"Take this chair," he said, wheeling an armchair into position. "It is the only comfortable one we have in the room."

"Comfort does not matter," said Miss Longworth; "I came to see you about the mica mine. What has my cousin done?"

"How do you know he has done anything?"

"That does not matter. I know. Tell me as quickly as you can what he has done."

"It is not a very pleasant story to tell," he said, "to a young lady about one of her relatives."

"Never mind that. Tell me."

"Very well, he has done this: He has pretended he was our friend and pretended he was going to aid us in forming this company. He has delayed us by every means in his power until the option has nearly expired. Then he has gone to Canada and secured for himself and a man named Melville the option of the mine when John Kenyon's time is up. That is to say, at twelve o'clock to-morrow, when Kenyon's option expires, your cousin will pay the money and will own the mine; after which, of course, Kenyon and myself will be out of it. I don't mind the loss at all. I would gladly give Kenyon my share; but for John it is a terrible blow. He had counted on the money to pay debts of honor which he owes to his father for his education. He calls them debts of honor; they are debts of honor in the ordinary sense of the word. Therefore, it seems to me a terrible thing that that—" here he paused and did not go on. He saw there were tears in the eyes of the girl to whom he was talking.

"It is brutal," he said, "to tell you all this. You are not to blame for it, and neither is your father, although I spoke to him in a heated manner yesterday."

"When did you say the option expires?"

"At twelve o'clock to-morrow."

"How much money is required to buy the mine?"

"Twenty thousand pounds."

"Can money be sent to Canada by cable?"

"Yes, I think so."

"Aren't you quite sure?"

"No, I am not. It can be sent by telegraph in this country and in America."

"How long will it take you to find out?"

"Only a few moments."

"Very well; where is Mr. Kenyon now?"

"Kenyon is in Ottawa. I had a cablegram from him yesterday."

"Then will you write a cablegram that can be sent away at once asking him to wait at the telegraph office until he gets a further message from you?"

"Yes, I can do that; but what good will it do?"

"Never mind what good it will do; perhaps it will do no good. I am going to try to make it of some good. Meanwhile, remember, if I succeed, John Kenyon must never know the particulars of this transaction."

"He never will; if you say so."

"I say so. Now it is six hours earlier here than it is in Canada, is it not?"

"About that length of time, I think."

"Very well, lose no time in getting the cable message sent to him, and tell him to answer, so that we shall be sure he is at the other end of the wire. Then find out about the cabling of the money. I shall be back here, I think, about the same time you are."

With that she left the office, and, getting into her cab, was driven to her father's place of business.

"Well, my girl," said the old man, shoving his spectacles up on his brow and gazing at her, "what is it now, some new extravagance?"

"Yes, father, some new extravagance." His daughter was evidently excited, and her breath came quickly. She closed the door and took a chair opposite her father.

"Father," she said, "I have been your business man, as you call me now, for a long time."

"Yes, you have. Are you going to strike for an increase in salary?"

"Father," she said, earnestly, not heeding the jocularity of his tone, "this is very serious. I want you to give me some money for myself—to speculate with."

"I will do that very gladly. How much do you want?" The old man turned his chair round and pulled out his check book.

"I want £30,000," she answered.

Mr. Longworth wheeled quickly round on her and looked at her in astonishment. "Thirty thousand what?"

"Thirty thousand pounds, father, and I want it now—and I want it in cash."

"My dear girl," he expostulated, "have you any idea how much £30,000 is? Do you know that £30,000 is a fortune?"

"Yes, I know that."

"Do you know that there is not one in twenty of the richest merchants in London who could, at a moment's notice, produce £30,000 pounds in ready money?"

"Yes; I suppose that is true. Have you not the ready money?"

"Yes; I have the money. I can draw a check for that amount, and it will be honored at once; but I cannot give you so much money without knowing what you are going to do with it."

"And suppose, father, you do not approve of what I am going to do with it?"

"All the more reason, my dear, that I should know."

"Then, father, I suppose you mean that whatever service I have rendered you—whatever comfort I have given you—what I have been to you all my life is not worth £30,000."

"You shouldn't talk like that, daughter. Everything I have is yours, or will be when I die. It is for you I work. It is for you I accumulate money. You will have everything I own the moment I have to lay down my work."

"Father," cried the young girl, standing up before him, "I do not want your money when you die. I do not want you to die, as you very well know; but I do want £30,000 to-day, and now. I want it more than I ever wanted anything else before in my life, or ever shall again. Will you give it to me?"

October 29, 1896.

Mr. Wm. Richardson.—Dear Sir: Your communication to the Board of Freeholders of Union county has been referred to me for reply. While the Board of Freeholders may very much regret the loss of money to you by reason of the contract, as alleged, and while they may sympathize with you in your physical infirmities and other misfortunes, yet they, as the custodians of the county affairs, have no legal right or authority to use the county funds for any such purpose as suggested by your communication, as such an act on their part would not only make them personally liable to replace the same, but would also make them criminally liable for misappropriation of public funds, hence they most respectfully decline to accede to your request. Signed,

Yours respectfully,
W. R. Codington,
County Attorney.

On motion of Freeholder Farrel, received and placed on file.

Freeholder Roll, chairman of the County Road Committee, then stated that he desired to bring before the board a matter relative to the drainage on a certain section of the county road in the township of Summit, and which had been in controversary between the County Road Committee and the township of Summit for some time. The committee had, together with Louis Quien, civil engineer, visited Summit and met some of the officials of that place, who were accompanied by Civil Engineers Bassett and Owen.

After long discussion nothing definite had been accomplished, and the matter was now before the board for its decision.

Mr. Quien then presented the map of the locality in question, and explained the situation to the members of the board. He estimated the cost of draining said locality, less cost of sewer basins, at about $1,242, of which amount he thought the county's share would be $116, or thereabouts.

The following report was then presented:

Elizabeth, N. J., Nov. 5, 1896.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen: The undersigned committee on county road respectfully report that after a thorough investigation in the matter of drainage of part of Morris avenue, from Summit to Chestnut avenue, in the township of Summit, Union county, N. J., that in accordance with a survey made by Louis Quien, civil engineer, there are about thirty four (34) acres of land in this drainage basin, of which number the county road contains about three and two-tenths (3 2 10) acres. Your committee hereby recommend that if the township of Summit wish to drain the basin heretofore mentioned that the said drain be laid in the county road from Elm street to the valley in said road east of Summit avenue, and thence to the low land south of the said county road. The county of Union, N. J., will pay its proportion at the ratio of 3 2-10 to 34 of the cost of said drain and street basins and connections. Respectfully submitted,

J. Martin Roll, Henry Krouse, George W. Littell, James C. Ogden, W. H. Swain, County Road Committee.

Freeholder Roll moved the adoption of the report, and on roll call it was adopted unanimously. It was also ordered that the clerk send a copy of said report to the clerk of Summit township.

NEW BUSINESS—RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder Farrell:

Resolved, That the money appropriated for hospitals be divided as follows: Elizabeth General Hospital, $2,500; Muhlenberg Hospital, Plainfield, $1 500; Alexian Bros. Hospital, Elizabeth, $1,000.

Freeholder Roll moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll call it was unanimously adopted.

By the County Road Committee:

Whereas, It has been reported that the county roads of Union county are being damaged by reason of the improper and negligent manner of replacing the dirt and macadam where the same has been removed for the purpose of making house connection with the sewer lying beneath the surface of said road; therefore be it

Resolved, That all plumbers and other persons before proceeding to open said county road for the purpose of making connection with the sewers, water pipes and gas mains extending through and beneath the surface of the county roads of Union county, shall be required to enter in a bond with approved security in the sum of three hundred dollars to the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county, conditioned for the faithful performance of their work in making said connections, and in replacing the said roads in as good and substantial condition as before; and be it

Resolved, That where said roads are opened from the top for the purpose of making said connections, the same shall be done under the supervision and sanction of the county road inspector. Respectfully submitted,

J. Martin Roll, James C. Ogden, Geo. W. Littell, Henry Krouse, W. H. Swain, County Road Committee.

October 5th, 1896.

SAVE YOUR CHILD.

Mark How Thin, Pale, Nervous and Puny the Little One Is.

How You Can Make It Well and Vigorous. Words of Wisdom by a Well-Known Physician.

A well-known physician writes a very interesting article in regard to what to give children, especially weak, nervous and run-down children, in order to make them strong, vigorous and well.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hallows, says this writer, of Peckham St., Globe Village, Fall River, Mass., thank Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy for restoring the health and probably preserving the life of their little son, who, almost from infancy, was troubled with indigestion and nervous troubles. An attending physician, who was called, advised the parents to give the child such medicine as seemed best fitted to such a condition. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy was recommended.

The taking of a few bottles of Dr. Greene's Nervura effected a cure, and the little one is healthy to-day, enjoying play with the other children. Mr. and Mrs. Hallows say they must give the credit of the cure to Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

EVERETT HALLOWS.

What a change! The sickly child transformed into a happy, hearty, robust little one; and by the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura, the great nerve and blood remedy. This medicine has proved a blessing to thousands of boys and girls throughout the world by giving them sound health and vigorous strength. Children who use it have less sickness, better health, better growth, and longer and more vigorous lives. It is purely vegetable and harmless, and parents should give it to every child who is not in perfect health. The discoverer of this wonderful remedy is the celebrated physician, Dr. Greene, of 35 W. 14th Street, New York City, who allows all who wish to consult him personally or by letter, free of charge.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? DENIAL BY TETUAN

Spanish Foreign Minister Says Maceo Was Not Assassinated.

WAS KILLED IN LOYAL BATTLE

The Alleged Letter of Young Gomez Pointed to as Proof---Assassination Story Said To Have Started in Florida.

Washington, Dec. 16.—The Spanish legation here furnishes the following translation of a cablegram received last night from Madrid signed by the Duke of Tetuan: "Maceo's death took place in loyal fight at Punta Brava and was caused by our soldiers' bullets. This is evidently proved by the letter written by the son of Maximo Gomez, in which he states that he killed himself in order not to abandon the body of his general. The hand writing of the letter has been verified and also every detail of the fight, time and circumstances when Maceo and the son of Gomez were wounded. All these details have been published in Europe by telegrams from both Spanish and foreign correspondents." The legation attaches to the cablegram a note saying that the Spanish legation at Washington "hopes to discover the origin of the report of Maceo's assassination and to trace it to a certain Cuban resident in Jacksonville." The note further says that the presence in Jacksonville of several newspaper correspondents at the time of the reported assassination of Maceo "explains the wide circulation of the slander."

Friends of Cubans' Call.

New York, Dec. 16.—The organization known as the Friends of Cuba has issued the following call: "To the the American Public—Fellow-citizens, we are informed through the columns of the daily press that Spain has added another to the long list of outrages committed by her. Failing in her efforts to suppress the people of Cuba in their struggle for liberty by the ordinary methods employed by civilized nations in warfare, she must needs resort to treachery and bribery to accomplish by trick and stealth what her impotent army and incompetent generals failed to accomplish by arms. We call your attention to the dastardly murder of that gallant leader of the Cuban people, Gen. Maceo, inveigled into amush under the flag of truce and there with his companions foully murdered. That is the latest accomplishment of Spain. Can we, as citizens of the United States, stand by and let this crime pass by unnoticed? Shall we let the ghoulish glee of the Spanish people at their own infamy go unrebuked? Or shall we act in accord with traditions of our country and extend a helping hand to the struggling Cubans? What we should do at once is to petition congress to act. Every citizen should forward his earnest protest against such outrages as have been committed there by Spain, as well as to show congress that the people of this country are ready to uphold them in any action they may take. The American friends of Cuba appeal to you in this matter and urge every citizen to do his duty and join with us in our petition to congress that these atrocities may cease at once."

New York Aldermen Appeal for Cubans.

New York, Dec. 16.—The following petition has been signed by the members of the board of aldermen: "To the congress of the United States—We, the undersigned citizens of the United States, most respectfully petition your honorable body to use your influence to stop the barbarities and inhumanities now being practiced upon the people of Cuba by the monarchy of Spain. The civilized world stands aghast at the atrocities committed there under the guise of law, many of which were committed upon citizens of this country, and therefore call for intervention on its part, and do respectfully pray that the congress of the United States take cognizance of the fact that that war is now being waged in Cuba, that the people thereof may enjoy political freedom, and that the people of Cuba in their efforts for success have the sympathy and best wishes of the people of the United States."

Would Murder Dr. Zertucha.

Havana, Dec. 15.—A complete calm prevails here to-day, following the noisy demonstrations made upon the receipt of the news of the death of Gen. Maceo and upon the return of Capt.-Gen. Weyler from the province of Pinar del Rio. The war news that has been made public is devoid of interest, and the newspapers devote much of their space to glowing descriptions of the demonstrations made by the volunteers of Havana in honor of Gen. Weyler. The friends of the insurgents here dare not express their feelings publicly, but they are bitter in their hatred of the Marquis of Ahumada, who, they declare, planned the plot to assassinate Maceo. Their hatred towards Dr. Zertucha is almost as intense, and an attempt on his life, if the chance should occur, would not be surprising.

Dissatisfaction with Weyler's Conduct.

Madrid, Dec. 16.—The dissatisfaction with Gen. Weyler's conduct of affairs in Cuba grows apace here. The ministerial papers complain about his returning to Havana to receive an undeserved ovation instead of vigorously pursuing the insurgents in the province of Pinar del Rio. Other papers resent Gen. Weyler's alleged suppression of telegrams recording the ovations to Maj. Cirujeda upon the receipt of the news that his command had defeated a largely superior force of rebels and killed their leader, Maceo. This ovation is attributed to jealousy on the part of Gen. Weyler, who, the papers claim, desires to have no one share with him the honor of suppressing the insurrection.

run to Dunellen. The main line, Fourth street and Somerset street lines are now open and cars are following scheduled time.

Probably the letter carriers suffered as bad as any other class of individuals today. The morning collections and deliveries were all behind time, and those who traverse the outlaying districts found locomotion all but impossible.

Ticket agent Edward Nelson was obliged to walk on the street car track on his way to the depot early this morning, and even then, he says, he found the walking most tiresome.

Col. Chas. K. Moore, of Fanwood, started for Plainfield early this morning as usual. He walked through nearly a foot of snow to the trolley terminus at Netherwood, expecting to ride into town on a street car. But no cars could be run on the South avenue branch so the Colonel was obliged to wait for the steam cars.

The 8:48 a. m. train to New York was over forty minutes late this morning. This train comes from Easton and it was the only train up to that time which was very late.

In spite of the fact that the trolley cars ran all night they could not give regular service this morning. Superintendent Adelmann was unable to get his cars as far as Dunellen or Netherwood. Five snow ploughs are in use constantly but as soon as the tracks are cleaned they become blocked again. It took one car considerably over an hour to run from Grant avenue to Front street and Park avenue, which fact was due in a great measure to the weakness of the electric current.

As the snow is so drifted it is impossible to tell how deep it is on a level. The estimated depth this morning at eight o'clock was about six inches and from that time until noon three more inches fell. All along Park avenue and Front street, both east and west, there are large drifts in the gutters, some of them over four feet in depth. The snow from the sidewalks has now been shoveled off them and the sidewalks are banked in many places by walls of snow.

On the outskirts of the city where the wind had full sweep, the roads are almost blocked to wagons which are constantly above their hubs in the drifts. A few of the roads were swept clear by the wind but as the wind died down somewhat in the morning, the snow began to cover them and good sleighing is promised.

There are lots of sleighs out although the sleighing is not of the best on account of the drifted condition of the snow. There promises to be plenty of it unless the storm is followed by a warm wave.

Although Farmer Dunn knew about the storm, the heavy fall of snow was a surprise to most of the Plainfield people Those who are accustomed to ride their wheels to their place of business were rather disappointed when they found the ground covered with its white mantle this morning. A few braved the elements and ventured out on their wheels. One well known business man in the borough started out on his wheel. He found bicycle riding exceedingly difficult under those circumstances and, at last, attacked by a sudden while navigating through the middle of a biz drift, he took a graceful header into a snow bank.

Whitney Frazee, the package expressman, appeared on his wheel but the snow was to much for him and he finally took the easier method of walking on the side walks.

The large and heavy flag-staff on the Schepflin building, West Front street, was broken off this morning by the storm. Fortunately the staff was caught before it fell off the roof.

Plainfield's genial Weather Observer Naegle was on deck despite the heavy snow fall. He told a Press reporter this morning that the snow fall amounted to 11 inches, and that the thermometer registered 22 degrees during the worst of the storm.

At noon the snow ceased and a grand army of men and boys, armed with snow shovels, went forth to remove the white covering from the sidewalks. Street Commissioner Meeker's raid on those who did not clean their walks last year has not been forgotten, and in consequence scores of men are at work and the sidewalks are rapidly appearing.

The storm had its effect on the attendance at the public schools on both sides of the brook. In many of the classes less than half of the usual number of pupils were in attendance, while a large number were absent. The pupils in the primary and grammar classes on this side of the brook were sent home at 12 o'clock, no afternoon session being held. The Plainfield High School was dismissed a little earlier on account of the small number present, only about one-half of that department braving the storm.

Letter carrier William Demarest, of the borough, rode his wheel to work at six o'clock this morning.

There was no snow at High Bridge.

It was still snowing in New York at one o'clock.

ADVERTISED THE SALE.

SEVENTH DAY BAPTIST CHURCH GAVE A NOVEL AFFAIR.

The Entertainment was Given in Connection with the Ladies Annual Sale and the Various Numbers Advertised the Booths.

Many novel advertising schemes have been tried, but the idea of a sale with an entertainment attached to advertise the different booths, was worthy of a master mind. Such was the plan at the sale held by the Ladies' Society for Christian Work of the Seventh day Baptist church, in the parlors of the church last evening, and it proved remarkably successful for the promoters and visitors. Everybody was pleased and the entertainment was just the thing.

The very mention of a sale by this enterprising society of the church brought out the congregation in full force. The parlors were artistically decorated for the occasion with bunting of various colors, while potted plants were placed here and there among the booths. The first thing to catch the eye of the visitors on entering was an immense spider web in one of the alcoves. No sanguinary master presided over it, but instead, Mrs. Charles Dunham invited them to try their luck at unraveling the web. They choose a spool attached to the end of a cord, and then they have to follow the cord through all its twistings and turnings until, at last, the prize on the end is reached, and all is over. The young people find endless amusement in this novel kind of grab bag, and there was a steady demand by "flies" who wished to enter this "spider's" parlor.

Another alcove decked in yellow and white was devoted to candy which was spread out in tempting display. Mrs. William Hubbard and Miss Bessie Titsworth were in charge and were kept busy waiting on the swarms of customers attracted by the sight of the delicious home made candies.

The next was the paper table, presided over by Mrs. Albert Rogers and Miss Lucy Dunham. Many pretty articles were displayed. The decorations were dark green and white.

More yellow and white bunting surrounded the entrance to the booth in which was located the lemonade well, arranged in the same colors. Mrs. William Mosher and Mrs. Myrtie Randolph looked after the many customers.

In the ladies' parlor in the rear was located the restaurant where a most delightful supper was served. Potted plants gave an artistic look to the room with its prettily arranged tables. Another novel idea of the committee appeared in the electric lights, which were so decorated with pink tissue paper as to represent large chrysanthemums. Mrs. George Titsworth and Mrs. John Titsworth looked after the supper which was served by the waitresses, the Misses Spicer, Mabel Mitchell, Elizabeth Allis, Louise Lewis, Anna Wooden and May Rose. A. L. Titsworth occupied the cashier's seat and looked after the financial end of the restaurant.

At about 8:30 o'clock the entertainment began. The paper booth was the first to be advertised by the selection, "The Darling of the Year," given by twelve little girls charmingly arranged in gowns of crepe paper of different colors. Those taking part in it were: Misses Marie Rogers, Ethel Rogers, Bessie Dunham, Ethel Morris, Lizzie Randolph, Beulah Rogers, Eva Rogers, Helen Rogers, Nellie Williams, Florence Scriven, Grace Weeks and Nettie Stillman.

The recitation "The Spider and the Fly" well given by Miss Grace Weeks, called the attention of the audience to the "cobweb" near the entrance.

The advertisement for the restaurant nearly caused a raid on that place, so effective was it. It was a "hoop drill," given by ten girls all dressed in gowns of yellow and white. Each wore a letter on the front and on the back of her gown, on her dainty little cap and on her apron. "Lemonade" was spelled out as the girls faced the audience. "Ice cream" said the caps, while "coffee and cake" suggested the aprons. And when they turned their backs "sandwiches" was to be read. With graceful movements they went through their manœuvres, showing the different signs. It was quite novel and called forth loud and long applause.

Those taking part in it were the Misses Ruth Maxson, Ethel Titsworth, Edith Titsworth, Mildred Green, Kizzie Naegle, Nellie Miller, Grace VanSickel, Louise VanSickel, Bertha Mitchell and Edna Randolph.

Several appropriate recitations to advertise the candy booth followed and the programme ended with a vocal trio by the Misses Helen and Ethel Rogers, and Harold Rogers.

When the programme closed there was a general rush for the booths again, after which everybody fell to talking about the wonderful success of the affair and the great credit due to the committee in charge, of which Mrs. Charles Dunham was chairman.

TO A HAVEN OF LIBERTY

FIRST COMERS ON THE MAYFLOWER LAUDED FOR PERSEVERANCE.

The Weekly Prayer Meeting of the Congregational Church Devoted to a "Forefathers" Ceremony—Mr. Dwight Speaks.

The regular mid-week prayer meeting held at the Congregational church last evening was one of special interest and instruction to all. The meeting was in charge of Rev. M. E. Dwight, of North Plainfield, and the subject was "The Forefathers."

A portion of his remarks were as follows:

"The Forefathers, or first comers to this country, were pious men. In 1607 they attempted to leave England and get away from the persecutions which were almost unbearable. They boarded a Dutch vessel, but the captain was a traitor and he returned them to their persecutors. In the following spring they made another attempt. At this time they got away, but their wives and children were left behind. Later they all met at Holland, where they staid awhile; also in Amsterdam. They settled in a small town where the men learned different trades. The religion was at that time between the Armenians and Calvinists, drove them out and they decided to come to America where they could worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience and while they established an English speaking colony.

"They desired to settle in Virginia and a petition was presented to the proper ones asking for that priviledge.

"These men were bound by a sacred lie and they felt the true brotherly love. In this respect there is no church like the Congregational church. They were conscientious men and the men of New England today are noted for this quality. It is far better to have a great sense of duty than a large heart of generosity.

"Again, these men were industrious, frugal and persevered in well doing. In 1617 the pilgrims arranged to come to America but King James upset their plans and would not give them permission to come.

"A man named Thomas Watson finally said he would send them over if they would work seven years for him afterward. Another stipulation was that they should pay him $50 each. They consented, and on August 15th they sailed in the "Speedwell" and "Mayflower." The former vessel began to leak and they had to return, after which they all boarded one vessel. It took them just sixty-five days to reach this country with 102 souls on board. It was November 21st when they reached our shores and on January 4th they left the ship and began to erect places in which to live. It was extreme cold weather and during the terrible suffering forty-six died. Still they persevered and remained faithful. Their suffering, I consider, was necessary as a trial of patience and faith, and as an object lesson to those who might follow them to this country. They were people of character and strong faith, and their influence will always be a stimulus to the people of this country for they suffered hardships like a good soldier in the service of God." Rev. C. L. Goodrich offered a prayer at the close of Mr. Dwight's remarks, after which a few remarks were spoken on the same subject by Mr. Goodrich and Mr. LaBoyteaux. The benediction was pronounced by the pastor, Mr. Goodrich.

A short business meeting was held to grant a letter of dismissal to a member of the church who is about to move away.

Yale Club to Dine Tonight.

The annual dinner of the Plainfield Yale Club will be held in the Casino this evening. After the dinner there will be the usual speech making. The club's guests will be Thomas Thacher, president of the New York Yale Alumi Association, Prof. Arthur Halley, of Yale University, E. C. Perkins, of Harvard, Leonidas Dennis, of Princeton University, and Dickinson W. Richards, president of the Essex County Yale Club. J. R. Joy will speak for the Plainfield club.

A Notable Visitor.

Dr. James N. Green, principal of the State Normal and Model School at Trenton, was a guest of Samuel S. McCutchen last night and this morning he visited the North Plainfield Public School and inspected the methods of instruction in vogue there. He was full of praise for the practical and efficient work.

Stops Sidewalk Improvement.

The late snow storm has put an end, for a time at least, to the curbing and sidewalk laying on West Front street near Grant avenue, and it is not likely that the work will be taken up again before spring and the frost is out of ground.

WILL BE A GREAT GAME

BACHELORS AND BENEDICTS OF THE PARK CLUB TO BOWL.

The First of a Series of Games to be Rolled Saturday Night, and Great Things are to be Expected by the Friends of Both Sides

No battles were harder fought, no contests were ever more exciting than the annual meetings of the bowling teams of the Bachelors and the Benedicts of the Park Club. They have been made a yearly feature of the club and are looked forward to with much pleasure by all. This year these teams will again meet and a lively fight is expected. Last year the married men carried away the palm of victory by winning two out of three games, and their single opponents had to retire to their bachelor apartments to mourn in secret. On Saturday evening the first game of the series will be rolled, and the others will be rolled on the succeeding Saturday evenings until one team secures the necessary victories. Everybody comes to the games and the rooting is something wonderful to hear and behold. The staid business men, who usually are quiet, wake up for this occasion and frisk about like young lambs and do all manner of remarkable things.

The famous little mascot of the Bachelors, a paper machie mask, it is said, is still being preserved by some of the leaders of that faction and will make its appearance on Saturday night ready to be scrapped for as of old. There will be changes in the teams, for one of the last year's Bachelor team has deserted to the opposite side during the year and will probably roll against his old friends. Another great loss to the Bachelor team will be that of "Mamie" Leonard who will not be here unless he is especially imported for the occasion.

The married men will be generalled by that veteran of bowlers, "Doc" Thiers, who, it is expected, will confound the opposing team with his sagacious moves. George C. Worth, captain of the regular team, will hold that same office on the Bachelor team and the hand that has directed the one to the top of the Journal League is likely to lead the other on to victory. And with him will be his right hand man, Peter B. Matthews.

PAYING FOR A VICTORY.

MAYOR-ELECT FISK DINES JAMES E. MARTINE, HIS OPPONENT.

Though Political Opponenents They Are Warm Personal Friends and the Affair Was Full of Jest and Sociability

It is not often that the victor dines the defeated in the case of a candidacy for public office, but that is what was done last night when Mayor-elect Charles J. Fisk tendered a dinner to James E. Martine, the defeated Democratic candidate for Mayor, in the Union County Club. The affair was the outcome of a bandage of words in which the two Mayoralty candidates participated in during the progress of the recent campaign, and was very informal. Besides Mr. Fisk and Mr. Martine, there were a few other well-known local statesmen present, Republicans and Democrats both, and it was a jolly event taken altogether.

Though Mr. Fisk and Mr. Martine are political opponents loaded to the tip of the tongue with arguments against their respective ideas of public government, they are warm personal friends and last night the hearts of both were reached through the throat and stomach and pleasantry reigned supreme. Jests were interspersed all through the courses, but the privacy of the affair precludes the relating of any of the incidents.

The dinner was served by Max Wertz, and he fairly outdid himself in the lavish and novel menu that he provided for the occasion.

A Letter Box Displaced.

Owing to the Plainfield Electric Light Company removing one of their old poles at the corner of Washington avenue and Grove street, and substituting a new one, the letter-box which was attached to the old pole was taken back to the post office, and since then has not been replaced. The residents of that neighborhood miss the box very much and hope that Postmaster Hetfield will cause the box to be put on the new pole.

Sciatic Rheumatism Cured.

L. Wagner, wholesale druggist, Richmond Va., says; "I had a fearful attack of Sciatic Rheumatism, was laid up almost two months; was fortunate enough to get Mystic Cure for Rheumatism. This cured me after doctor's prescriptions had failed to have any effect. I have also heard of fine results from others who have used it." Sold by T. S. Armstrong, druggist, corner Park and North avenues, Plainfield.

THE PRIZES AT TRENTON

LATEST LIST OF CANDIDATES AND THEIR CHANCES.

Candidacy of ex-Speaker Derousse Given a New Turn to the Gossip—Parker, of Passaic, Wants to be Assembly Clerk.

The candidacy of ex-Speaker Derousse for the place of Republican leader of the Assembly this winter gave a new turn to the gossip in the state-house corridors respecting the positions at the disposal of the Legislature. Assemblyman Lloyd, who is from Mr. Derousse's county, (Camden,) has been a candidate for the place, but not in an aggressive sense. He would like to have the honor, and says so, but Mr. Derousse is against him and this practically narrows the fight down to Derousse and Gledhill, of Passaic.

Ex-Assemblyman Parker, also of Passaic, is seeking re-election as clerk of the House, and he and Mr. Gledhill are opposing each other. It now looks like a combination of Derousse and Parker for leader and clerk against Gledhill. Ex-Assemblyman Duncan, of Essex county, and Mr. Nutzhorn are both candidates for clerk. Major Lentz was at Trenton looking after Duncan's interests. There is talk of both Duncan and Nutzhorn being satisfied with minor places.

There is a disposition among some of last year's members not to re elect reading Clerk Lyon's because his enunciation is not particularly adapted to making him acceptable in the position. The Morris members are working hard for Lyons, however, and he may not be turned down after all. Assemblyman Roll has a candidate in Hulskamper for Journal Clerk. If Parker is re-elected clerk, Duncan and Nutzhorn are likely to be considered in connection with the positions of reading clerk and journal clerk.

Andrew Briedenbach has four and six members behind him for re-election as Sergeant-at-Arms of the House, and his chances of getting his old place seem brighter than they were. George Sauple, who had the endorsement of the Essex members for Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms, is willing to take a doorkeepership, and this is what he will probably get if Briedenback is re elected.

WEDDED NEAR TO NOON

HOME OF MR. AND MRS. A. V. D. HONEYMAN SCENE OF A WEDDING.

John Vosseller Reger, of Meriden, Conn., Takes Miss Margaret G. Trefry as His Wife—Rev. Dr. Yerkes Officiated.

A quiet wedding took place just before noon today at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman, at 83 Duer street, North Plainfield. The groom was John Vosseller Reger, city editor of the Daily Journal, of Meriden, Conn., and the bride Miss Margaret Goodwin Trefry, daughter of the late Capt. W. E. Trefry, of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia. The wedding march was played by Miss Maud L. Honeyman, and the bridal couple were preceded, as they entered the parlors, by the two little daughters of the groom, Misses Gretchen and Bessie Reger. Rev. Dr. Yerkes officiated. The bride wore a traveling gown of green cloth, trimmed with velvet and stone marten. The bride and groom left this afternoon for an extended bridal tour to the Eastern States, including Nova Scotia, and will make their future home in Meriden.

THREW SNOW ON THE TRACK.

Borough Merchants Refuse to Have Snow Banked in Front of Their Place.

Zeller & White, the bottlers, corner Somerset and Chatham streets, had a gang of men shoveling the snow from the front of their property last evening, on to the trolley tracks. They claimed that the trolley people had no authority to bank it up in front of their place of business, and as stated above they threw it back on the track. A crowd of lookers-on gathered, expecting to see trouble when a car came along, but fortunately the cars were not stopped by the snow, and a clash of opposing forces was averted.

A New Meat Market.

A strictly first-class meat market will be opened by J. M. Smalley, at 405 Park, avenue near Fourth street, Saturday morning. Mr. Smalley proposes to give the people of Plainfield and vicinity an opportunity to buy the very best quality of meats at the lowest possible price for cash. This new market will be a model one in every respect, and whatever is purchased at this place can be relied upon as the best. In another part of the paper will be found Mr. Smalley's advertisement which gives a list of prices of various meats.

—There will be election of officers at the meeting of Noah Dove Encampment, I. O. O. F., this evening.

FAMILY FULL OF MISERY.

ERRATIC WAY OF THE MOTHER THE CAUSE OF THE TROUBLE.

Husband Left Wife and Children on Account of the Incompatibility of the Former—Their Condition Truly Pitiable.

It was a pitiable story that James Wilkison told in Justice Nash's office, Tuesday, and which has now been turned over to the Overseer of the Poor. It was another tale of the misery that exists in this city of which the good people here know nothing of.

It was not Wilkison that was in trouble, but his tenants, and although they could not pay the rent, he did not have the heart to turn them out in the cold.

Last week Wilkison appeared before Justice Nash and had notice served on his tenant, Mrs. Snyder, at 627 West Third street, telling her that she and her children must pay the rent for the three rooms on the second floor that they occupy or else be ejected. Saturday afternoon, a woman hurriedly entered the Justice's office and began to talk in a strange manner. Her words followed each other so fast that he was unable to understand what she was talking about and then, before he had a chance to question her, she was gone. It was Mrs. Snyder, someone explained.

Tuesday, Wilkison appeared before the Justice and said that he did not feel that he could turn the woman and her two little children into the street. Then he told a strange and pitiful story.

According to him, the Snyder family is in trouble. The father and husband will not live with the rest, as he declares that his wife is insane. Her actions, so her landlord said, are very strange. One child is ill and both of them but half-clothed, they are mere babies and thin and pale for the lack of substantial food. The other day, says the landlord, a kindly neighbor brought in some food to the wife and children only to have them thrown almost in her face and the door closed with a bang.

Mr. Wilkison is not fond of trouble and dislikes a quarrel greatly, but at last he picked up courage to visit his tenant. His reception, as described by him, would indicate that something was the matter. He occupies a room on the same floor with Mrs. Snyder, while another family rent the lower floor. He went into the rooms of Mrs. Snyder and says that he was received by his tenant with a broomstick, which she brought down with considerable force on his cranium, smashing his hat down over his eyes. He waited no longer for further developments, but fled. There was a policeman, he says, near by and he summoned the officer and wanted his tenant arrested, but as she remained in her room the officer could not make the arrest.

Mr. Wilkison walked almost to South Plainfield to see Mr. Snyder, who is employed on Blackford's place. He was formerly employed by the city in assisting McFadden to keep the streets in the business section of the town clean. Snyder, Mr. Wilkison continued, refused to do anything for them and so the landlord returned. He had been to City Physician Simpson, he told his listeners, and asked him to examine his tenant as regards her sanity, and the doctor had agreed to do so.

Mr. Wilkison was advised to lay the matter before the Overseer of the Poor and it seemed probable that he could take some steps to put the family in some place where they would be well cared for and the mother's condition examined.

Mr. Wilkison and John Motley, next door neighbors of Mrs. Snyder, appeared before Judge DeMeza yesterday, and wanted to take steps to compel the husband to take care of his wife, who, they said, was starving. Her only substinence was bread furnished by a generous grocer of the neighborhood. The matter will be placed in the hands of Overseer of the Poor Marx who will take proper steps to see that provision is made for the woman.

The Chimney Burned Out.

About 8 o'clock this morning an alarm of fire was sent in from Box 152, corner of Grove street and Linden avenue, by Herman Deike, the Grove street baker. The fire proved to be in the chimney of the house occupied by J. D. Moran, a mason, living at 210 Grove street. The firemen went out with the hose wagon, but the fire was extinguished before the firemen arrived. The damage was very slight.

The old lady was right when she said the child might die if they waited for the doctor. She saved the little one's life with a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure. She had used it for croup before. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

George Saums, of East Second street, is detained at home by illness.

DECKED OUT IN WHITE.

THE EARTH'S SURFACE NOW COVERED WITH A GLISTENING MANTLE.

There is Indications That For the First Time in Many Years We May Have a White Christmas—Must Clean Walks.

It has been many years since Christmas Day found Plainfield all decked in white to greet her, but this year promises to see a "White Christmas," as it is called. Yesterday's storm has disappeared and the light glistening covering of snow sparkles in the bright sunlight at the homes of rich and poor alike. The first big snow storm has transformed Plainfield into a veritable fairyland. The temperature is just right and the air is sharp and bracing.

Although the snow stopped falling yesterday at noon, the clouds did not break away until late in the evening when the moon appeared and cast her soft radiance on the spotless blanket that covered the earth.

With the end of the storm the wind died out and the cold was not so piercing, although the temperature did not change. The barometer began to rise yesterday afternoon and resumed its normal height. This morning the mercury had fallen to 22 degrees above zero. There was no wind to ever, and the cold was easily bearable.

Although the snow was very pretty, it made lots of trouble. Soon after the storm stopped, two policemen began to make the rounds of the city notifying residents that their sidewalks must be cleaned within four hours after the end of the storm. While the majority of the people have the snow removed without being notified, there are always some that neglect to do so. Again this morning the policemen were completing their rounds. It will be remembered that by the city ordinanee, if the sidewalk is not cleaned off before twenty-four hours after the four hours has expired the Street Commissioner has the right to have the sidewalk cleaned off and the owner of the property compelled to pay the bill with his taxes. The Street Commissioner also has the right to bring the offenders before the City Judge and have them fined. That is exactly what Street Commissioner Meeker did last year and what he proposes to do this year if the property owners do not remove the snow in the prescribed time.

Although Mr. Meeker cannot begin on his raid quite yet, he is still very busy. The big heaps of snow along the business thoroughfares are considerably in the way and Mr. Meeker has a gang at work removing the snow as fast as possible. At present they are working on West Front street.

The driveway leading to the First Baptist church sheds, on West Front street, has been converted into a minature toboggan slide. The youth gather there in large numbers and enjoy the exhilarating sport of coasting.

Many of the sidewalks right in the heart of town are yet covered with snow and ice and no effort seems to have been made by the property owners to clean either the walks or gutters.

Walking about town last evening was both difficult and dangerous. Several falls were notice and there were as many springs—to the feet.

There is some excellent sleighing to be found today, especially on the roads running north and south. On the roads running east and west the snow has drifted off a greater part of them leaving bare spots all along the road. Park avenue is good, but beyond Metuchen, on the New Brunswick road, the sleighing is poor. The county road to Elizabeth is not particularly good on account of the numerous bare spots. The road to Springfield is much better and many sleighs visited that road last evening. Within the city limits, the sleighing is very good and the jingle of sleigh bells is a frequent sound.

With the snow comes the delight of the young people, the straw ride, and several parties are planning to go out this evening. Aubrey Hull, John Hull and Fred Bonney, of the borough, are arranging a party for this evening among their friends and there are several other parties planning to go out for the evening. The fate of the snow is so uncertain that everybody is anxious to enjoy a sleigh ride before it disappears.

Lawyer Swackhamer is in Philadelphia on business.

Absolutely pure, perfectly harmless, and invariably reliable are the qualities of One Minute Cough Cure. It never fails in colds, croup and lung troubles. Children like it because it is pleasant to take and it helps them. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

THE DINGLEY BILL

No Hope for Its Passage by the Present Congress.

INTERESTING DEBATE IN THE SENATE

Mr. Allen's Resolution To Take Up the Measure Causes Some Very Pointed Allusions to Fraud in the Recent Election.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Because no speeches were made nor action taken on the Cuban resolutions in the senate yesterday is no reason for believing that the subject has been dropped. On the contrary the matter may come up any day, and it is likely that there will be some discussion on one or more of the various resolutions before the senate adjourns to-night. A very interesting and important discussion upon Mr. Allen's, pop., Neb., resolution to take up the Dingley bill for consideration in the senate was started by Mr. Vest, and was participated in by Senators Allen, Chandler, Gallinger, Frye, Hale, Aldrich, Sherman, Teller and Gorman. In the course of the debate more than one allusion was made to frauds and corruption at the late presidental election, and Mr. Teller remarked pointedly that he was not certain that his candidate (Mr. Bryan) had been defeated. Mr. Allen questioned whether any difference could be pointed out between political principles of the republican party and of Mr. Cleveland, and said jocularly that the president and the republicans would have to be tagged in order to enable a person to distinguish the one from the other. The upshot of the debate was a complete acquiesence on both sides of the chamber in the fact that the Dingley bill could not possibly be passed at the present session and that the enactment of a new tariff bill would have to go over to a new session of congress, to be convened as early as possible.

House of Representatives.

The house devoted nearly all of a four-hour session to the army appropriation bill in committee of the whole. A great portion of the time was spent in discussing a ruling of the chairman, that an amendment to cut off the Hot Springs hospital, as recommended by the surgeon-general and the secretary of war, was out of order, being a change of existing law. The discussion was quite interesting, several members participating. The question was important, as affecting the power of the house to limit, restrict or define the expenditure of money carried by an appropriation bill On one point the committee sustained the chairman, but later refused to sustain him, and the amendment cutting out the hospital was agreed to. In the house Mr. Little made the point of no quorum on the vote adoping the amendment, and none appeared on the count of the speaker. Mr. Bailey asked unanimous consent for consideration of his resolution directing the committee on naval affairs to investigate the construction of the battleship Texas, but it was referred to the committee without action.

Crew Rescued by Life Savers.

Nantasket Beach, Mass., Dec. 17.—The three-masted schooner Ulrica, Capt. James Patterson, from Hillsboro, N. B., for Hoboken, N. J., with plaster, came ashore during yesterday's storm on Nantasket beach near Kenbrem and is a total loss. The Hull life-saving crew, under command of Capt. Joshua James, rescued the captain, first mate and crew of five men, after struggling heroically for nearly two hours. The second mate was swept overboard some time during the night by the heavy seas and drowned. The men were all badly frostbitten and suffered greatly from their hardships. Soon after the men were taken off the schooner broke in two.

Mrs. Curris Undoubtedly Insane.

Buffalo, Dec. 17.—Little is known here concerning Mrs. H. H. D. Curris, the wealthy Pittsburg woman, who was taken into custody here yesterday on the charge of insanity, but she is without doubt mentally unsound. She engaged a hack and drove to the Sisters' hospital on Main street and demanded to see her mother, who, she said, was an inmate of the institution. There was no such person there, and the physician informed the driver that the woman was insane and advised him to take her to the police station at once. She had nearly $100 in money with her. She is about 30 years old.

Col. Fellows' Successor.

Albany, Dec. 17.—Gov. Morton last evening appointed William M. K. Olcott as district-attorney of New York county in the place made vacant by the death of Col. John R. Fellows. The salaried positions attached to the office aggregate $178,000. Mr. Olcott is a republican and will hold office under this appointment until Jan. 1, 1893, when his successor, to be chosen at the general election next fall, will be installed.

Princeton Football Team Finances.

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 17.—The following statement regarding the financial status of the Princeton football team, covering the period from Sept. 1 to Dec. 12, has been given out for publication by James Elliot, general athletic treasurer: Receipts from games, etc., $31,757.74; expenses, to guarantees, traveling, training, athletic supplies, etc., $17,048.02; balance, $14,709.72.

M'KINLEY IN CHICAGO

The President-elect's Short Respite from Officeseekers.

IN NEED OF REST AND RECREATION

Will Probably Remain in the Windy City Until Wednesday of Next Week — Denies Himself to All Callers.

Chicago, Dec. 17. — President-elect McKinley arrived here this morning in a private car placed at his disposal by the Pennsylvania railroad. He was accompanied by Charles G. Dawes of this city; Capt. H. O. Heistand, his acting confidential secretary, and several newspaper correspondents. The president-elect went at once to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Lafayette McWilliams, where his wife is staying. He has denied himself to all callers so far. Major McKinley expects to remain in Chicago for a week at least. His reason for leaving Canton was to join his wife and in a measure to gain much needed rest, a change of scene and to escape the throng of unimportant visitors who call to say they were "original McKinley men" and to intimate that they were willing to assist the government by accepting some office. This is the second time since his nomination that Major McKinley has left Canton. The other occasion was his visit to Cleveland at the time of the centennial celebration in that city July last. Major McKinley's health is sound, but he feels the need of rest and recreation. His toil for six months has been incessant, and judged by ordinary standards, excessive. The cabinet will be discussed some in Chicago. Politicians of importance will find the president-elect and talk about big men and measures. "The Wisconsin situation," said John Hicks of Oshkosh, Wis., ex-minister, to Peru, who was at Canton to see Major McKinley just before he started for Chicago, "will, of course, be talked about while Major McKinley is in Chicago. Wisconsin is not remote and some of our people will want to say a word about Mr. Payne or ex-Gov. Hoard, who are the cabinet possibilities in Wisconsin. Mr. Payne is the choice of a large majority of the men who are the active participants in politics, and ex-Gov. Hoard is very strong with the farmers. They would like to see him made secretary of agriculture."

APPLICATIONS FOR OFFICE.

3,000 Ohio Citizens Would Like To Serve Under Major McKinley.

Canton, O., Dec. 17.—It is now known that Senator John Sherman will not be a member of the cabinet. His feeling is that he can be of more service to Major McKinley's administration and to the republican party by remaining in the senate, and he will be a candidate for re-election. Mark Hanna states that more than 3,000 citizens of Ohio have filed applications for appointment to federal office under the McKinley administration. It is thought the number will reach 12,000.

Invitation for Major McKinley.

Chicago, Dec. 17.—The Press club of Chicago, under whose auspices the Carlisle, Pa., Indian school footbal team will play the University of Wisconsin eleven at the Coliseum by electric light Saturday night, has sent an invitation to Major McKinley to be the club's guest on that occasion.

The Montgomery Gibbs Reward.

Buffalo, Dec. 17.—In the supreme court Justice Lambert has handed down a decision disposing of the contest between the Cleveland detectives for the reward made for the capture of Clarence and Sadie Robinson, the slayers of Montgomery Gibbs. The decision holds that Deputy Sheriff Abrams is entitled to one-fifth of the city's reward, or $100, and that Detective Doran is entitled to the remaining four-fifths, or $400. The reward of $1,000 offered by relatives of Gibbs will be apportioned according to this decision, Doran receiving $800 and Abrams $200.

Ocean Steamers Overdue.

New York, Dec. 17.—There are now nineteen steamers overdue here from European ports. This is an unusually large list, and it contains the names of nine steamers that are from two to six days overdue, the cause, of course, being attributed to the rough weather at sea, as reported by the steameas Lucania and St. Louis, which came in very late, and also by the British steamer Asloun, which arrived, twenty days from Gibraltar, being about five days behind time.

Cardinal Gibbons' New Book.

Baltimore, Dec. 17.—Cardinal Gibbons' new book, "The Ambassador of Christ" is out. Many subjects are touched upon. One of the chapters deals with the value of discipline in the various relations of life, and especially in religious institutions. His eminence also recommends the cultivation of patriotic sentiments in American youth.

NICARAGUA CANAL BILL.

A Numerously Signed Petition for Early Action on the Measure.

Washington, Dec. 17.—The friends of the Nicaragua canal bill propose that it shall not slumber indefinitely upon the house calendar. A petition addressed to the speaker asking that a day be set aside for its consideration is in circulation by Mr. Doolittle of Washington, and has already received the signatures of more than 200 republican and fifty democratic members of the house. Mr. Mahon of Pennsylvania, who is a member of the sub-committee that drafted the measure, predicts that if it is called up it will have a practically unanimous vote in its favor. The argument used by the supporters of the measure is that it does not call on the government for an appropriation, but simply requires the government's guarantee of the payment of the principal and interest of the bonds. The government, on the other hand, is amply protected from loss by a payment into the treasury of stock equalling the amount of bonds guaranteed and, in addition, is to be given a mortgage on the plant as the work progresses.

THE TEXAS ALL RIGHT.

Engineers Moore and Farmer Held Responsible for the Recent Accident.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Secretary Herbert has issued a very full statement as to the condition and seaworthy qualities of the battleship Texas, in which he states that she is the equal, if not the superior, of any vessel in the navy. In this opinion he is sustained by Charles H. Cramp and naval officers who have been connected with the construction and navigation of the ship. While the court of inquiry which investigated the sinking of the Texas on Nov. 9 attached no blame to any one for the accident, which it found due to a defective casting in a valve yoke and the possible existence of open valves between compartments, Secretary Herbert, on the recommendation of the judge advocate-general, finds Chief Engineers Moore of the ship and Farmer of the navy yard "reprehensibly careless," and if they "had not each failed in his duty this accident could not have happened." A mild reprimand, in the form of a copy of these findings, has been sent to the two affected officers.

Destitution in Newfoundland.

St. Johns, N. F., Dec. 17.—Further reliable reports show the spread of destitution at White Bay, in the extreme northern portion of the island. Urgent demands are being made upon the government to provide relief. On her last trip the mail steamer tried to reach there, but was unable to do so owning to the ice blockade. She had to land the provisions sent at a place twenty-five miles south of the station intended. The government will probably send an additional supply of provisions on the next trip of the steamer as that will be the last chance to reach the unfortunates until spring

Brigadier-General C. N. G.

Winsted, Conn., Dec. 17.—Gov.-elect Cooke has announced his intention to appoint Col. Russell Frost of South Norwalk to the command of the brigade of the C. N. G., succeeding Gen. Havens, appointed adjutant-general. The new brigadier general was born in Delhi, N. Y., and is 43 years of age. His military service has been performed in the Fourth regiment, of which he has been commanding officer since 1892.

Barcelona Bomb Throwers' Sentences.

Barcelona, Dec. 17.—The trial by a military court of the prisoners charged with throwing a bomb in a crowded street while a religious procession was passing on June 7 last has been concluded. The sentences will be decided upon in camera and will not be made public, and any person having knowledge of the penalties imposed and divulging them will be severely punished.

Galveston Court House in Ruins.

Galveston, Tex., Dec. 17.—The Galveston county court house is a mass of ruins, and it is doubtful if any of the records outside of those in the steel fire-proof vaults will be saved, and it is thought those may be badly damaged. The fire burned until early this morning shake it off

The general belief among doctors is that consumption itself is very rarely inherited. But the belief is becoming stronger that the tendency to consumption is very generally transmitted from parent to child. If there has been consumption in the family, each member should take special care to prepare the system against it. Live out doors; keep the body well nourished; and treat the first indication of failing health.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, is a fat-producing food and nerve-tonic. Its use is followed by improved nutrition, richer blood, stronger nerves and a more healthy action of all the organs. It strengthens the power of the body to resist disease. If you have inherited a tendency to weak lungs, shake it off.

SCOTT'S EMULSION has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. (Ask your doctor.) This is because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

THEY DIED FOR LOVE.

A 19-Year-Old Boy Shoots a 38-Year-Old Woman and Himself.

Plymouth, N. H., Dec. 17.—Harry Frizzell, aged 19 years, shot Mrs. Edith Caldon Young, aged about 38 years, here yesterday afternoon and then himself. Neither party is expected to live. Mrs. Young was keeping the Central hotel and young Frizzell, who is a relative by marriage, has been stoping with her for the past few days. No trouble is known to have existed between them. The people around the house did not notice anything wrong. Neither did the first comers after the tragedy see any evidence of a struggle, as the house was in a very orderly condition. The victims were found on a bed in a room out of the hall. An investigation showed that Mrs. Young was shot in both ears and Frizzell had shot himself twice in one ear and made an attempt to put a bullet in his breast. Mrs. Young and Frizzell were both in a semi-conscious condition, and so the cause of the terrible deed can only be surmised from the following letter that was found on the floor and was written by Frizzell: "It is just 3 o'clock now, and in fifteen minutes Ede and I will both be dead. Perhaps you will think I am drunk or crazy, but I am neither. I never felt better in my life, but Ede says she will die rather than have me leave her, so we have decided to die together. From Harry and his darling Ede. Good-bye to all."

UNITED STATES WINS.

Sureties of ex-Mint Superintendent Bosbyshell Mulcted in $14,412.17.

Philadelphia, Dec. 17.—An opinion has been filed by Judge Acheson in the United States circuit court of appeals, deciding the cases of Oliver C. Bosbyshell, ex-superintendent of the mint, and his sureties on his bond in favor of the United States. Last May a verdict was rendered in the United States district court in favor of the United States against the ex-superintendent and the sureties on his $100,000 bond for $14,412.17. The action was brought to recover the remining shortage caused by the stealing of gold bullion by ex-chief weigher Henry S. Cochran. The sureties on the bond are Ludwig S. Filbert, the executors of the estate of Gen. William Lilly, the executors of the estate of George W. Childs and the executors of the estate of John Mundell. Mr. Bosbyshell and his sureties were proceeded against to make good the shortage, upon the ground that as superintendent Mr. Bosbyshell was responsible for shortages occurring while he held the office. The verdict represented the balance of the shortage in gold bullion with interest added.

SENATOR PALMER TO SPEAK.

His Opinion as to the Course of the Gold Standard Democrats.

Washington, Dec. 17.—It is possible that some information regarding the attitude of the gold standard democrats in the senate on the tariff and other political questions may be gained from a speech to be delivered in a few days in the senate by senator John M. Palmer of Illinois, the presidential candidate of the gold democrats. It is understood that the speech will be explicit as to the course that in Senator Palmer's opinion should be followed by the gold standard democrats in the future. Mr. Palmer made a study of the political situation in the south during his campaign tour and has some interesting ideas to announce. He believes that new political leaders are coming to the front in all the southern states, and it is understood that he still thinks that the democrats could have won if they had nominated a gold standard southern democrat like Judge Turner of Georgia, instead of Mr. Bryan. Judge Turner was Senator Palmer's candidate at the Indianapolis convention.

STILL IN THE SWAMPS

The President Has Good Luck on His Duck Shooting Trip.

GOES ALSO FOR A DEER DRIVE

He May Succeed in Adding a Buck or Two to His List of Game—Replies to Mayor Morgan's Invitation.

Georgetown, S. C., Dec. 17.—The government launch Water Lily came up to the city last night, bringing mail and dispatches from the presidential party. From what can be learned the president is well and enjoying the shooting. The party went duck shooting yesterday at Wood's pond and had good luck. As a deer drive had been arranged for the day, they were forced to leave the ducks and go to the drive. But the woods were so wet from the recent rains that the dogs could not keep the trail of the deer and the hunt was abandoned. The party broke camp late in the afternoon, and, embarking on the Water Lily, came from the Santee through the Mosquito creek canal to the lighthouse tender Wistaria, which was anchored in Winyah bay, near South island. After receiving the party and taking on board the baggage and bags of game, the Wistaria steamed over to Muddy bay, where she anchored last night, about a mile from the Annanadale club lodge, or Friend Field. President Cleveland and his companions went ducking in the marshes this morning. They will remain at Friend Field until Saturday, going ducking each morning, and as an invitation has been extended them by the Messrs. Donaldson Brothers for a deer drive on their lands, it is probable that they may yet have the pleasure of adding a buck or two to their list of game. Mayor Morgan received an acknowledgement from the president of the invitation and resolutions extended by the city council and citizens to attend a reception there as he passes through on his return to Washington, in which he states that his plans are not definitely formed, but that he will answer definitely in a day or two.

FEDERATION OF LABOR.

An English Delegate's Complimentary Remarks About Americans.

Cincinnati, Dec. 17.—The afternoon session of the Federation of Labor was opened by a talk by delegate Samuel Woods of Great Britain on his impressions during his short stay in America, his remarks being of a highly complimentary nature to America as a nation, and an expression of the great gratification which he and his colleague, Mr. Maulinson of Scotland, feel at finding such a high order of intelligence in the deliberative bodies of labor organization in the United States. He then read an exhaustive paper on European labor, the late meeting of the European laber congress at Edinburgh, Scotland, and the progress made in recent years by the labor organizations of Great Britain, setting forth what organization has accomplished for working people and what it hopes to accomplish in the future. The paper laid special stress on the fact that trades unions have brought about a system of compulsory education which, while it was admitted was greatly inferior to the educational system of the United States, was yet a very important and gratifying accomplishment, which all previous efforts had failed to bring about until the organized labor unions took the matter up and pushed it to its first fruition, with good prospects that the work so well begun would be prosecuted until a public school system similar in many respects, and equal in value to the masses and to poorer people to that in vogue in the United States, will be established.

Steamship Loses Her Propeller.

Queenstown, Dec. 17.—The British steamship British Empire, which left Boston on November 22 for London, has arrived here towing the British steamship Hazelmoor, from Shields on for Baltimore, which had lost her propeller. The accident to the Hazelmoor occurred 1,000 miles west of Fastnet. After losing her propeller she started to return under sail and reached the west coast of Ireland, when she was taken in tow by the British Empire.

Schooner Modesty a Total Loss.

Boston, Dec. 17.—The two-masted schooner Modesty, which sank some time ago below Boston light, was driven ashore at Nantasket beach yesterday. Divers had removed some ten tons of slate, about seventy tons and 200,000 laths remaining in the vessel. The schooner will be a total loss.

Another Polar Expedition by Balloon.

Paris, Dec. 17.—Godart and Surcouf, two aeronauts, are about to organize a baloon expedition to the North pole. They state that the idea was first suggested to them, about three years ago, by Walter Wellman, but the idea was temporarily given up.

RIGHTS OF TREE OWNERS.

Tree owners have some rights in the trees, even against corporations which string wires. It might be supposed that all interested people knew this fact, were it not that the employes of telegraph, telephone and trolley companies so often hack and mutilate trees without incurring any penalty therefore. One tree owner in Pennsylvania refused to suffer in silence, and succeeded in having inflicted upon a gang of depredators a fine of $50 each. That was no compensation for the damage done, and even to inflict that penalty cost much effort and the following of the case from a lower court to the Superior Court, where the appeal of the tree hewers that the destruction of the trees was neccessary to the operation of the telegraph line was overruled. In discussing the alleged need of more legislation on this subject the Philadelphia Press makes the interesting suggestion that individual proprietorship in trees extend to the trees upon abutting streets. The idea is a good one, as the trees thus situated are most liable to abuse from the stringers of wires.

PRACTICED RIGHT AT HOME.

The Press is glad to learn that the system of advancement which gives pupils the benefit of individual rather than class work in the public schools, as practiced in the Elizabeth schools and referred to in these editorial columns a few days ago, is also in vogue in the North Plainfield Public School, and has been for the past two months. Superintendent Warde has found it moste fficient and satisfactory, and many pupils quick to grasp and master instruction have been advanced without waiting for class-mates less progressive to catch up with them.

OUR WAY OF DOING IT.

Over in Jersey, justice sometimes moves with a pace that suggests that the proper emblem of that virtue should be the winged Mercury. In Jersey City this week an Italian was tried, convicted and sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment on a charge of murder. Poor innocent Jersey lawyers! They haven't yet learned the beauties of psychical epilepsy, or the effectiveness of the hypothetical question in freeing a murderer.—Evening Sun.

No, we Jerseymen are not prone to "experts." There is too much horse sense in the Jerseyman to permit such silly dilly-dallying as the New York courts tolerate.

Plainfield women are engaged in an evidently practical effort to help their town. A few months ago they did much to beautify a part of the city by offering prizes for the neatest yards Now they are trying to persuade Mayor Fisk to give them a representation on tne Board of Health. It is a safe wager that if Mayor Fisk grants their request Plainfield will be a healthier place to live in.—World.

A Suitable Chirstmas Present.

WANTS TO REOPEN A CASE

WON IN THE JUSTICE'S COURT BUT LOST IN THE COUNTY COURT.

One of Those Much Celebrated Suits Between Mistress and Servant—Second Verdict Against Plaintiff.—Cause, Absence.

Many months ago Mrs. Ellis, of Fanwood, had a servant girl in her employ, named Miss Gartland. There arose some difficulty between the two as to the latter's capabilities to do the work as desired by Mrs. Ellis. The result was that the servant girl was not allowed to finish the month out and was discharged. She then brought suit for damages against Mrs. Ellis, through her lawyer, S. S. Swackhamer. The defendant was represented by Wm. A. Coddington of the firm of Reed & Coddington, and the case was tried in Justice Newcorn's court before a twelve men jury.

A verdict was given the plaintiff and the case was taken before Judge McCormick, at Elizabeth. It came up the first day of court and owing to the fact that the plaintiff and her lawyer was not present, the jury returned a verdict for the defendant. Today Lawyer Swackhamer obtained a ruling from Judge McCormick to show cause why the last verdict should not be set aside, and it is quite likely that the case will come up again at an early date. The result will be awaited with considerable interest by many who have watched the case.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN AND NEW MARKET.

Benj. B. Furlony, of Chicago, is the latest arrival at the Park Hotel.

The schools will close next Thursday for the holiday vacation and reopen January 4th.

Only one session was held in the public schools yesterday, and they were slimly attended.

John W. Griggs left for Canada on a business trip yesterday. He will be absent for several weeks.

Raymond Leonard, the famous violinist of Hoboken, was in town Tuesday night visiting among friends.

Miss Eva Girles has returned to her home in Port Richmond, S. I., after a pleasant visit with Mrs. Joe Giddis, of this place.

A theatre party composed of about a dozen young people went to Plainfield last evening to attend the play in Music Hall.

The Sunday-school of the Presbyterian church held another rehearsal of their Christmas carols last evening, but the attendance was small owing to the bad walking.

Another one of those delightful entertainments for which the Washington Avenue Card Club has become noted, will be held at the home of the Misses Marlow, Dunellen avenue, Friday evening.

Conductor Rarick with his handsome cutter and fast stepper were seen on the streets yesterday. The popular conductor does not allow the grass to grow under his feet even if there is a foot of snow on the ground.

Dr. W. S. Butler, of Roanoke, Va., was in town a day or two ago, looking over A A. Parker's stock of thoroughbred fowls He purchased a black and red game bantam, which he took to Virginia with him.

This evening will occur the entertainment under the auspices of the Dunellen Athletic Association in Lincoln school hall. The association want to establish a gymnasium, and it is on this account that the entertainment is given.

Ayers Bros. received a consignment of three crates of grapes from New York by express yesterday, but on the way out the crates were so badly broken and twisted that most of the fruit had to be thrown away. The company will be asked to settle.

The scholars of the Sunday-school of the Episcopal church held their Christmas exercises in Friendship Hall, New Market, Tuesday evening. The programme included vocal and instrumental music, recitations and a brief address by the superintendent.

Samuel Richardson arrived home Tuesday night after a several weeks' confinement in a hospital in New York, where he had a delicate operation performed. From the station he was taken home in a carriage, much fatigued, but he is slowly regaining his health

A crowd of disappointed people gathered at the Emorydale station between 4 and 6 o'clock yesterday and waited patiently for a trolley car to arrive and convey them to Plainfield, but none came, so most of them waded back to the station in the snow and took passage on the steam cars.

Pursuant to instructions from the Council, S. B. Merrill and C. W. Blaine yesterday afternoon run their horses and snow plows over the various sidewalks, thus making a passageway for pedestrians. The work was accomplished with considerable difficulty, the snow drifts in some places being four feet deep.

Some itinerant crayon portrait sketcher was in town yesterday sketching "physogs" for 15 cents each. He drew what purported to be the likeness of one business man, and the latter s friends declare that the picture more resembles Maceo, the late Cuban leader, than it does the merchant who stood for it.

A good delegation of railroad men from here went to Somerville last evening to attend the brotherhood ball, which was a pronounced success, despite the inclement weather. A special train left Somerville at 3:10 o'clock this morning, stopping at all way stations for the benefit of railroad employes along the line who had been attending the ball.

Stands at the Head.

Aug. J. Bogel, the leading druggist of Shreveport, La., says: 'Dr. King's New Discovery is the only thing that cures my cough, and it is the best seller I have." J. F. Campbell, merchant of Safford, Ariz., writes: "Dr. King's New Discovery is all that is claimed for it; it never fails, and is a sure cure for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I cannot say enough for its merits.'

Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds is not an experiment. It has been tried for a quarter of a century, and to-day stands at the head. It never disappoints. Free trial bottles at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

SCOTCH PLAINS

The attendance at the public school, yesterday, was by far the smallest of any day within several months.

The passageway for foot pedestrians between this place and the Fanwood depot is not yet open and pedestrians invariably walk in the roadway.

The people hereabouts woke up to the fact, yesterday, that winter was at hand. Some few people right in the heart of town shoveled the snow from the sidewalks, but many more left it where it had fallen, where much of it yet remains.

The early ice crop on the Feltville lake, it is thought, had been ruined. About four inches of ice had formed on the surface, but the snow is now so deep and the ice is so fast going to decay, that all hope of harvesting any of it has been abandoned.

A few out-of town sleighing parties visited the various hotels, last night. One young couple who drove over from near Rahway, were "spilled" out in a snow drift about a mile south-east from Fanwood station early in the evening, but only the young lady's frizzes were damaged.

The stone crushers on the mountains near here practically suspended operation, yesterday, and until the snow shall have melted sufficiently to allow the blasting to be resumed. The roads leading down the mountain from the crushers were so blocaded with snow, drifts in many places being from four to six feet in depth, that the managers deemed it utterly useless to attempt to remove any stone to the railroad or elsewhere.

WASHINGTONVILLE.

A special Christmas praise service will be held at Mary E. Wilson Memorial Chapel on Sunday evening under the leadership of H. O. Newman. About twenty voices will be in the chorus.

Rheumatism is a Foe which gives no quarter. It torments its victims day and night. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood and cures the aches and pains of rheumatism.

Hood's Pills are the best family cathartic and liver medicine. Gentle reliable, sure.

THEATRICAL.

"Drifted Apart," a comedy drama, was presented in Music Hall last night in a finished manner in both scenic and acting parts by the Corse Payton company, which has made a decided favorable impression in all the pieces that they have thus far presented. Mr. Payton impersonated the character of a broken down thespian in a brusque manner and in his Shakespearean burlesque diatribes captured the humorous side of the audience with a rush. Mr. Payton is very much of an all-around comedian. Miss Etta Reed, as "Florence Grantly," deserves praise for the sympathetic manner in which she portrayed the character of a neglected wife who after suffering many trials and tribulations at the hands of a perfidious husband who becomes unconsciously infatuated with an adventuress, cleverly acted by Miss Grace Fox, finally triumphs in the return of her husband, minus health and wealth but still very penitent. Will D. Corbett as the erring husband, persistent in his attentions to the adventuress and implacable to his wife's appeals until a separation was effected, then losing his fortune and health and being cast aside by the woman with whom he had become infatuated, and finally being reunited with his wife, was all that the part required in a dramatic way. Tonight the performance will consist of "Lend Me Five Shillings" and "A Yankee in Cuba.'

MOORE BAKER REMARRIED.

He Killed Two Negroes Who Murdered His Wife and Child in 1894.

Moore Baker, the young farmer of Franklin Park who on March 1, 1894, killed two negroes, after they had killed his wife and child, has been married in Philadelphia to Mary Burton, daughter of the late John Burton, a lawyer. Baker's quick vengeance on the murderers was the sensation of the day. They entered his house to rob it, and killed his wife and child with an axe.

Electric Bitters

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

THE MISTRESS of the Mine.

or A Woman Intervenes.

By Robert Barr.

[Copyright. 1895. by Robert Barr.]

"No, I will not; unless you tell me what you are going to do with it."

"Then, father, you can leave your money to your nephew when you die. I shall never touch a penny of it. I now bid you good-by. I will go out from this room and earn my own living."

With that the young woman turned to go, but her father, with a sprightliness one would not have expected from his years, sprang to the door and looked at her with alarm.

"Edith, my child, you never talked to me like this before in your life. What is wrong with you?"

"Nothing, father, except that I want a check for £30,000, and want it now."

"And do you mean to say that you will leave me if I do not give it to you?"

"Have you ever broken your word, father?"

"Never, my child, that I know of."

"Then remember I am your daughter. I have said if I do not get that money now I shall never enter our house again."

"But £30,000 is a tremendous amount. Remember that I have given my word, too, that I would not give you the money unless you tell me what it was for."

"Very well, father, I will tell you what it is for when you ask me, and I would advise you to give me the money. It will all be returned to you if you want it."

"Oh, I don't care about the money at all, Edith. I merely, of course, don't want to see it wasted."

"And, father, have you no trust in my judgment?"

"Well, you know I haven't much faith in any woman's judgment in the matter of investing money."

"Trust me this time, father, I shall never ask you for any more."

The old man went slowly to his desk, wrote out a check, and handed it to his daughter. It was for £30,000.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Edith Longworth, with that precious bit of paper in her pocket, once more got into her hansom and drove to Wentworth's office. Again she took the only easy chair in the room. Her face was very serious, and Wentworth, the moment he saw it, said to himself: "She has failed."

"Have you telegraphed to Mr. Kenyon?" she asked.

"Yes."

"Are you sure you made it clear to him what was wanted? Cablegrams are apt to be rather brief."

"I told him to keep in communication with us. Here is a copy of the cablegram."

Miss Longworth read it approvingly, but said:

"You have not put in the word 'answer.'"

"No, but I put it in the dispatch I sent. I remember that now."

"Have you had an answer yet?"

"Oh, no; you see it takes a long time to get there because there are so many changes from the end of the cable to the office at which Kenyon is. And then again, you see, they may have to look for him. He may not be expecting a message; in fact, he is sure not to be expecting any. From his own cablegram to me, it is quite evident he has given up all hope."

"Show me that cablegram, please."

Wentworth hesitated. "It is hardly couched in language you will like to read," he said.

"That doesn't matter. Show it to me. I must see all the documents in the case." He handed her the paper, which she read in silence, and gave it back to him without a word.

"I knew you wouldn't like it," he said.

"I have not said I do not like it. It is not a bit too strong under the circumstances. In fact I do not see how he could have put it in other words. It is very concise and to the point."

"Yes, there is no doubt about that, especially the first three words: 'We are cheated!' Those are the words that make me think Kenyon has given up all hope, and so there will be some difficulty in finding him."

"Did you learn whether money could be sent by cable, or not?"

"Oh, yes; there is no difficulty about that. The money is deposited in a bank here and will be credited to Kenyon in the bank at Ottawa."

"Very well, then," said Miss Longworth, handing him the piece of paper, "there is the money."

Wentworth gave a long whistle as he looked at it.

"Excuse my rudeness," he said; "I don't see a bit of paper like this every day. You mean, then, to buy the mine?"

"Yes, I mean to buy the mine."

"Very well, but there is £10,000 more here than is necessary."

"Yes. I mean not only to buy the mine, but to work it; and some working capital will be necessary. How much, do you suppose?"

"About that," said Wentworth. "I have no idea. I should think that £5,000 would be ample."

"Then we will leave £5,000 in the bank here for the contingencies, and we will cable £25,000 to Mr. Kenyon. I shall expect him to get me a good man to manage the mine; I am sure he will be glad to do that."

"Most certainly he will. John Kenyon, now that the mine has not fallen into the hands of those who tried to cheat him, will be glad to do anything for the new owner of it. He won't mind, in the least, losing his money if he knows that you have the mine."

"Ah, but that is the one thing he must not know. As to losing the money, neither you nor Mr. Kenyon are to lose a penny. If the mine is all you think it is, then it will be a very profitable investment, and I intend that we shall each take our third, just as if you had contributed one-third of the money and Mr. Kenyon the other."

"But, my dear Miss Longworth, that is absurd. We could never accept any such terms."

"Oh, yes, you can. I spoke to John Kenyon myself about being a partner in this mine. I am afraid he thought very little about it at the time. I don't intend him to know anything at all about my ownership now. He has discovered the mine—you and he together. If it is valueless, then you and he will be two of the sufferers; if it is all you think it is, then you will be the gainers. 'The laborer is worthy of his hire,' and I am sure both you and Mr. Kenyon have labored hard enough in this venture. If he knows I have bought it, the chances are he will be stupidly and stubbornly conscientious, and will take none of the fruits of his labors."

"And you think, Miss Longworth, I am not conscientious enough to refuse?"

"Oh, yes, you are conscientious, but you are sensible. Mr. Kenyon isn't."

"I think you are mistaken about that. He is one of the most sensible men in the world, morbidly sensible, perhaps."

"Well, I think if Mr. Kenyon knew I owned the mine, he would not take a penny as his share. So I trust you will never let him know I am the person who gave the money to buy the mine."

"But is he never to know it, Miss Longworth?"

"Perhaps not. But if he is to know, I am the person to tell him."

"I quite agree with you there; and I shall respect your confidence."

"Now, what time," said the young lady, looking at her watch, "ought we to get an answer from Mr. Kenyon?"

"Ah, that, as I said before, no one can tell."

"I suppose, then, the best plan is to send the money at once, or put it in the way of being sent, to some bank in Ottawa."

"Yes, that is the best thing to do, although, of course, if John Kenyon is not there—"

"If he is not there, what shall we do?"

"I do not exactly know. I could cable to Mr. Von Brent. Von Brent is the owner of the mine, and the man who gave John the option. I do not know how far he is committed to the others. If he is as honest as I take him to be, he will accept the money, provided it is sent in before twelve o'clock, and then we shall have the mine. Of that I know nothing, however, because I have no particulars except John's cable message."

"Then I can do no more just now?"

"Yes, you can. You will have to write out a check for the £25,000. You see this check is crossed, and will go into your banking account. Another check will have to be drawn to get the money out."

"Ah, I see. I have not my check book here, but perhaps you can send this check to the bank and I will return. There will be time enough, I suppose, before the closing hour of the bank."

"Yes, there will be plenty of time. Of course, the sooner we get the money away the better."

"I will return shortly after lunch. Perhaps you will have heard from Mr.

"Don't spare money on it," said the young lady "Be sure and make it plain to him."

Kenyon by then. If anything comes sooner, will you send me a telegram? Here is my address.'"

"I will do that," said Wentworth, as he bade her good-by.

As soon as lunch was over Miss Longworth, with her check book, went again to Wentworth's office. When she entered he shook his head.

"No news yet," he said.

"This is terrible," she answered. "Suppose he has left Ottawa and started for home?"

"I do not think he would do that. Still, I imagine he would think there was no reason for staying in Ottawa. Nevertheless, I know Kenyon well enough to believe that he will wait there till the last minute of the option has expired in the hope that something may happen. He knows, of course, that I shall be doing everything I can in London, and he may have a faint expectation that I shall be able to accomplish something."

"It would be useless to cable again?"

"Quite. If that message does not reach him none will."

As he was speaking a boy entered the room with a telegram in his hand. Its contents were short and to the point.

"Cablegram received. Kenyon."

"Well, that's all right," said Wentworth. "Now I shall cable that we have the money and tell him to identify himself at the bank, so that there will be no formalities about the drawing of it to detain him." Saying this, Wentworth pulled the telegram forms toward him, and after considerable labor managed to concoct a dispatch that seemed to satisfy him.

"Don't spare money on it," said the young lady. "Be sure and make it plain to him."

"I think that will do: don't you?"

"Yes," she answered, after reading the dispatch, "that will do."

"Now," she said, "here is the check. I will wait here while you do all that is necessary to cable the money, or had I better go and return again to see if everything is all right?"

"If you don't mind, just sit where you are. You may lock the door, if you like and you will not be disturbed."

It was an hour before Wentworth returned, but his face was radiant. "We have done everything we can," he said. "The money is at his order there, if the cablegram gets over before twelve o'clock to-morrow, as I think it will."

"Very well, then. Good-by," said the girl, holding out her hand with a smile. "I am Mistress of the Mine, Mr. Wentworth!"

CHAPTER XXIV.

If any man more miserable and dejected than John Kenyon lived in the broad Dominion of Canada he was, indeed, a person to be pitied. After having sent his cablegram to Wentworth he went to his very cheerless hotel, and next morning when he woke up he knew that Wentworth would have received that message, but that the chances were ten thousand to one that he could not get the money in time, even if he could get it at all. Still he resolved to stay in Ottawa, much as he detested the place, until the hour of option expired. Then, he thought, he would look around among the mines, and see if he could not get something to do in the management of one of them. This would enable him to make some money and to help pay off the indebtedness which he and Wentworth would owe in London as a result of their disastrous speculation. He felt so depressed that he did what most other Englishmen would have done in his place; he took a long walk. He stood on the bridge over the Ottawa river and gazed for a little while at the Chaudiere falls, with the mist rising from the chasm into which the waters plunged. Then he walked along the other side of the river among the big sawmills and huge interminable piles of lumber, with their grateful piney smell. By and by he found himself in the country, and then the forest closed in upon the bad road on which he walked. Nevertheless he kept on and on, without heeding where he was going. Here and there he saw clearings in the woods, and a log shanty, or perhaps a barn. The result of all this was that, being a healthy man, he soon developed an enormous appetite, which forced itself upon his attention in spite of his depression. He noticed the evening was closing around him, and so was glad to come to a farmhouse that looked better than the ordinary shanty he had left behind. Here he asked for food, and soon sat down to a plentiful meal, the coarseness of which was more than compensated for by the excellence of his appetite. After dinner he began to realize how tired he was, and felt astonished to hear from his host how far he was from Ottawa.

"You can't get there to-night," said the farmer; "it is no use your trying. You stay with us to-night, and I'll take you in to-morrow. I'm going there in the afternoon." And so Kenyon remained all night, and slept the dreamless sleep of health and exhaustion.

It was somewhat late in the afternoon when he reached the city of Ottawa. Going toward his hotel he was astonished to hear his name shouted after him. Turning round, he saw a man rushing toward him whom he did not recognize.

"Your name is Kenyon, isn't it?" asked the man, somewhat out of breath.

"Yes, that is my name."

"I guess you don't remember me. I am the telegraph operator. We have had a dispatch waiting for you for some time, a cablegram from London. We have searched all over the town for you, but couldn't find you."

"Ah," said Kenyon, "is it important?"

"Well, that I don't know. You had better come with me to the office and get it. Of course, they don't generally cable unimportant things. I remember it said something about you keeping yourself in readiness for something."

They walked together to the telegraph office. The boy was still searching for Kenyon with the original dispatch, but the operator turned up the file and read it to him.

"You see it wants an answer," he said; "that's why I thought it was important to get you. You will have plenty of time for an answer to-night."

John took a lead pencil and wrote the cable dispatch which Wentworth received. He paid his money and said: "I will go to my hotel: It is the —— house. I will wait there, and if anything comes for me send it over as soon as possible."

"All right," said the operator; "that is the best plan; then we will know exactly where to find you. Of course, there is no use in your waiting here, because we can get you in five minutes. Perhaps I had better telephone to the hotel for you if anything comes."

"Very well," said Kenyon. "I will leave it all in your hands."

Whether it was the effect of having been in the country or not, John felt that, somehow, the cablegram he had received was a good omen. He meditated over the ill luck he had suffered in the whole business from beginning to end, and thought of old Mr. Longworth's favorite phrase: "There's no such thing as luck."

Then came a tap at his door, and the bellboy said: "There is a gentleman here wishes to speak to you."

"Tell him to come up," was the answer, and, two minutes later, Von Brent entered.

"Any news?" he asked.

John, who was in a state of mind which made him suspicious of everything and everybody, answered: "No, nothing fresh."

"Ah, I am sorry for that. I had some hopes that perhaps you might be able to raise the money before 12 o'clock to-morrow. Of course, you know the option ends at noon to-morrow?"

"Yes, I know that."

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a collar or two? BRIDE KILLS A BEAR.

Story of a Thrilling Encounter Related by Its Heroine.

Some of the Quickest Work with a Gun and Knife That Was Ever Done by a Woman—Details of the Adventure.

Miss Jennie Rose, a young woman of Randolph, Ore., found herself in a peculiar position the other day. In an unexpected moment she came face to face with a bear. Instead of screaming and fainting, she gave the bear a hand-to-hand fight and came out victor. Then she went home and immediately became a center of interest for the surrounding country. In a few days she was married, and she says that she and her husband sat on the bearskin while she wrote this interesting account of a more startling occurrence than usually comes to a bride. She relates the encounter herself as follows:

"It was the only thing I could do. It was the bear or me, and I did not propose to supply a meal for that bear if I could help it, nor was I going to let Mrs. Bruin make a comfortable dinner of my pet dog, who had been my companion on many a stroll before

"I had started out that morning to shoot rabbits, as I had done a hundred times before, and carried my usual weapon, a 22-caliber rifle, and a good-sized hunting-knife in my belt. Somehow rabbits seemed scarce that morning, and I was wandering along a ridge about a mile from my home when I heard a peculiar choking sound just over the crest of the ridge. At the same time I noticed that my little fox terrier, who always accompanies me, was missing. Thinking that he was in trouble, I hurried in the direction of the sound.

"As I pushed the bushes aside I heard my dog bark, and the bark was answered by a growl. There, not ten feet away from where I stood, was a huge bear, standing erect on her haunches, and guarding a tiny cub from that little fox terrier of mine. The cub was no bigger than the dog, but the bear looked as big as an ox. I had never before met a bear in all my wanderings about the woods.

"As I stepped through the bushes into the open in which the bear stood it was a question as to which was the most surprised, the bear or I. It was then that for a moment I wished I was home. Without stopping to think of the small caliber of the rifle I carried, I raised my gun, and, taking aim at the head of the big bear, I fired.

"She sat perfectly still for a second and then, suddenly dropping on all fours, ran off through the thick underbrush with my dog yelping after her. The cub, being left alone, lost no time in scrambling up a tree and looking down at me.

"In a few seconds my dog returned and began barking at the foot of the tree in which the cub had taken refuge. To quiet the dog, I fired at the cub and brought it down at the first shot, but not before it had set up a squealing that could be heard half a mile off.

"Then I knew there was trouble ahead for me, for the old bear would surely return to see what was the matter with her cub. I was not mistaken, for in a minute I heard a crashing and cracking among the bushes, which indicated that Mrs. Bear was losing no time in getting back.

"I decided to go home quickly, but I was going to have that cub. I had just started to pick it up from where it fell when the old bear broke through the bushes and was almost upon me. I had only time to give her two quick shots when she made a reach for me knocking my gun one way and me the other. I stumbled and fell over a small log, and that would have been the end of me, had not my little pet dog just then taken an active interest in affairs.

"He began nipping and barking at the bear, and so took her attention away from me, giving me a chance to rise and get at the long hunting-knife in my belt. I had a chance to get away then, but, as my dog seemed to be getting the worst of the battle, decided to give the bear just one stab with my knife. I struck her a blow just back of the shoulder, and it was given with such good will that I think it was the cause of her death, for she started to run, but did not go more than 50 feet when she fell with the knife still sticking in her.

"The old bear was dead, so was the cub. My poor little dog was dying, and then for the first time I realized that I was hurt. When the bear struck me, she tossed me against a tree, and the force of the fall had broken my collar-bone. I made my way home as best I could and had my wounds dressed, and friends went over and brought in the bear. The big one weighed 500 pounds.

"I found that my first shot had broken her jaw, and the other two had entered her breast. But none of them was fatal. It was the knife that killed her, for the long blade had penetrated nearly to the heart and severed several arteries. That was my first bear hunt."

SPAIN'S HARD LOT

Philippine Islands Revolution Assumes Serious Proportions.

THE COUNTRY FULL OF SEDITION

Troops To Be Concentrated About Manila To Protect the Capital. European Residents Organize for Safety.

London, Dec. 17.—The Times to-day prints a dispatch from Singapore, saying that the Spanish troops now stationed on the islands composing the Philippine group will be withdrawn and concentrated in and about Manila, the capital of the islands. The rebels, according to the dispatch, number 50,000. The defenses of Cavite will also be strengthened. The country is full of sedition, and several soldiers have been shot at Mindano for mutiny. The European residents of Manila have formed a committee for the protection of their lives and property.

WAIL FROM HAVANA.

Spanish Newspapers Object to the Cuban Agitation in the United States.

Havana, Dec. 17.—The Diario de la Marina, in consequence of having received from its New York correspondent dispatches giving accounts of the excitement caused throughout the United States by the stories of the alleged treacherous manner in which Maceo was done to death, prints an energetic protest against the circulation of such reports, which it characterizes as gross falsehoods and insults to Spanish chivalry and honor. In the course of its article the Diario comments in scathing terms upon the action of the American newspaper press in printing "such lies."

Weyler's Recall Demanded.

Madrid, Dec. 17.—El Correo Militar demands that Gen. Weyler be recalled from Cuba and be replaced by Gen. Marin, Gen. Macias, now in command of the troops in the Canary islands, succeeding the marquis of Ahumada as second in command.

Favors Recognition of the Insurgents.

Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 17.—Gov. Holcomb has made public his attitude concerning the Cuban insurgents and the alleged assassination of Gen. Maceo. He said: "The belligerent rights of Cuban revolutionists should have been recognized by our national government. Their valiant fight, so long continued, to free themselves from the yoke of European oppression, entitles them to the sympathy of every American." The governor declared that in the event of war with a foreign nation Nebraska could furnish 1,200 drilled and organized troops, and that 200,000 Nebraskans stood ready to defend the country's honor.

Cuban Sympathizers in Baltimore.

Baltimore, Dec. 17.—Cuban sympathizers in Baltimore contemplate the organization of a branch of the Cuban junta to promote the cause of the Cuban revolution. This is said to be part of a plan to locate organizations of this character in every city of any size in the United States.

The Storm at Plymouth.

Plymouth, Mass., Dec. 17.—Tuesday's storm was the worst seen about these parts for years. Snow fell fast and the wind blew a gale from the northeast. The harbor was one seething mass of foam and the tide was very high, washing up over the wharves. All along the streets are limbs of shade trees and chimneys have been blown off in many parts of the town. The top of the piazza of the Samoset house was blown off. Along Water street the telegraph and telephone poles are down and the service is crippled. Much damage was done to vessels in the harbor.

Army and Navy Musical Service.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Mr. Johnson, rep., Cal., has introduced in the house a bill for the re-organization and improvement of the musical service of the army, navy, marine corps and the bands of the military and naval academies. The measure increases the pay of musicians, provides for their enlistment for terms of three years and gives the chief bandmaster of all bands the rank of second lieutenant in the army and of junior lieutenant in the navy.

Gov.-elect Black in New York.

New York, Dec. 17.—Gov.-elect Black was entertained at dinner last night at the Fifth Avenue hotel by Frank S. Witherbee of Port Henry, who was at one time republican national committeeman for the state and also state committeeman for his district. The dinner was a private one, about a dozen in all being invited. Mr. Black will, it is expected, remain in town a day or two.

Ian MacLaren's Charity.

New York, Dec. 17.—Rev. John Watson, D. D. (Ian MacLaren) has donated the proceeds of his lecture ($500) on Robert Burns, delivered on Friday last, to the St. Andrew's society of the state of New York, to be devoted to the relief of the poor and destitute Scotch in New York city.

Two Barges Missing.

Newport, R. I., Dec. 17.—Nothing has yet been heard as to the whereabouts of the barges Chalmette and Charter Oak, which the tug Ice King lost somewhere near Point Judith during yesterday's storm, but it is believed both are safe.

Newark Returns to Key West.

Key West, Fla., Dec. 17.—The cruiser Newark has returned to this port. It is reported that she went as far as the Bahama banks, but failed to see anything of the Three Friends.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Last summer while Rev. C. E. Herring was abroad he rode a Spalding wheel, 25 pounds, over 1,000 miles up the Rhine, through the mountains of the Black Forest and over the Alps of Switzerland and valleys of Italy, and the frame of the wheel is as strong today as the day it was bought. This includes a ride of 10 miles down the appennes on a punctured tire. Mr. Herring says that if he makes the trip again over the same course he would use the same make of wheel. His weight is over 200 pounds.

Entertained at Whist.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McClintock, of West Front street, entertained the Thursday Night Whist Club last evening in a charming manner, and delightful hospitality of the host and hostess was proverbial. The members of the club are becoming quite expert, and considerable rivalry exists in winning prizes. Last evening Mr. and Mrs. Horsley Barker won first honors, while Mrs. Arthur T. Gallup and Mr. Duncan were awarded second honors. After the game the members were served with dainty refreshments which made complete an evening of pleasure to all.

Mr. Horr Had a Serious Turn.

The condition of ex-Congressman Roswell G. Horr, who has been ill at home on Park avenue for several weeks, is about the same. His sickness took a serious turn last night but he rallied after a few hours and still remains about the same.

WAR OVER SNOW PILES.

TUNIS J. CAREY'S MEN BLOCKED THE STREET RAILWAY TRACKS

Superintendent Adlemann Arrives on the Scene and a Lively Time Ensues in Trying to Start the Stalled Cars.

There was trouble on the lines of the Plainfield Street Railway this morning and war seemed imminent between that corporation and Tunis J. Carey, the auctioneer and proprietor of the West Front street storage warehouse. The snow was at the bottom of the trouble and played an important part in the events of the morning.

When the snow storm ended, there was a big drift in the gutter on West Front street in front of Mr. Carey's building, which includes the four stores nearest the corner of Grove street. The drifts were increased in size by the snow from the sidewalk and Mr. Carey says that the snow-plough used by the Street Railway Company banked it up much worse. Superintendent Adlemann, of the street railway, declares that the snow had been swept away from there by the wind and so the company had not had to remove it. At any rate, there was a high bank of snow in front of Mr. Carey's place that prevented his vans from approaching the entrance to the warerooms.

The snow, which was banked up at least four feet high, filled the gutter and so, when the police made their rounds this morning, Mr. Carey was notified that the snow must be removed from the gutter at once. Farther down the street the company had carted away the snow from the side of the street, yesterday, but their carts had not come in Mr. Carey's neighborhood.

After the notification by the police, Mr. Carey ordered two of his men to dig away the banks of snow and throw the snow into the middle of the street. But it so happened that the car tracks were in the middle of the street also, and they were soon covered up by the lumps of packed snow. Most of the snow went on the west-bound track. The first car that came by pushed away the snow but by the time another car came along there was a formidable bank of snow, about two feet deep, extending along the track for some distance.

The motorman looked dubiously at the obstruction and started his car at it. The car went about half way through the snow and then stopped. The wheels continued to revolve but the car remained stationary. Then he tried to back the car out of the snow but it was there too fast, and again the wheels revolved but the car moved not. Meanwhile quite a crowd had gathered to watch the fun and chaffed the motorman and conductor. Word was sent to Supt. Adelmann by telephone, and the crew retired to the inside of the car to await the arrival of help.

At last it came in the shape of another car and the two were coupled together. All the time Mr. Carey's men continued to pile the snow up in front of the stalled car. By the aid of the second car the first car was successfully backed up amid the cheers of the crowd which was rapidly assuming large progortions. Again the car tried to force its way through the snow and went several feet further; then had to be towed out by the second car. A third attempt was made and promised to be successful, when a hack turned directly in the way of the moving car and the motorman was forced to stop the car or run down the hack. The crowd yelled gleefully at this and the car was stalled again.

This time, when the other car went to its assistance, it, too, was unable to move, and the crews of the two cars waited for reinforcements.

After a wait the third car showed up and unsuccessfully tried to assist the other cars. At the same time Superintendent Adlemann with several men from the car house, arrived, armed with shovels. They started to remove the snow from off the track, while the Superintendent came to the front.

"Stop throwing the snow on those tracks," he ordered. Carey's men looked around as if uncertain what to do.

"Throw that snow where you please," came from their employer who had taken up a position on the curb. Then Carey and Adlemann turned to each other and a lively conversation started. Mr. Adlemann told him he was delaying the traffic and would have to be responsible for it. Carey said that they could not pile up the snow and leave it in front of his property while the company's men carted it away in other places. Adlemann answered that he had expected to cart away the snow there today as he did not have a chance yesterday and that, anyhow,

GET A WORD AND STUDY.

REV. DR. HARSHA ADDRRSSES THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR RALLY.

E. E. Anthony Denies the Report That Evangelist Moody Received $1,200 For His Sermon at the Convention

The Christian Endeavor rally held in the First Presbyterian church last evening was well attended and a source of great help to all present, which included representatives from every society in the local union, under whose auspices it was held.

The exercises opened with a song service by a chorus choir under the direction of Fred Moon, precentor, and Miss Petrie, organist. This was followed with Scripture reading by Rev. C. L. Goodrich and prayer by Rev. Mr. Cubberly, of South Plainfield.

President E. E. Anthony, of the local union, then made a few remarks, in which he thanked all for the hearty co-operation given during the recent State convention. He said that the total expenses of the convention was $2,100, and enough money had been received to pay all bills and all but two had been paid. The two unpaid bills had been asked for several times, but it was almost impossible to get them. He thought there would be a balance in the treasury of about $10.

Mr. Anthony spoke especially regarding the reports being circulated that Mr. Moody received $1,200 for his work in this city. One person, he said, would not believe anything to the contrary, notwithstanding what the Christian Endeavor officers had said, and he would not believe the treasurer who made out the check and sent it to Mr. Moody.

Mr. Anthony then stated that Mr. Moody and his assistant, Mr. Burke, the singer, received $250 for all their work in this city, including traveling expenses. The societies were thanked for observing the week of prayer, and the speaker said that some Endeavorers might be asked to go from house to house and invite people to church. He mentioned one man in this city who had lived here forty-one years and had never been spoken to about religion. After the singing of a hymn, Mr. Anthony introduced Rev. Dr. Harsha, of New York, who gave a talk on "Bible Study." In part he said:

"I want to speak to you frankly and plainly. I would advise you to have your own Bible and mark it a little, not too much. Get the key-word of the Bible and study it out conclusively. There is a great deal of inexcusable ignorance about the Bible and people do not study it as they should.

"There is no necessity of our being able to study the Bible in the Hebrew language. What we want is the original English with the substance of what God wants us to know.

"In the first place, every science has a technical term. The carpenter, lawyer and physician all have technical terms which are particularly their own.

"Secondly, there are some key words which are full of significance and they should be studied most carefully. In the third place, give each key word the full force of its meaning.

"Fourthly, the force of the words are to be gained from the context and not the dictionary,

"Take a chapter, go through it carefully and get every point contained in it and see what it means exactly.

"In the same way take a verse, like John 3:16, and get all the good you can out of it by close and prayerful study.

"Harry Moorehouse, the English evangelist, several years ago, preached in Chicago for Mr. Moody at one time, and for eight days he used the text John 3 16, and the people did not get tired of hearing his discourses.

"Another good way to study the Bible is to take a story from the Holy Book, divide into sections and in that way get the true meat of the Word."

Just before the service closed a short meeting for consecration was held, during which time several prayers were made and after the singing of a hymn the benediction was pronounced by Dr. Harsha.

THE CITIES OF JERSEY.

SOME OF THE PECULIARITIES IN THE WAY OF POPULATION.

A Dense Population in the North and Sparcely Settled Counties in the South Makes the State One of Many Contrasts.

The State census of New Jersey taken in 1885 showed the population of the State at that time to be 1,972,942. Since that time the population has increased about 125,000, and is now in the neighborhood of 1,800,000, or rather less than the population of the city of New York by the Board of Health figures. Newark has a population now estimated at 215,000; Jersey City has 180,000 people; Paterson, which is to furnish the United States with a Vice-President after March 4, 95,000; Camden, 65,000, and Trenton, the capital, 60,000. These are the five chief cities of New Jersey, and if to them be added Hoboken, famed in romance and pictorial narrative, with a population of 55,000, and Elizabeth, with one of 45,000, a total of 675,000 city population will be given, or nearly 40 per cent. of the total population of the State. It is south Jersey, sparsely populated and containing no larger city than Camden, which deprives New Jersey of what would otherwise be its distinction of being the State having the densest population. The big counties of Southern Jersey represent very little in respect of the number of inhabitants. Burlington county, for instance, the largest in New Jersey, spreads over 860 square miles. It is nearly as large as the State of Rhode Island, but instead of including, as does the latter, a population of nearly 400,000, it contained by the last census only 8,000, transients in Mount Holly included. South of Burlington is Atlantic county, which includes Egg Harbor and Atlantic City. It has an area of 365 square miles (it is larger than New York county, Kings county, and Queens county combined,) and yet has a total population of only 28,000, about one-half of the present population of Long Island City.

Cape May county, further south, has an are of 255 square miles, but a total population of only 11,000, whereas one ward of New York city, the Twelfth, has a population in excess of 350,000. Cumberland, covering 505 square miles, with a population of only 45,000, and Salem, covering 340 square miles, with a population of only 25,000, are two other southern Jersey counties which help to deprive the State of what ought to be its prominence among the States of the country.

The total population of such Jerey cities as Newark, Jersey City and Hoboken, does not correctly represent the density of population in these places, for they are connected with suburban towns into which the population of the cities has flowed and which properly belongs to such cities even though not included within the official city lines. New Jersey is, indeed, a State of many contrasts. Large manufacturing cities and primitive rural settlements are both numerous, the former chiefly in the north, and the latter mostly in the south. It is a fact, not generally known, that the present State of New Jersey, or much of it, was once made over by the grantee, Lord Berkeley, to three trustees for the benefit of creditors. These trustees were William Penn of honored memory, Nicholas Lucas, and a third with the peculiar name of Gawen Lawrie. They held the State in trust and afterward divided it into two.

A Delightful Event.

Mrs. A. Walter Haviland, of Rockview avenue, gave the first of a series of teas yesterday afternoon to introduce her daughters, the Misses Haviland. Those who availed themselves of the invitation yesterday were met met by a charming hostess, two fair debutantes and the gracious hospitality of Mrs. Haviland, assisted by a number of friends. Mrs. B. J. Shreve and Mrs. D. M. VanVliet presided at the table, and the assistants in the dining room were Misses Bertha Clark, Marion Henderson, May Shreve, Mary Bushnell, Edith Clapp and Leontine Meade from New York. The prevailing tone of the decorations was red, imparting a cheerful glow to the artistic rooms, and the floral decorations were carnations.

Absolutely pure, perfectly harmless, and invariably reliable are the qualities of One Minute Cough Cure. It never fails in colds, croup and lung troubles. Children like it because it is pleasant to take and it helps them. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Saturday, December 19, The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., 137 West Front street, will sell the best Elgin creamery butter at 21 cts. per pound. 2

SONS OF OLD ELI DINE.

ANNUAL DINNER OF THE PLAINFIELD YALE CLUB HELD LAST NIGHT.

The Event Took Place at the Revere House Which Was the Scene of a Gay and Festive Time by the Alumni of Yale.

Another year has passed by and again the sons of Old Eli gathered together for the annual spread. It was the fifth annual dinner of the Plainfield Yale Club and was held in the spacious dining room at the Revere House last evening.

They talked and laughed over their experiences back in New Haven and sang the good old songs of that period. Everybody felt happy and an excellent repast served to make them more cheerful. Mr. DeRevere's chef felt that his honor was at stake and he prepared a sumptuous banquet.

The election of the officers of the club came early in the evening. Albert H. Atterbury was elected president of the club, H. L. Moodey, vice-president, and Arthur Lovell, secretary. The table was arranged in the shape of a large U reversed with the toastmaster and the invited guests across the end and the members of the club seated along the sides. Besides the toastmaster and the speakers, there were present the following:

The Messrs. Atterbury, Reed, Codding, Welles, Clark, Moody, Corbin, Dimock, Mann, E. Tracy, A. Z Huntington, J. E. Tracy, H. L. McGee, W. D. Murray, Knox, Foote, Ryce, Cadwell, H. C. Tracy, Raymond, P. Stewart, S. Huntington, Kean, Strong, Arthur Lovell, C. W. McGee, Opdyke, West, W. E. Stewart, Peck, W. M. McCutchen, H. B. Lovell, Yates, W. F. Murray, Stephenson, Richards, Price, Howard Huntington, Ryder, Whiton, Leal and Pardee.

The dining hall was prettily arranged for the occasion with American flags and the smaller Yale flags, while holly decorated the chandeliers and pillars with here and there a bunch of it hung around the walls. There were a few visitors present who arrived in time to listen to the speeches. After the dinner, interspersed as it was with songs, the graduates rose up and marched around the room in Indian file while they sang one of the famous Yale marching songs. Meantime the table had been cleared and cigars were passed around.

As the tobacco smoke rolled upward in clouds and the sons of Old Eli settled themselves to enjoy the evening's speeches, S. St. John McCutchen, master of the toasts, rose from his place at the head of the table and in a few remarks, filled with his irrepressible funny sayings, reviewed the events of the last year at Yale and then introduced Thomas Thatcher, president of the Alumni Association of New York, who had for the toast "The University." He spoke words of greeting and referred to that wonderful power that is always to be found in a gathering of Yale men. Then he turned to his subject and spoke of the great growth in the university and what it now embraces. The development of character, he said, was greatly aided by the opportunities given by the university by the voluntary student initiative. Then he talked of the alumni, really a part of the university, and spoke of its right to act for and to criticize the university, which, he said, came by its love for the place.

"The Faculty" was spoken for by Professor Hadley, of Yale. He answered the toastmaster's little hits with equal wit and after he had sent his listeners into roars of laughter he turned to more serious subjects. The recent growth of the university was, he said, remarkable, considering their late losses and the hard times. The increasing numbers in the classes had, he continued, necessitated a change in the present method which has proved so successful in the past and regarding which the advice of the alumni is needed. Classical learning had maintained its old position. As regards the Democratic spirit at the university, wealth has given an increasing importance there as in the rest of the world, but not to such a great degree. Nevertheless, he said, the work in the university was going forward according to the fundamental principles.

After the applause had died away that followed these remarks, William N. Runyon was called upon for a song and responded with one of his dialect selections that was received with much hand clapping.

Yale's old rival, "Harvard," was the toast answered to by Edward C. Perkins, a graduate of that institution. He remarked on his isolated position among the host of Yale men. After a little pleasantry, he spoke of the two great universities marching forward in the walks of life, side by side.

CAN'T FIND REBELS

Spaniards Say Maceo's Death Has Disorganized Them.

HAVANA STORIES ARE NOT RELIABLE

Believed That the Insurgents Are To Concentrate in Santa Clara Province.

The Queen Regent Compliments Gen. Weyler.

Havana, Dec. 18.—The bulletins issued by the government regarding engagements of the troops are unimportant. A correspondent at Guanajay reports that the forces under Major Lacosta have captured at Mosquito beach a Spanish deserter who belonged to the Alfonso XIII. battalion. The prisoner says that he was forced to join Maceo's forces in Pinar del Rio. He repeats the story that Maceo did not cross the trocha on land, but went by sea around the northern end of it. After landing in the province of Havana Maceo met the forces of Lieut. Vasquez, who was waiting at Mosquito beach, between Mariel and Banes. The prisoner complains that he was ill-treated by the rebels. His story is suspicious, and he will be tried by a court-martial. The queen regent has sent a dispatch to Capt.-Gen. Weyler complimenting him upon the result of his campaign against the insurgents. Advices from the province of Pinar del Rio are to the effect that several Spanish battalions have penetrated to the interior of the hills there in places that were considered impregnable by the rebels. The insurgents had disappeared, so the troops burned the huts that had been occupied by them. A number of horses and cattle were captured. The officers commanding in Pinar del Rio have no idea of the present locality of the rebels in that province. Scouting parties have failed to learn their whereabouts, but the military profess to believe that their abandonment of almost unassailable positions is proof of the disorganization that has followed the death of Maceo. Indications point to rebel parties having entered the province of Matanzas. Their trails show the direction in which they have gone, and a Spanish column is following their track. It is believed that a concentration is intended in Santa Clara province of rebels from the east and west. The government says it is watching the movement, and so far as can be gathered from outside sources it is doing little besides watching to prevent the rebels from carrying out their plan. A colored woman named Francisa Herrera has been tried by courtmartial here on a charge of rebellion. The prosecutor asked that she be sentenced to death. The sentence of the courtmartial, if it has been passed, has not been made public.

Couldn't Find the Three Friends.

Key West, Fla., Dec. 18.—The cruiser Raleigh has returned from her chase after the Three Friends. It is reported that they did not see anything of her. It is said on good authority that a small boat landed at this port from the Three Friends last evening.

M'KINLEY'S CHICAGO VISIT.

The President-Elect and Wife To Spend To-night at the Dawes Residence.

Chicago, Dec. 18.—Major and Mrs. McKinley went out for a short drive again this morning. The president-elect says that his wife is better than she has been at any time since her recent attack of the grippe. Major and Mrs. McKinley have no plans to-day beyond a trip to Evanston this afternoon to spend the night with Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Dawes. Judge and Mrs. H. R. Day of Canton will also be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dawes. Major McKinley's most notable caller yesterday afternoon was Joseph Medill, editor of the Chicago Tribune. Mr. Medill discussed tariff legislation, and said he was opposed to an extreme measure. Major McKinley wants a moderate bill, which will be so fair and satisfactory that it will stand for a dozen years or more. The distinguished visitor informed a representative of the Chicago Press club that if he was in the city to-morrow night he would attend the Carlisle Indian-Wisconsin university football game.

Pronounces the Report False.

Albany, Dec. 18.—State Excise Commissioner Lyman pronounces false the article published in several newspapers purporting to be an abstract of his forthcoming first annual report to the governor. The article dealt largely with the statistical portion of the report, of which the commissioner says he has not yet written a word, as the department experts are now at work upon the fiscal portion of it. He says that many of the figures are wrong and others a rehash of statistics which were published weeks ago.

Father Macdonald Awarded Six Cents.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Dec. 18.—The libel suit of Father Macdonald against the Brooklyn Eagle has been concluded, the jury rendering a verdict for the plaintiff of six cents. The libel consisted of charges contained in an article published in the Eagle accusing the clergyman of unpriestly conduct while sojourning in Washington in a clerical capacity.

Lasker-Steinitz Chess Match.

Moscow, Dec. 17.—The eleventh game of the championship chass match between Steinitz and Lasker, a queen's gambit declined, was won by Lasker after sixty-six moves. Present score—Lasker, 7; Steinitz, 0; drawn, 4.

Plymouth, Mass., Public Building.

Washington, Dec. 18.—Senator Hoar has introduced a bill appropriating $75,000 for a public building at Plymouth, Mass.

FOR CUBAN FREEDOM

Senate Committee Decides To Report Cameron's Resolution.

CURRENT RUMOR IN WASHINGTON

The Senate Will Not Be in Session Until Monday, When It Is Expected the Subject Will Be Acted Upon.

Washington, Dec. 18.—It is currently reported this morning that the senate committee on foreign relations has decided to order a favorable report on Mr. Cameron's resolution recognizing the independence of the republic of Cuba, and declaring that the United States should use its friendly offices with the government of Spain to bring to a close the war between Spain and Cuba. The report cannot be made to the senate until Monday, the senate not being in session to-day, having adjourned over until Monday. A motion was made in executive session yesterday afternoon to reconsider the vote by which this adjournment was taken, but it was cut off by a motion to adjourn, which prevailed. It appeared to be the desire to hold a session to-day so the Cuban resolution could be then reported.

DOINGS IN CONGRESS.

Senate Passes the Immigration Bill—Inaugural Matters in the House.

Washington, Dec. 18.—The senate is not in session to-day, having adjourned until Monday. The bill whichpassed the house of representatives last session, and for which a substitute was reported by the senate committee, to amend the immigration laws of the United States, occuied pied the senate's attention during nearly the whole of yesterday'ssession. The substitute was amended in some particulars, the most notable amendment being one providing that the act shall not apply to Cuban refugees during existing troubles in Cuba, and then it was passed by a vote of 52 to 10 and a conference asked with the house. The bill as passed excludes, in addition to those classes excluded under existing laws, all persons over sixteen years of age who cannot readand write their native language, but it does not exclude the wife, child, parent, or grandparent of an admissible immigrant, notwithstanding their inability to read and write.

House of Representatives.

The house set the inaugural ball rolling by the passage of the usual oills authorizing the laying of necessary temporary railroad tracks to accommodate the increased travel, the use of streets and reservations for the erection of reviewing stands and the loan of such government flags and ensigns as can be spared for decorative purposes. The army appropriation bill, which was the unfinished business at the opening of the session, was passed, after the amendment recommended by the committee of the whole, practically abolishing the hospital at Hot Springs, Ark., by cutting off the appropriation for its maintenance, had been agreed to. Half a dozen measures of local interest to the District of Columbia were passed and consideration of the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill was begun in committee of the whole. Thirty-one pages of the 110 comprising the bill were disposed of.

An American Adventuress Arrested.

Paris, Dec. 18.—A woman who calls herself the Countess Rossi, but whose real name is not known, has been arrested here charged with burglary, in having plundered the villa of Count and Countess Rothe at Neuilly-sur-Seine, a mile and a half from Paris, while the owners were sojourning at Monte Carlo. The self-styled countess was born in Detroit, Mich., of French parents. She asserts that she was married to an Italian count named Rossi, who is now dead. She has long been known in Paris and elsewhere as an adventuress.

Confirmed by the Senate.

Washington, Dec. 18.—The senate has confirmed the following nominations: MacGrane Coxe of New York to be minister to Guatemala and Honduras; Charles A. Prouty of Vermont to be interstate commerce commissioner; United States consuls—Isaac M. Elliott of New York at La Guayra, Venezuela; Jos. L. Hance of New York at Cardenas, Cuba. William H. Cooper, collector of customs for Delaware; Michael I. Fagen, assistant collector of customs at Jersey City, N. J.

Canal Laborers on Strike.

Syracuse, N. Y., Dec. 18.—A general strike is now on among the laborers employed in this vicinity on improvements to the Erie canal under the $9,000,000 appropriation. What the result of the strike will be no one can foretell. The contractors do not want to pay more than the men are getting on other jobs in this city, and some of the workmen show a very ugly disposition. Trouble is expected.

The Bubonic Plague at Bombay.

Bombay, Dec. 18.—The official statistics of the bubonic plague in this city show that there have been 1,551 cases and 1,094 deaths from the disease. Over 200,000 persons have fled from the city, and the flight continues daily.

National Home for Colored People.

Washington, Dec. 18.—The senate committee on education and labor has reported favorably appropriating $100,000 for the establishment in the city of Washington of a national home for aged and infirm colored people.

American Corn for India.

Philadelphia, Dec. 18.—The first cargo of corn which has ever been shipped from this country to India will arrive there some time next week on German steamer Remus.

ENGLAND'S NEW PRIMATE.

Bishop Temple of London Appointed Archbishop of Canterbury.

Rt. Rev. Frederick Temple, bishop of London, has been appointed archbishop of Canterbury and primate of all England, in succession to the late Dr. Benson.

Dr. Temple is the son of an officer in the army. He was born November 30, 1821, was educated at the grammar school at Tiverton, and, proceeding to Oxford, became scholar of Balliol college and took his degree of B. A. in 1842. He was elected fellow and mathematical tutor of his college, and, having been ordained in 1846, was appointed principal of the training college at Kneller hall, near Twickenham, in 1848. This post he resigned in 1855, and after having held an inspectorship of schools during the interval was appointed, on the resignation of Dr. Colborn in 1858, head master of Rugby school.

ARCHBISHOP FREDERICK TEMPLE.

Dr. Temple, who was chaplain to the queen, gained some notoriety in 1860 as the author of the first of the seven "Essays and Reviews" which caused so much controversy soon after their appearance.

At the general election of 1868 Dr. Temple took an active part in Warwickshire in support of Mr. Gladstone's measure for the disestablishment of the Irish church, and the premier nominated him to the bishopric of Exeter in succession to the late Dr. Philpotts—an appointment which caused considerable commotion in clerical circles. The confirmation of Dr. Temple's election took place December 8, 1869, at the Church of St. Mary-Le-Bow, Cheapside, when Bishop Trower, a representative of a portion of the clergy who were opposed to Dr. Temple because he was the author of one of the "Essays and Reviews," instructed counsel to oppose the election. Counsel was accordingly heard on both sides, and Dr. Temple's election was confirmed by the vicar-general. Dr. Temple received episcopal consecration at Westminster December 21, 1869, together with the bishops-elect of Bath and Wells and of the Falkland islands.

Dr. Temple published "Sermons Preached at Rugby Chapel in 1858-60" in 1861. In April, 1883, he was elected Bampton lecturer at Oxford for the ensuing year. On the death of Dr. Jackson in January, 1885, Dr. Temple was appointed bishop of London and was succeeded at Exeter by Dr. Bickersteth.

Mexican Burial of the Dead.

The Mexicans have a queer way of burying the dead. The corpse is tightly wrapped in century-plant matting and placed in a coffin hired for about a shilling. One or two natives, as the case may be, place the coffin on their heads and go on a trot to the grave, where the body is interred and the coffin is then returned.

My

Nerves are weak, many people say, and yet they do not seem to know that they are literally starving their nerves. Weak, pale, thin blood cannot give proper sustenance—that is why you are nervous, tired, exhausted. The cure for this condition is to purify, vitalize and enrich your blood. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla fairly and faithfully, and the rich, red blood, which it makes, will soon feed the nerves the elements of true strength they require; they will cease their agitation and will resume their proper place—being under the control instead of controlling the brain and body. Read Miss Bartley's letter:

"I want to express my gratitude for what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me. My health has been very poor for three years, due to trouble with my

Kidneys

I was nervous, had pains in my back. I cannot tell what I suffered. My eyesight became affected and I was so despondent I did not have any interest in life. I had two physicians, but my complaints became worse. I was told that I was affected with Bright's disease. A relative urged me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I did so and in a short time I began to notice a change in my condition. Things began to appear brighter, my eyes improved and did not trouble me so severely. My appetite returned and I gained strength every day. I am now able to do my own work, and feel perfectly well. I cannot find words to express my gratitude for what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me and I gladly recommend it." MISS ELLA BARTLEY, 213½ S. Grant Ave., Columbus, Ohio.

starving children

There are children without food. They cry for it, and are not answered. The pity of it! But often nature cries out in other ways that her children need nourishment. Is your child thin; actually poor in flesh? Does it get no benefit from its food? Then give something which produces flesh and makes rich blood.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites does more than this. It changes the unhealthy action to one of health, thus removing the cause. It acts on the nervous system, which controls all the processes of the body, toning it up into sound and vigorous activity. It is food for growing bone and brain. It makes the thin plump; the pale, ruddy; the weak, strong; it feeds and cures.

SCOTT'S EMULSION has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. (Ask your doctor.) This is because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

Put up in 50 cent and $1.00 sizes. The small size may be enough to cure your cough or help your baby. All druggists.

SHARKEY TO GET THE PURSE.

Decision of the 'Frisco Court in the Notorious Prize Fight Case.

San Francisco, Dec. 18.—Glove contests and prize-fights are synonymous. Such is the legal opinion of Judge Sanderson, and in consequence, Thomas Sharkey will get the $10,000 that Fitzsimmons still believes rightfully belongs to him. In rendering the decision, Judge Sanderson said that it was the first time the case had been presented to the court, as the former proceedings were to take depositions. The complaint stated that the permit was for a boxing contest. A glance at the dictionary would show the gentlemen that boxing and fighting were synonymous words. If the men were boxing they were fighting. It was elementary law, and if the complaint was true the principals might be indicted, and those who witnessed it were liable to arrest for misdemeanor. The court ordered the injunction dissolved and the complaint stricken from the files of the court. Fitzsimmons, who was in court to hear the decision, went away very much crestfallen. Sharkey was not there. The $10,000 check is still in the possession of the bank, where it will remain until all doubt as to the owner is removed. Manager Lilienthal said he would not pay the money over until advised to do so by his attorneys. Unless some other impediment should present itself the money will probably change hands today.

ENGLAND'S EARTHQUAKE.

The Seismic Disturbance Extended over an Area of Hundreds of Miles.

London, Dec. 18.—The area of yesterday's seismic disturbance was unusually wide, extending hundreds of miles, from London north to Lincoln, thence west to Lancashire, south through Wales to Taunton, and southeast to Southampton, over two hundred towns and villages being affected. There were, however, no fatalities except in the case of the woman who died from fright at Hereford. The telegraph lines were not affected. The attaches at the Greenwich observatory say that the galvanometre, which registers the earth currents, showed a very slight disturbance at the time of the shocks. The authorities at the Stoneyhurst observatory say that their galvanometres showed no indication whatever of a seismic disturbance.

Gov.-elect Black's Visit to New York City.

New York, Dec. 18.—The object of the conference yesterday between Gov.-elect Frank S. Black and Gov. Morton at the residence of the latter on Fifth avenue, it is now said, was to arrange about the appointment of railroad commissioners. Gov. Morton is anxious, it is stated, that his private secretary, Ashley W. Cole, should have a place on the commission. There is a strong rumor afloat that Mr. Black will appoint Mr. Cole in deference to Mr. Morton's wishes. Lou Payne, who, rumor has it, will be the next superintendent of the insurance department, was closeted with Mr. Black before his departure for Troy. The governor-elect was reticent about the case of Frederick P. Morris, whom he has named as his staff paymaster-general. He said, however, that the case would be considered. It is claimed that Mr. Morris is ineligible because of his alleged expulsion from the National Guard, of which he was once a member.

BAYARD AT BRISTOL

The Ambassador Visits the Birthplace of His Great-Grandfather.

GUEST OF MERCHANT VENTURERS

Dined by the Chamber of Commerce and Later Distributed Prizes to the Students of the Technical School.

Bristol, Dec. 18.—Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, the American ambassador, arrived here yesterday in response to an invitation to distribute the prizes and deliver an address to the students at the annual commencement of the Technical school of the Society of Merchant Venturers. Mr. Bayard was invited to be present at the commencement for the reason that his great-grandfather on the maternal side belonged to a distinguished family of Bristol merchants. His great-grandfather was born in Bristol in 1709, and subsequently settling in Philadelphia, was mayor of that city, as his father before him had been mayor of Bristol. The Society of Merchant Venturers is one of the surviving mediaeval guilds. During the middle ages it had practical control of the maritime enterprises of the then highly active and progressive city of Bristol. It was while the society was in the fullness of its power that the Cabot expeditions of 1497 and 1498 were made, resulting in the discovery of the North American continent and the pre-emption of the continent for the English-speaking race. Since the society ceased to be a practical agent in the maritime commerce of the world it has devoted its surplus revenues to beneficent objects, one of its creations being the Technical college. As Mr. Bayard is a lineal descendant of an ancient mayor of Bristol and a member of the Merchant Venturers, his presence at yesterday's ceremonies was particularly appropriate. He took luncheon with the council of the Bristol chamber of commerce in the board room of the council. Replying to a toast to the health of the guest of the occasion, Mr. Bayard said that there was much in the hearts of Americans to-day to make them look upon England as their old home. The ties of blood, he said, were thicker than water. Continuing, he expressed the hope that when he returned to America no cloud would obstruct the vision of any just-minded man. Mr. Bayard concluded by declaring his belief that the peace existing between the two English-speaking nations would never be broken. Subsequently Mr. Bayard went to the Technical school, where he was received by the board of directors, the professors, members of the company and the civic officers. The room in which the distribution of the prizes was to take place was crowded. After several addresses had been made to the students Mr. Bayard was introduced, and was received with hearty applause. He made a speech in which he praised the great educational work that was being done by the Society of Merchant Venturers. He said the more the peoples of Great Britain and the United States were educated the less cause there would be for differences. There was not now one cause of difference between the two countries that justice, reason and moderation could not amicably arrange. Mr. Bayard briefly referred to the fact of his being a descendant of one of the old-time Bristol merchants, and then proceeded to distribute the prizes that had been awarded to the successful students, speaking a few words to each prize winner. The ambassador was warmly applauded when he had finished his part in the exercises.

Price of Coal Reduced.

New York, Dec. 18.—As a result of the accumulation of anthracite coal at tidewater and at storage points there have, it is said, been some concessions in price. One or two companies which bring large amounts of coal to tidewater have offered coal at reduced prices in order to empty cars. The production of coal for the eleven months ending December 31, which covers the period in which the combination has been in existence, will be a little under 40,000,000 tons, against 42,700,000 tons in the corresponding period in 1895. Production of all kinds for the entire year will be approximately 43,300,000 tons, against 46,000,000 tons last year.

Corbett Signs To Fight.

New York, Dec. 18.—Dan Stuart, the Texan promoter of prize fights, met James Corbett late yesterday afternoon at Taylor's hotel in Jersey City and Corbett signed articles for a fight with Fitzsimmons for a purse of $15,000. Stuart will try to get Fitzsimmons' signature immediately.

COMING EVENTS.

Dec. 18--Lecture of Joseph Lowden in Vincent chapel.

The total vote cast for Presidential electors at the recent contest was 13,900,000. The popular vote in 1892 was 12,110,000. In 1888 it was 11,400,000. There was as the recent election a fuller vote in proportion to the population than at any preceding Presidential contest.

Postmaster-General Wilson has extended the house-to-house collection and delivery system so as to provide for the sale of postage and special delivery stamps by letter carriers by means of the house collection and delivery boxes, and an official stamp-selling envelope has been approved to carry the project into effect.

Plainfield's citizens have taken up enthusiastically the prospect of giving a testimonial dinner to their retiring Mayor, Alexander Gilbert, on December 29. It is expected that 150 gentlemen will attend. Governor Griggs and Garret A. Hobart have been invited. The idea of signalizing in this way the end of a term of faithful service is a pleasant one, and would stand imitation elsewhere.—New York Tribune.

In the present House of Representatives, according to the classification of the Clerk, there are 12 Populists, 15 Fusionists, and 3 Silverites, a total of 30 representatives of organizations supporting Bryan at the recent election, against 124 straight Democrats, as they are called. The straight Democratic vote, so called, at the recent election was about 6,000,000 and the outside organizations polled collectively about one-twelfth as many, though they have one-fifth of the representation in Congress.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The subject of the Christian Endeavor service at the Park Avenue Baptist church this evening will be, "Lessons from the Life of Solomon." A hearty invitation is extended to all.

—A force of men were set to work early this morning cleaning the snow from the sidewalk on East Front street, near the corner of Church. The walk had been almost impassable, and while others had been notified and made to clear their walks this one was allowed to remain for some forty-eight hours, and until it had become so frozen that it had to be pried off with pick axes.

GAGGED AND BOBBED.

Mr. and Mrs. John McGrath Have an Unpleasant Experience.

A highway robbery near Franklin Park, on the line between Somerset and Middlesex counties, is reported as having occurred early last evening. Mr. and Mrs. John McGrath, of a small settlement known as the Sand Hills, were driving home on the road when two men drove up behind them. One of the men jumped from the carriage and seized the reins of McGrath's horse. The other drew a revolver and pointed it at the couple.

Mrs. McGrath screamed for help, and the man, still covering them with the revolver, then jumped from his own carriage and entered McGrath's. He gagged Mr. and Mrs. McGrath, who were powerless to resist. The two vehicles were drawn side by side and the highwayman transferred a large amount of groceries and merchandise to their own carriage. They also relieved McGrath of his gold watch and a small amount of money. They then drove away, leaving their victims gagged.

The robbery has been reported to police of Middlesex and Somerset counties.

A PEOPLE OF FEW WORDS

"Let your speech be yea, yea, and nay, nay," says the Good Book, "for whosoever is more than these cometh of evil The Shakers abide by the spirit of this rule. Their words are few, simple, sincere and direct. They waste no energy in idle talk; they use it in thinking and doing. And whatever they do they do with their might. They are content with nothing short of the essence and principle of the things they investigate. They take pains and are patient. And thus the doors of many strange truths open to them. In this way they discovered what may almost be called the unity of disease. A venerable Shaker says of it: "It is said that one man's meat is another man's poison. That is but half the truth. Any man's meat is any man's poison, under certain conditions. If the grain never got further than the hopper we should never have bread; and if bread never got further than the stomach we should never have strength. When the stomach is torpid, helpless and inflamed the food lies in it and rots. This fermentation produces poisons which may, and often do, disorder every other organ and function of the body. This is indigestion or dyspepsia, with many symptoms and disguises. Cure it and you cure ninetenths of your complaints." These words were uttered many years ago. Since then they have found a remedy, now known as the Shaker Digestive Cordial. It is made from medicinal plants cultivated by them. It is a food and digests other foods. Taken while eating it rests the stomach and nourishes the system. The pain and and distresses of dyspepsia disappear before it. It prevents fermentation and soon restores full power to the digestion. It succeeds in the worst cases. It is worthy the name of the people whose name it bears. Any druggist will sell you a trial bottle for ten cents.

PASSING COMMENT.

A rooster owned by James Radin, of North avenue, caused considerable merriment this noon by alighting on an electric light wire near the house. A crowd of boys gathered and after continual snowballing the rooster flew to a nearby building and then jumped to the ground.

* * * *

There was considerably less running for trains at the depot this morning, on account of the icy condition of the platform. The many narrow escapes within the past week have evidently served as a warning to many commuters who habitually come late for the morning trains.

* * * *

A passenger on one of the trolley cars Wednesday night, who takes a humorous view of life, even under aggravating circumstances, such as when it takes forty-five minutes to ride from the Y. M. C. A. building to the First Baptist church, penned these few lines while undergoing such an experience:

RAPID TRANSIT.

I once got on a trolley car.
Paid my fare but I didn't go far.
The bell was pulled and we started to go.
Then waited a time while men shoveled snow.

We stopped at points every twenty feet.
Ran off the track, then back we'd retreat.
I'd rather walked home and frozen my feet.
I never rode that way before.

The trolley, the trolley.
A modern convenience, 'tis Plainfield's pride
And when it's not running you most want to ride.
But the trolley, the trolley.
Is not worth a cent in the snow.

THEATRICAL.

"The Yellow Kid," the famous Mickey Dugan," is coming to Plainfield. He will be seen at the Stillman Music Hall, Christmas afternoon and night, appearing with Woolcott & Jackson's comedians in the new farce comedy "A Yellow Kid." A dramatic picture of the tricks, fortunes and adventures of the funny little fellows whose pictorial pranks in the New York Sunday papers, has been the laughing sensation of the year. The management promise an entertainment brimful of clean, honest fun from the rise to the fall of the curtain. The play will be given with special scenery. The company as announced is strong in comedy talent. Seats may be reserved in advance.

A Devotional Meeting.

The boys' branch, of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, of Grace P. E. church, held a devotional meeting last evening, which was led by Rev. Floyd Appleton The subject was "Church and Society," and the leader brought out many excellent points showing the relation between the two and yet how independent each are in their particular function. The next meeting will be held in two weeks.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN AND NEW MARKET.

Adam Dealaman was in New York yesterday attending to some important business transactions.

Miss Dunham, a sister of night operator Charles Dunham, has returned from a visit with relatives in Annandale.

Fred Nelson was out with his fast stepper and with a handsome cutter and cleared out everything of a trotting nature on the road.

Mrs. Joseph Noonan and Miss Gussie Foster have been "taking in" the holiday sights in the metropolis during the past day or two.

Almost everybody in Dunellen had money, yesterday, because the Central Railroad pay car came up and circulated hundreds of dollars among the employes.

Samuel Richardson, who recently returned home from a New York hospital after undergoing a difficult operation, is slowly but steadily regaining health.

Engineer John McCall is still confined to the house by illness, and will not be able to resume his duties for some time yet. Meanwhile Engineer Frank Maxwelll is running in his stead.

The residents of Dunellen are not so loud in their denunciation of the sewer farm as they were a few weeks ago. They have come to the conclusion that the beds will not be so detrimental to the public health after all.

School girls catching on sleighs is considered nothing unusual in country villiages, but in a borough of this size it seemed rather strange yesterday afternoon to see three young misses "catching on" to a box sleigh right in the heart of town, too.

The ice on the New Market pond which a week ago bid fair to yield a good crop, is now beyond redemption, and unless a genuine thaw sets in to take off the ten inches of snow, it may become necessary to flood the lake before any ice can be harvested.

I. J. Stites has been overrushed the past few days sharpering up and toeing shoes for horses, and although he has been obliged to labor some at night, he does not allow his work to interfere with his religious duties, and attends regularly the evening prayer meetings in his church.

Through the courtesy of John Burke, of this place, the members of the Corse Payton Comedy Company, now playing a week's engagement at Music Hall, Plainfield, were given a strawride yesterday afternoon. Their destination was Taylor's Hotel where they stopped and partook of light refreshments.

If anything, Dunellen's snow and ice ordinance is more rigidly enforced than the one in Plainfield and other nearby cities. The walks in front of most of the residences are passable, but some of the crosswalks are hardly so. Even the women folks in Dunellen, or, at least some of them, turn out and shovel the snow from in front of their residences.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Milligan have returned from their wedding trip, and last evening they were tendered a reception at the home of the groom's mother on Front street. Guests from Jersey City, Somerville, Brooklyn, Plainfield, Dunellen and New-Market were present to wish the newly wedded couple God-speed on their journey through life, and health and longevity in their married life.

SCOTCH PLAINS.

Several sleighing parties visited the Plains last evening, and enjoyed a dance in the parlors at the West Side Hotel.

Weather permitting and sleighing good a party of Westfield sleighriders will come to the Plains tonight on a straw ride.

The condition of Mr. McDonough whose serious illness has been reported in these columns from time to time has so far improved that he may be able to come to Plainfield on New Year's day and eat turkey with his son Peter.

Rheumatism is a Foe which gives no quarter. It torments its victims day and night. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood and cures the aches and pains of rheumatism.

Hood's Pills are the best family cathartic and liver medicine. Gentle reliable, sure.

—Jaquett, the gents' furnisher, of East Front street, has a very fine exhibition of a winter scene in his window. For artistic beauty it has seldom been equalled.

SONS OF OLD ELI DINE.

Yale's younger rival, who proved so successful on the football field this year, "Princeton," was represented by Leonidas Dennis. He remarked that on account of her victorious career of the last year, he thought that she deserved a more worthy representative than himself. He had written to President Patton, and read a portion of his answer. The latter referred to the future and confidently stated that Princeton intended to annex all the other universities some time in the future. The last year, Mr. Dennis said, was a great one for Princeton. This dream of greater Princeton might sound like a night mare but it showed the general trend of affairs and how the two universities are gradually drawing together, never, perhaps, to be initiated under the same faculty, but to go forward together.

"The Alumni" was answered by Dickinson W. Richards, president of the Essex County Yale Alumni Club. He brought, he said, the greetings of the oldest and most prolific alumni association in the country, which had, during the last decade, sent more freshmen to Yale per cubit foot of graduates, than any other association. What we need, he said, is not more men, but bigger ones, for only eleven men can go on the football field at once, and Princeton now has Grover Cleveland who pushed the entire English cabinet over the line. He then turned his remarks toward the college home of his listeners, and spoke of the changes there. The improvement in the facuity, he said during the last fifteen years was great, but he was not so sure about the students. He closed by expressing his thankfulness that he ever went to college, and especially to Yale.

Mr. Runyon's famous solo, "If I Were President" preceded the next speaker, James R. Joy, who answered to the toast "Our Club." He spoke of the fondness of Plainfield people for clubs and how the Yale men played an important part in many of them. The Yale Club, he said, is here to demonstrate the greatness of Yale in this city and her members impress it on all they come in contact with. He told of the growth of the club from thirteen members to forty-one after six years of existance and how well Plainfield has been represented among the under graduates at Yale.

The next senator from Somerset county, Chas. A. Reed, was called upon to answer to the toast "Rutgers Colleg." He said that now Yale and Princeton were growing in numbers and wealth, they would soon topple over and give the smaller colleges, like Rutgers, a chance. He told something of his college and illustrated his remarks by several humorous stories.

A selection by a quartette of Yale Alumni men followed and then Councilman-elect William N. Runyon was called on to say something. He responded by telling some of his experiences at college and how he had now changed under the present environments. Then he grew facetious, and told the visitors about the beauties of the city park, near by, with all its beautiful statues and then of the city "jug," which he declared was a perfect paradise for the entomologist.

A parting toast to Yale and several college songs followed and then the toastmaster dismissed them.

Electric Bitters

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. THE MISTRESS of the Mine.

or A Woman Intervenes.

By Robert Barr.

[Copyright, 1895, by Robert Barr.]

"Did you know that Longworth was in town?"

"No," said Kenyon, "I have been out of town myself."

"Yes, he came last night. He has the money in the bank, as I told you. Now I will not accept it until the very latest moment. Of course, legally, I cannot accept it before that time, and just as legally I cannot refuse his money when he tenders it. I am very sorry all this has happened, more sorry than I can tell you. I hope you will not think that I am to blame in the matter."

"No, you are not in the slightest to blame. There is nobody to blame except myself. I feel that I have been culpably negligent and altogether too trustful."

"I wish to goodness I knew where you could get the money, but, of course, if I knew that I would have had it myself long ago."

"I am very much obliged to you," said Kenyon, "but the only thing you can do for me is to see that your clock is not ahead of time to-morrow. I may perhaps be up at the office before 12 o'clock—that is where I shall find you, I suppose?"

"Yes, I shall be there all the forenoon. I shall not leave until 12."

"Very good; I am much obliged to you, Mr. Von Brent, for your sympathy. I assure you I haven't many friends, and it—well, I'm obliged to you, that's all. An Englishman, you know, is not very profuse in the matter of thanks, but I mean it."

"I'm sure you do," said Von Brent, "and I'm only sorry that my assistance cannot be something substantial. Well, good-by, hoping to see you to-morrow."

After he had departed, Kenyon's impatience increased as the hours went on. He left the hotel and went direct to the telegraph office, but nothing had come for him.

"I'm afraid," said the operator, "that there won't be anything more to-night. If it should come late, shall I send it to your hotel?"

"Certainly, no matter at what hour it comes; I wish you would let me have it as soon as possible. It is very important."

Leaving the office, he went up the street, and, passing the principal hotel in the place, saw young Longworth, as dapper and correct in costume as ever, his single eyeglass the admiration of all Ottawa, for there was not another like it in the city, standing under the portico of the hotel.

"How do you do, Kenyon?" said that young man.

"My dear sir," said Kenyon, "the last time you spoke to me you said you desired to have nothing more to say to me. I cordially reciprocated that sentiment, and I want to have nothing to say to you."

"My dear fellow," cried young Mr. Longworth jauntily, "there is no harm done. Of course, in New York I was a little out of sorts. Everybody is in New York—beastly hole. I don't think it is worse than Ottawa, but the air is purer here. By the way, perhaps you and I can make a little arrangement. I am going to buy that mine to-morrow, as doubtless you know. Now I should like to see it in the hands of a good and competent man. If a couple of hundred pounds a year would be any temptation to you, I think we can afford to let you develop the mine."

"Thank you," said Kenyon.

"I knew you would be grateful; just think over the matter, will you, and don't come to any rash decision. We can probably give a little more than that, but until we see how the mine is turning out, it is not likely we shall spend a great deal of money on it."

"Of course," said John, "the proper answer to your remark would be to knock you down, but, besides being a law-abiding citizen, I have no desire to get into jail to-night for doing it, because there is one chance in a thousand, Mr. Longworth, that I may have some business to do with that mine myself before 12 o'clock to-morrow."

"Ah, it is my turn to be grateful now," said Mr. Longworth. "In a rough-and-tumble fight I am afraid you would master me easier than you would do in a contest of diplomacy."

"Do you call it diplomacy? You refer, I suppose, to your action in relation to the mine. I call it robbery."

"Oh, do you? Well, that is the kind of conversation which leads to breaches of the peace, and as I, also, am a law-abiding citizen, I will not continue the discussion any further. I bid you a very good evening, Mr. Kenyon." Saying which the young man turned into the hotel. John walked to his own much more modest inn and retired for the night. He did not sleep well. All night long phantom telegraph messengers were rapping at the door, and he started up every now and then to receive cablegrams which faded away as he awoke. Shortly after breakfast he went to the telegraph office, but found that nothing had arrived for him.

"I am afraid," said the operator, "that nothing will arrive before noon."

"Before noon!" echoed John. "Why?"

"The wires are down in some places in the east, and messages are delayed a good deal. Perhaps you noticed the lack of eastern news in the morning papers. Very little news came from the east last night." Seeing John's look of anxious interest, the operator continued: "Does the dispatch you expect pertain to money matters?"

"Yes, it does."

"Do they know you at the bank?"

"No, I don't think they do."

"Then if I were you I would go up to the bank to be identified, so that, if it is a matter of minutes, no unnecessary time may be lost. You had better tell them that you expect a money order by telegram, and, although such orders are paid without any identification at the bank, yet they take every precaution to see that it does not get into the hands of the wrong man."

"Thank you," said Kenyon, "I am much obliged to you for your suggestion. I will act upon it." And as soon as the bank opened John Kenyon presented himself to the cashier.

"I am expecting a large amount of money from England to-day. It is very important that, when it arrives, there shall be no delay in having it placed at my disposal. I want to know if there are any formalities to be gone through?"

"Where is the money coming from?" said the clerk.

"It is coming from England."

"Is there anyone in Ottawa who can identify you?"

"Yes, I know the telegraph operator here."

"Ah," said the cashier, somewhat doubtfully, "anybody else?"

"Mr. Von Brent knows me very well."

"That will do. Suppose you get Mr Von Brent to come here and identify you as the man who bears the name of Kenyon. Then the moment your cablegram comes the money will be at your disposal."

Kenyon hurried to Von Brent's rooms and found him alone. "Will you come down to the bank and identify me as Kenyon?"

"Certainly. Has the money arrived?"

"No, it has not, but I expect it, and want to provide for every contingency. I do not wish to have any delay in my identification when it does come."

"If it comes by cable," said Von Brent, "there will be no need of identification. The bank is not responsible, you know. They take the money entirely at the sender's risk. They might pay it to the telegraph operator who receives the message; I believe they would not be held liable. However, it is better to see that nothing is left undone."

Going over to the bank Von Brent said to the cashier: "This is John Kenyon."

"Very good," replied the cashier. "Have you been at the telegraph office lately, Mr. Kenyon?"

"No, I have not; at least not for half an hour or so."

"Well, I would go there as soon as possible, if I were you."

"That means," said Von Brent, as soon as they had reached the door, "that they have had their notice about the money. I believe it is already in the bank for you. I will go back to my rooms and not leave them till you come."

John hurried to the telegraph office. "Anything for me yet?" he said.

"Nothing as yet, Mr. Kenyon. I think, however," he added, with a smile, "that it will be all right. I hope so."

The moments ticked along with their usual rapidity, yet it seemed to Kenyon the clock was going fearfully fast. Eleven o'clock came and found him still pacing up and down the office of the telegraph. The operator offered him the hospitality of the private room, but this he declined. Every time the machine clicked John's ears were on the alert trying to catch a meaning from the instrument.

Ten minutes after 11.

Twenty minutes after 11, and still no dispatch! The cold perspiration stood on John's brow and he groaned aloud.

"I suppose it is very important," said the operator.

"Very important."

"Well, now, I shouldn't say so, but I know the money is in the bank for you. Perhaps if you went up there and demanded it they would give it to you."

It was 25 minutes past the hour when John hurried up toward the bank. "I have every belief," he said to the cashier, "that the money is here for me now. Is it possible for me to get it?"

"Have you the cablegram?"

"No, I have not."

"Well, you see, we cannot pay the money until we see the cablegram to the person for whom it is intended. If time is of importance, you should not leave the telegraph office, and the moment you get your message come here; then there will be no delay whatever. Do you wish to draw all the money at once?"

"I don't know how much there is, but I must have £20,000."

"Very well, to save time, you had better make out a check for £20,000—that will be—" and here he gave the number of dollars at the rate of the day on the pound. "Just make out a check for that amount and I will certify it. A certified check is as good as gold. The moment you get your message I will hand you the certified check."

John wrote out the order and handed it to the cashier, glancing at the clock as he did so. It was now 25 minutes of 12. He rushed to the telegraph office with all the speed of which he was capable, but met only a blank look from the chief operator.

"It has not come yet," he said, shaking his head.

Gradually despair began to descend on the waiting man. It was worse to miss everything now than never to have had the hope of success. It was like hanging a man who had once been reprieved. He resumed his position from the map

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redying. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry work will receive your work.

50,000 ORPHAN CHILDREN.

The Recent Armenian Massacres Leave the Christian World a Serious Problem.

Washington, Dec. 18.—Fifty thousand Armenian children made orphans by the Turkish massacres, is the official estimate received at the state department from United States Consul Bergholtz at Erzeroum. A report just received from the consul shows that the missions are considering means of relief, and that the British government contemplates sending widows and their children to Cyprus. "The question of what shall be done with these 50,000 orphans is receiving the attention of the christian world. The American board of commissioners for foreign missions is giving the matter serious thought," says Consul Bergholtz, "As far as I am aware the board has formulated no general plan of relief, although the question of creating orphanages, clothing factories and industrial institutions is under consideration. German charitable or religious societies are preparing to establish industrial orphan asylums at Oorpha, Cesarea and elsewhere, and the Kaiserswerth Deaconesses of Germany had made provision for receiving Armenian orphans, and thirty have been sent there from here. The British government or its ambassador at Constantinople has initiated a movement leading towards settling a number of widows and their children on the island of Cyprus, more particularly at present, at least those within the province of Erzeroum, which number in the cities of Erzeroum, Ersignan and Baibourt 2,049, who are without means and are recipients of relief. In Erzeroum there are 180 widows, with 700 children; in Ersignan, 100 widows, with 450 children, and in Baibourt, 119 widows and 500 children."

FOR $100,000 DAMAGES.

James Crossley Sues the Newark Fidelity Title and Deposit Company.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 18.—James E. Crossley, formerly of Barre, Mass., now of East Orange, N. J., has begun a suit for $100,000 damages against the Fidelity Title & Deposit company of this city for alleged defamation of character, and a prosecution of Henry A. Jansen, agent of the company, for criminal libel. Crossley was appointed guardian of the estate of Miss C. Victoria Peddie, daughter of the late millionaire trunk manufacturer. He neglected to qualify and Judge Kirkpatrick revoked the order and appointed the Fidelity company as guardian. Miss Peddie appealed and the company sent Jansen to Barre to look up Mr. Crossley. He reported that Crossley's reputation was bad. This report was placed in an affidavit and presented in court. The case is under advisement before Chancellor McGill, before whom recently the New York Surety company refused to surrender $80,000 in bonds held as security against the late Thomas B. Crossley, James' brother, who formerly was Miss Peddie's guardian.

HERRMANN'S DEATH

News of the Sad Event a Great Shock to Theatrical Circles.

TAKEN OFF WITHOUT WARNING

Appeared in Good Health When He Boarded His Car at Rochester—Career of the Late Famous Magician.

New York, Dec. 18.—News of the sudden death of Prof. Alexander Herrmann came as a great shock to his many friends in club and theatrical circles in this city. The professor was as well as usual when he left Rochester yesterday, having completed his engagement there Wednesday night. He had passed the night in his private car, which was being drawn to Bradford, Pa., and was in bed when word was sent that medical assistance was required. A telegram was rushed to Great Valley to have a physician in attendance, but before a doctor could get to the car Prof. Herrmann was dead. The car was taken on to Salamanca with the body. It is believed that death was caused by rheumatism of the heart. One of the last acts of Mr. Herrmann was to extend financial assistance to a theatrical company which stranded here last week. He heard of this Wednesday and immediately telephoned to the hotel where the company was stopping to send him the bill and to tell all the members to come and meet him and he would have their railroad tickets to New York ready. This was only one instance of his generosity.

Alexander F. Herrmann, the famous magician, was a German. His father was a celebrated physician in his day and had a very large practice in Paris, where he settled soon after his marriage. Herrmann was born in Paris about fifty years ago. His father was one of the best magicians in Europe, but made no use of his powers in public. Herrmann's eldest brother adopted magic as a profession when a boy and wanted Alexander to act as his assistant. His father objected, and Alexander was kidnapped by his brother and taken to St. Petersburg when he was 11 years old. Within three years he was far more clever than his brother, and at the age of 14 he ceased to act with him, went alone to Spain, and made his debut before the queen. From this time Herrmann was the recognized master of hand magic. He made his first appearance in America at the Academy of Music, New York, about twenty-five years ago, and since then he took out his papers of citizenship and fixed his permanent residence in this country. He made three tours of the world and possessed medals and tokens from the rulers of almost every nation. He spoke Spanish, German, French, Chinese and Russian as well as he did English. He wrote a great deal for newspapers and magazines, built two theatres, was interested in many theatrical ventures and made and lost a great deal of money on Wall street. He always travelled in his own parlor car, and carried from four to five horses in a car built for their accommodation. He owned one of the largest steam yachts in the New York Yacht club and a park and villa on Long Island Sound and belonged to over 100 clubs in Europe and America.

WAR OVER SNOW PILES.

the snow in front of Mr. Carey's place was not piled there by the street railway plows as there had been no snow on the tracks there, the wind having blown it all away. Mr. Carey didn't agree with him and their conversation soon came to an end.

Mr. Carey's men still continued to dig away at the bank of snow, but they did not throw it on the tracks any longer. Meanwhile Adlemann's men had removed the snow from in front of the cars and under the wheels After several unsuccessful attempts the three cars finally went ahead just as the fourth car appeared in the distance. The first car went forward immediately after being stalled in the snow for nearly three quarters of an hour. The fourth car plowed through the snow and reached the other side at the first attempt, after which one of the company's snow plows, drawn by two horses, which had arrived on the scene during the last of the excitement, went to work removing the rest of the snow from the tracks where it had been thrown.

Seeing that the fun was over most of the crowd moved on while Mr. Carey's men, who had completed their job, also left the scene.

AT THE CARD TABLES.

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Woolston Entertained the Jolly Whist Club.

It fell to the lot of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Woolston, of the borough, to entertain the Jolly Whist Club last evening and the members agreed that they never had a better time. One important feature of the event was that Peter Emmons secured a prize. Mr. Emmons has been trying very hard to get a prize ever since he has been a member and his playing last night rewarded his efforts. It was second prize, and was a dainty china cup and saucer. The first prize for the women was a pair of Dresden china vases, and they were won by Mrs. Peter Emmons. A handsome silk lined photograph was the second prize secured by Mrs. John Emmons. Hiram Woodruff secured an elaborate footrest as first prize for the men. The serving of refreshments after the game brought to a close an evening of genuine pleasure.

Those present were:—Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Woolston, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Buckle, Mr. and Mrs. John Whitenack, Mr. and Mrs. R. I. Tolles, Mr. and Mrs. John Emmons, Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. Emmons, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Woodruff.

Stole a Harness.

Robert Hohenstein, a grain dealer of Westfield, reported to the authorities yesterday that his barn had been broken open some time Tuesday night and a set of harness stolen. About 2 o'clock in the afternoon James Harrison, who lives near Graceland, was making his way through the snow toward Westfield, when he kicked a sack that was covered up in the snow. Investigation showed that the sack contained a set of harness. On a piece of brown paper tied to one of the buckles was written: "This is the property of Robert Hohenstein, Westfield." When the harness was taken to Hohenstein he identified it as being his property. Why the person or persons who took the harness should abandon their plunder and attach the owners name to it is a mystery.

—The Scott and Potter bowling teams will bowl the first in a series of games on the West Second street alleys tonight.

SUDDEN, BUT EXPECTED

R. G. HORR DIES WHEN IT WAS THOUGHT HE WAS IMPROVING.

It Was Not Expected That He Would Live Long, Though His Demise at the Moment Came Without Much Warning.

Ex-Congressman Roswell G. Horr, statesman and orator, passed away at his home, 808 Park avenue, last evening at about 11 o'clock. The end came suddenly and without warning.

For some time Mr. Horr has been suffering with Bright's disease, but it was not until he returned, tired out with the last campaign, in which he played a very active part, that he was taken seriously ill. An acute attack of bronchitis made a dangerous combination with the kidney trouble. For nearly three weeks Mr. Horr lay between life and death; the doctors said that there was a chance that he might live and his family watched closely over him and hoped for the best. Several nights ago he began to sink and it was thought that the end was near at hand, but he rallied after Dr. Hedges had worked over him for several hours and slept comfortably for the rest of the night.

Yesterday he appeared to be gaining and talked with his family, seeming in very good spirits. Last evening Dr. E. W. Hedges came to the house and remained for several hours. Mr. Horr was sitting up in a chair as he seemed unable to rest on the bed. At ten o'clock he was taken with a spasm that lasted for a few moments. He all right then, however, and took some coffee and crackers with evident relish. Soon after that his daughter, Mrs. M. H. Eward, and her husband retired to their room while Mrs. Horr, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Hebard, Frank A. Horr, and the doctor remained at the bedside conversing with the sick man. At about 11 o'clock he was taken ill with another spasm, more severe than the first. He complained of feeling faint and then his head drooped back and all was over. Mrs. Hebard had hurried to call Mr. and Mrs. Eward but before they could reach the beside the spirit had fled. The others were in the room at the time.

The other son, Rolland A. Horr, was telegraphed for at once and will arrive tonight or tomorrow. He was here at Thanksgiving time when he came east on his wedding trip and visited his father.

Roswell G. Horr was born in Waitsfield, Vt., on November 26, 1830, but when he was a child his parents moved to Lorain County, Ohio, and it was in the Buckeye State that he spent his youth. He grew up a sturdy, industrious and ambitious young man, and improved all the opportunities he had to get a good education. He taught school in Lorain County to pay part of his expenses in Antioch College, from which he graduated in 1857. Before he left college he began making campaign speeches, and exhibited something of the ability which afterward made him known as one of the most effective stump speakers in the country.

He was a Republican at the birth of the party, and he took an active part in politics in his own county as soon as he left college. He was appointed clerk of the Court of Common Pleas in Lorain County, and served two terms. While he held the office he studied law, and in 1866 he was admitted to the bar. Instead of settling down to the practice of law, however, he went into Eastern Missouri and engaged in mining operations. He continued to speak in political campaigns, and in 1872, when he began the practice of law in East Saginaw, Mich., he took an active interest in the Presidential compaign, and made speeches in many parts of Michigan. His reputation as a campaign orator gained for him a lucrative law practice.

In 1878 Mr. Horr was elected to Congress from the VIIIth Michigan District, and he was re-elected in 1880 and 1882. As a Representative in Congress he earned the reputation of being a fine debater, and a number of his speeches attracted widespread attention. His humor made his speeches most effective on many occasions. In an attack on a River and Harbor Appropriation bill he once convulsed the entire House of Representatives with laughter by pretending to urge the claims of some back-country mud creek for a large appropriation, and he made the entire country understand how ridiculously large were some of the items in the appropriation bill. On one occasion he replied to some personal ridicule directed at him by the late S. S. Cox, and the Congressman from New York was placed in such a ludicrous light that he lost his temper and declined to speak to Mr. Horr for several days. Mr. Horr was defeated for re-election to Congress in 1884, when he made cam-

ABOUT THE PEN PUSHERS

YOUNG PEOPLE HEAR AN INTERESTING TALK ABOUT JOURNALISM.

Joseph D. Lowden, City Editor of the Elizabeth Journal, Tells of Some of the Characteristics of Successful Reporters.

The young people's literary society of the First M. E. church enjoyed a rather novel and pleasing programme at their regular meeting last evening, when Joseph D. Lowden, city editor of the Elizabeth Journal, gave a talk on "Newspapers and Newspaper Workers." Mr. Lowden has been associated with newspaper work for many years, and he has gained much valuable knowledge which makes him an interesting speaker.

In the talk he gave last evening there abounded a great deal of genuine humor which was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Incidentally, he said that he did not know that he was to be the star of the evening by being the only speaker. Continuing, he said in part:

"Newspaper people are not different from other people, though they are wonderfully made. Journalism is almost as old as time though it did not attain to any great degree of success in the early history of England. The first American newspaper was published in Boston by John Harris, and the paper was not a great success, from the fact that it began to publish a list of all the liars in the town.

"Newspaper men have a varied experience, and a reporter, if a good one, is vigilant. Many young men, as reporters, are dashed on the rocks of newspaperdom by allowing themselves to yield to temptation. The reporter becomes the associate of men far above and below him in life, and he has to be watchful in his business.

"Few people know when they are reading their paper what dark valleys had to be passed to obtain the news and what dangers were encountered.

"Invariably newspaper men do more good work than detectives, as Inspector Byrnes or Chief Grant will admit. There is a story told about a widow, who, after her husband's death, sold some goods to a peddler. Among the goods was a Bible in which was contained considerable family history. The widow did not know that she had sold the Bible, until one day the peddler returned with it and wanted to sell it to her. She replied by saying that she did not want it, as The Plainfield Daily Press told her all that she wanted to know. The above story illustrates how a person will become attached to their paper and will have nothing else. When a reporter is given an assignment he is supposed to cover it, and if he is a good reporter he will do so."

Mr. Lowden gave several incidents of how reporters surmounted difficulties in obtaining news. He said that he was once a reporter and he liked to speak in praise of them, and he concluded his remarks by saying that a reporter should be honest, and if he is sure that he is right he should then go ahead.

Previous to Mr. Lowden's talk, Charles H. Angleman sang two pleasing solos, accompanied by Miss Sharp, on the piano, and at the close he rendered two comic songs, all of which were accorded hearty applause. Mr. Lowden was also extended the hearty thanks of the society for his enjoyable talk.

Miss Angleman, as chairman of the literary committee, occupied the chair and introduced the speaker of the evening.

Firemen's Fair Closes Tonight.

Tonight the firemen's fair will close and during the week the people have given substantial patronage. Last night there was a very large crowd present to enjoy the several features offered. The phonograph is still one of the greatest features. Mr. Schaefer has added several new selections including the "Night Alarm," which is considered one of the best ever produced. In every detail it is perfect. The other selections are all exceeding fine. Tonight several additional features will be provided.

Carpet Works Resume.

The carpet works on South avenue, after a shut down of several months, will commence work at full capacity next Monday. Already a number of the old employes are at work on orders received a short time ago. A number of heavy orders are expected that will keep the looms running at full capacity for an indefinite time. Proprietor Bronson will give all the former hands employment.

POTTER'S FINALLY WON.

BUT THE SCOTT BOWLERS PRESSED THEIR OPPONENTS VERY HARD.

At the Beginning of the Last Frame it Looked as Though Scott's Might Catch Up, But Potter's Last Men Bowled High

There was lots of excitement at the bowling match between the ten men teams from the Potter and Scott Press Works, on the Ulrich alleys, last evening. The Potter boys won, however, after a hard fought game, but only by a small margin. The game was anybodies to the finish, but the Potter team managed to obtain a lead in the start and held it to the end, although closely pressed by their opponents all through the game. The windup was particularly exciting, and the rooters that accompanied each team shouted themselves hoarse in their efforts to encourage their team on to victory. At the beginning of the last frame it looked as if the Scott boys might catch up at the last moment and win the game, but the last bowlers on the other side woke up to the necessity of high scores, and the victory, therefore, went to the Potter team.

The individual scores were as follows:

POTTERS.		SCOTTS.
Gallegar	194	Wilson	107
Sturley	119	Bittle	142
Mattox	97	Adams	116
Marsh	115	Smith	93

NOTES AMONG STUDENTS

PLENTY OF ACTIVITY AT THE HIGH SCHOOL AT PRESENT.

Arranging For Christmas Exercises—Borough and City Consolidation to Be Debated by the Kappa Delta Phi.

Only three more days and then the students at the Plainfield High School will be enjoying their Christmas vacation. Everything is going on in its usual manner. The year has been a prosperous one for all. Preparations are now going forward for the Christmas exercises which will be the best ever held in the school. The regular exercises in Assembly hall will be held Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock. There will be recitations, music and a few words from Superintendent Maxson. Aside from tenors, the school chorus is unusually strong this year and to make up for the loss in the one part, Elmer E. Runyon will be over that morning to help the tenors out. Charles Lewis, who is now teaching singing at the High School, has made some excellent selections in the way of Christmas carols which are being practiced twice a week. A special rehearsal of them will be held on Tuesday morning.

Then the Seniors are preparing for their annual ceremonies that always come at Christmas-tide and they refuse to divulge the secrets for that occasion.

Steady progress is being made in lessons and the next examinations, which arrive about the first of February, are still too far off to cause worry.

Superintendent Maxson gave a little talk yesterday morning which was full of good advice.

Interest in the Kappa Delta Phi has greatly increased during the last few weeks and the society is going forward with great strides. A meeting of that organization was held yesterday afternoon in the High School building. The programme consisted of a debate on the subject, "Has machinery been, on the whole, beneficial to the laboring classes?" The affirmative was taken by Charles Noble, '97, and Henry W. Brower, '98. The speakers for the negative were Sydney R. Titsworth, '97, and Arthur Lederer, '98. The debate was very close and exciting and was finally won by the affirmative.

The most important business was the election of officers, which resulted as follows: President, Sydney R. Titsworth, '97; vice-president, Arthur W. Lederer, '98; secretary, Charles Noble, '97; critic, Henry W. Brower, '98; sergeant-at arms, Stanley Peck. A committee was appointed to complete the plans for the changing of the society into a secret fraternity. The committee was composed of Charles R. Morse, '95, chairman; Henry Eggerding, '96, and Henry W. Brower, '98.

A programme was arranged for the first meeting in January, which will be on Friday, January 8th. It will consist of a debate on the subject, "Would it be to the advantage of the borough of North Plainfield to be annexed to the city of Plainfield as a part of Union county?" Henry W. Brower, '98, will act as principal on the affirmative side while Sydney R. Titsworth, '97, will be the leader of the other side. All the members of the society will be called to speak on one side or the other according to their opinions.

HE PUZZLED THE PARKS

A MAGICIAN KEPT THE MEMBERS GUESSING WITH HIS TRICKS.

The Assembly Hall of the Club House Filled With Guests Who Enjoyed the Entertainment With Much Pleasure.

No matter what may be going on in the rest of the city, the Park Club is always alive. Last evening the attraction was an entertainment given to the mambers and their friends in the dainty little hall of the club. An extra supply of camp chairs was on hand and the hall was well filled with the members, their families and a few of their invited friends. There was that delightful informality about it that has made the affairs at the Park so uniformly successful.

The programme opened with two solos by that well known baritone, Alfred E. Holmes, whose singing was up to his usual excellent standard. The rest of the evening was turned over to Prof. Russell, a prestidigitateur of wonderful ability. First, his assistant did a few simple but puzzling tricks with apparatus, then the professor began his entertainment and kept his audience in a whirl of amazement at his wonderful performances. His control over the cards was remarkable and the quick manner in which he changed them was astonishing.

Everybody was delighted with the entertainment and the house committee came in for lots of credit. The floor was cleared and an informal little dance followed in which the younger set took part.

ADVOCATES NEW COUNTY

W. E. HONEYMAN WOULD LIKE CONSOLIDATION BY SUCH A METHOD.

Thinks That Borough and City Should be One in Government as it is in Other Things if the Tax Problem Can be Adjusted.

Among the valued opinions which The Daily Press has already published, regarding borough and city annexation, the following from Rev. W. E. Honeyman, of Lincoln place, secretary of the Borough Board of Health, will be read by many with a great deal of interest.

When Mr. Honeyman was asked what he thought of annexation, he replied that he was much inclined to think the same as Senator Reed. Continuing, Mr. Honeyman spoke in part as follows:

"Two governments in places so nearly joined as the city and borough do not offer the best possible advantages that are to be obtained from a single government.

"In the first place, there are difficulties existing between the two Boards of Health, which would be obviated if we were one city, and then there is the saloons. In the borough they can keep open all night, while in the city they are forced to close at 11 o'clock in the evening. Under one government these institutions would be managed far better. As it is now, after 11 o'clock in the evening the borough is a receptacle for a class of undesirable people who make the night hideous after they have visited our saloons. In a great many respects our interests are one, and yet the simple question of taxes is the all important consideration. If this question can be settled satisfactory I can see no reason why there should not be a union. I think the sewer question could be solved and adjusted amicably, though at present there seems to be a dispute as to the success of the city's system of sewage.

"I would not be in favor of having the borough annexed to the city, but I would heartily endorse an action that would make a new county and have Plainfield as the county seat. Such places as Dunellen, South Plainfield, Scotch Plains, Fanwood, ought to be united with the city and borough in one county. It would be contrary to reason to suppose that the Legislature would take a small place and annex it to a much stronger one when there is no urgent necessity for it. But after all the question hinges on the taxes. If, by annexation, our taxes our going to be higher we might better remain where we are, and I doubt if you could get a corporal's guard to vote for higher taxes, for the purpose of being annexed. If our taxes would remain the same proportionately there is nothing that I can see to block annexation.

"There are many good reasons why there should be a new county as I have stated above, for we would be able to legislate directly for bests interests of the people and we would be able to handle many important matters, which are now left to people who are entirely ignorant of our needs."

THIEVES GET A BIG HAUL

STOLE $2,500 FROM THE CRANFORD POSTOFFICE LAST NIGHT.

Gained an Entrance Through a Rear Window and Blew the Safe Door Off With Giant Powder—No Clew to the Thieves.

The postoffice at Cranford, located in the opera house block on North avenue, was broken into at 2.30 this morning and the safe blown open and $2,000 in stamps and $500 in cash stolen.

The burglars bored a hole in the iron blind on the window in the rear of the office and gained an entrance by raising the window sash. Once inside they set to work to provide a means of quick exit when they had accomplished their purpose and to that end broke open the rear doors. Then they bored a hole in the safe door and filled it with giant powder and touched a match. The explosion tore the door off its hinges and blew it some distance away. The only things stolen were the stamps and the currency in bills. They left $5 in pennies beside the safe.

The noise of the explosion awakened a man by the name of Hopkins, who conducts an upholstery business in a room on the second floor over the rear of the postoffice. He jumped out of bed and looked out of the back window, and in a moment saw three men run out of the rear doors of the postoffice and start across the lot back of the office and disappear in the darkness. Hopkins hurriedly dressed and notified W. J. Hart, the janitor, who lives in the extreme end of the building.

The two men went to the office and found it full of smoke. They were unable to gain an entrance through the front of the office. Then they notified Postmaster John Derby, who came and made an investigation of the office. He found that nothing had been touched except the stamps and money in the safe.

There is no clew to who the robbers were as there was no suspicious persons seen about the town yesterday, except that Janitor Hart found a strange boy about twelve years of age loitering in the entrance to the opera house last night and asked him what he was doing there. He replied that he was waiting for his mother. The boy was poorly dressed and it is believed that he was a spy for the robbers. The burglars are supposed to be the same gang who entered the Summit postoffice a year ago and stole $1500. The police throughout this section have been notified.

Pit Holes Yawn For Hunters.

Hunters who have sought game in the wilds of Morris county during the present season tell of miraculous escapes they have experienced from plunging down deserted mine shafts and prospectors' pits. Some sections of the county are honeycombed with these man-traps. In some the original owners placed some sort of barrier about the mouths of the yawning holes, but that was so long ago that time and weather have destroyed the safeguards, and in nine cases out of ten deserted mine shafts and pits, varying from a few to hundreds of feet in depth, are standing menaces to life and limb of the unwary hunter or wanderer through the woods. In the vicinity of Chester and Hibernia these man-traps exist in numbers.

Won The Prize.

Some time ago it was announced to the members of the Junior League of Grace M. E. Church by the pastor that a prize would be given to the most successful member in a Bible story competition. On Friday the competition ended and the prize, a very pretty stick pin, was won by Miss Carrie Pangborne.

A DARING CAPTURE.

J. M. SMALLEY DISTINGUISHES HIMSELF BY STOPPING A RUNAWAY.

The Horse Was Plunging Along Park Avenue When Smalley Made His Attempt—Dragged For a Whole Block, Though.

For the second time within a month, J. M. Smalley, of Craig place, made a wonderful capture of a runaway horse at the risk of his own life.

A horse attached to a cutter belonging to Mrs. S. A. Cruikshank, of Belvidere avenue, was standing in front of L. A. Hummer's butcher shop on Park avenue, near North avenue, this morning about 10:45 o'clock. The horse was tied to the hitching post there while Mrs. and Miss Cruikshank walked down town to do some shopping. There was a blanket over the horse which flapped in the wind and finally worked over on one side. The horse was a spirited one, and restless from the wait it became frightened at the blanket that flapped about its heels. The horse gave a jump and the tie strap broke. Then the frightened animal started up the street.

J. M. Smalley was busy attending to the wants of his customers at his new store on Park avenue, just above Fourth street, when he heard the cry that a horse was running away. He rushed out just in time to reach the middle of the street before the horse passed. The horse swerved to one side and Mr. Smalley jumped for the sleigh in which the reins still hung. He grasped the side of the sleigh as it passed but it tipped at that moment and he was dragged along through the snow. For a block he clung persistently to the side of the sleigh while the passersby looked on with horror, expecting to see him killed. As the rig dashed by Fifth street, he made a great effort and drew himself over the back of the sleigh, caught the reins and brought the frightened horse to a standstill at the corner of Eighth street.

The horse and sleigh were then taken to Hedden's stable to await the arrival of their owner. There was no injury to sleigh or harness but there were several narrow escapes from a collision as the runaway dashed up Park avenue amid the other vehicles on that thoroughfare.

THE PYTHIANS CHOOSE OFFICERS.

Perseverance Lodge Honor Members by Giving Them Chairs.

The annual election of officers was the most important business to be transacted at the meeting of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., last evening. The election resulted as follows: Master of work, Thomas Milliken; chancellor commander, Robert Jackson; vice-chancellor, Edwin Mackey; prelate, William Young; master-at-arms, Donald McInnes; inner guard, J. Van Dyke; outer guard, James Armstrong; keeper of records and seals, Charles McGinley; master of exchequer, M. Turton; master of finance, John Wakefield; representative to the grand lodge, Jacob Blimm, Jr.; alternate, A. D. Pope; trustees, for three years, A. D. Pope; for two years, George H. Clash; for one year, Donald McInnes.

There was one candidate on whom the third rank was worked and then the members enjoyed a smoker, which was interspersed with an informal programme of talks and recitations. The evening proved to be a very delightful one.

Christmas Services at Park Ave. Church.

At the Park Avenue Baptist church on Sunday morning a special Christmas service will be held. The pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson, will preach a sermon appropriate to the occasion, and a musical programme has been arranged, including a solo by Charles Lewis, of the Crescent Avenue church quartette, with violin obligato by Miss Udell, of the Ladies' String Orchestra, of New York. Miss Udell will also render a violin solo.

Officers Nominated.

At the meeting of Miantonom Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., last evening, nomination of officers were made. At the next meeting the election will take place. Five candidates were given the hunters, warriors and chiefs degree. The trustees were authorized to arrange for the rental of a room for another year. A bountiful collation brought to a close an interesting meeting.

Had to Walk His Horse.

A man from Westfield was driving down East Fourth street yesterday in his sleigh when his runner caught in the car track and snapped. He patched it together the best he could and started to walk his horse all the way home. He refused to give his name.

The old lady was right when she said the child might die if they waited for the doctor. She saved the little one's life with a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure. She had used it for croup before. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

ITALY IS EXCITED

Whole Kingdom Discusses Yesterday's Fight in the Chamber.

A MOST DISGRACEFUL OCCURRENCE

Socialists' Papers Guarded in Their Comment on the Open and Direct Attack Upon the Monarchy.

Rome, Dec. 19.—All Italy is greatly excited to-day over last night's disgraceful scene in the chamber of deputies. Never before has such an open and direct attack been made upon the monarchy, and even the socialist newspapers are guarded in their comments of the occurrence. The row occurred upon the occasion of the allowance to be voted for the Prince of Naples, crown prince of Italy. In the course of the debate Signor Costa, socialist, denounced the proposal to grant an allowance to the crown prince and urged the abolition of all allowances to the crown. Continuing his speech, he declared that the monarchy was not only a useless, but a dangerous institution, whereupon the president of the chamber interrupted him and forbade him to speak further. A disgraceful uproar ensued, deputies jumping over benches and flying at one another's throats, while others exchanged knock-down blows. The tumult lasted some time, and when order was restored it was found that several deputies had been severely handled. When the chamber became comparatively quiet the Marquis di Rudini, prime minister, attempted to reply to Signor Costa, but his voice was drowned by the shouts and jeers of the socialists. Finally the bill granting an allowance of 1,000,000 francs was carried amid great confusion.

DENIES FRIZZELL'S STORY.

Mrs. Young Regains Consciousness and Denounces the Man Who Shot Her.

Plymouth, N. H., Dec. 19.—Mrs. Edith Caldon Young, who was shot in both ears last Wednesday by Harry Frizzell, regained consciousness yesterday and made a sworn statement before a justice. Frizzell shot Mrs. Young and then attempted to kill himself. He left a letter saying, in part, that Ede would die rather than leave him, and that they had determined to die together. A few hours after the shooting he regained consciousness and said that the shooting was done and the letter written at Mrs. Young's suggestion; that he loved her and that neither of them had a desire to live. The story told by Mrs. Young is entirely different, and contradicts young Frizzell in all particulars. She says she dispised Frizzell and had desired him to leave her boarding house; that she had no idea of killing herself, nor did she plan to have Frizzell shoot her. She did not know he was in the house until, when she was sitting in the dining room, she heard the door open and Frizzell entered. With an oath he threw his arm about her neck from behind and shot her in the ear. As showing premeditation, Frizzell bought the revolver less than a half hour before the deed. Frizzell is conscious to-day and keeps to his original story. The attending physician says that there is more than an even chance of both recovering.

HIS PRICE TOO HIGH.

Wm. J. Bryan Wanted a Guarantee of $3,500 To Lecture at Albany.

Albany, Dec. 19.—Several days ago a letter was written to Wm. J. Bryan's manager asking for terms and other information for a lecture by the late presidential nominee under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic of Albany county. In the reply, just received, it was stated: "We will book Mr. Bryan on the following terms: That we receive 75 per cent. of the gross receipts with a guarantee that our share would not be less than $3,500." The project has been given up as a losing venture as the men back of it could not see where the G. A. R. could come in if Mr. Bryan's manager wanted such a large guarantee.

He was a member of several prominent local clubs, was connected with the Philadelphia City troop of the National Guard and active socially.

SHOWN NO MERCY

The Rushville Lynchers Were Pitiless and Bloodthirsty.

NO TIME FOR PRAYER OR CONFESSION

Dink Proctor, One of the Three Men Killed, Had Always Been a Quiet Citizen---Efforts To Prosecute the Mob.

Rushville, Ky., Dec. 19.—Never in the history of this locality has there been such intense excitement as now prevails over the triple lynching and it is believed the governor will demand the arrest and punishment of all who participate in the bloody work whose identity can be established, in case the county officials fail to take promt action in the matter. The bloodthirsty mob came from Logan county, half of whom were from Adairville. They arrived at this town after midnight and killed three prisoners who were in the jail waiting for trial on the charges of murder and conspiracy. Arch Proctor, who murdered Aaron and "Doc" Crafton at Adairville, October 24, was taken from the jail with his father, Dink Proctor, charged with conspiracy in the Crafton case, and both men were hanged to the same tree just outside the town. Bill Proctor, a half brother of Dink, and credited with being a real desperado, who had terrorized the Adairville district for a score of years, was riddled with bullets in his cell, defying the mob to take him out alive and cursing them with his last breath. The man-hunters were pitiless and well organized. They refused to allow Arch Proctor to see his mother, who was sleeping in a neighboring hotel, before being deprived of life. The jailer pleaded with the mob not to lynch the men, and then made a special plea for Dink Proctor, who had always been a quiet citizen, the Crafton murders being the first trouble he had been mixed up in. But the only answer of the leader was "Dead men tell no tales." The mob attacked the jail door with sledge hammers and were soon inside. The keeper of the jail was forced on the peril of his life to deliver up the keys to the Proctor cells. The victims had been apprised of the coming of the lynchers and their intentions, none of the three being in bed at the time their cell doors were opened. They faced an excited, cursing mass of armed men. Bill Proctor, who was a powerful man, showed his desperate character when brought to bay. He swore no one would take him from his cell alive and no one cared to engage him in a test of physical strength to get him out alive. So one of the mob gave the signal for the murderer to be killed where he stood by shooting him with a pistol. A charge of buckshot entered the desperado's body the next second and he fell. As he lay on the floor writhing in pain a volley of lead from pistols were fired into the wretched man. When he seemed to be dead, a man entered the cell and placing a pistol barrel at Proctor's head, pulled the trigger to make sure that the most feared and murderous man of Logan county was dead. Then the mob turned their faces and weapons towards the cells of Dink Proctor and his son Arch. They were taken from their cells without resistance, the jailer's pleas were unheeded and the hands of the victims bound. The prisoners were taken to a three-limbed cedar on the Nashville road. The empty limb was intended for Bill Proctor and on the other two limbs were strung father and son, without giving either time for speeches, confessions or prayers. Mrs. Proctor, the wife and mother, who had come to attend the examining trial, was sleeping in a hotel unconscious of the tragedy which was being enacted close at hand, and by order of the leaders the processsion to the improvised gallows was not allowed to stop at the hotel to grant the last pitiful plea of Arch to say goodbye to his mother.

HIS SIXTH ELECTION.

Vermont Again Sends Justin S. Morrill to the Senate.

Senator Justin Smith Morrill, who has just been reelected senator from Vermont, has spent most of his life in Washington as congressman or senator. He is truly a senator, for Mr. Morrill will be 87 years of age on April 14 next. Aged as he is his mind is still vigorous and he is a statesman capable, in the opinion of the people and the legislature of Vermont, of representing that state among the old and wise men at

He got his early education in the common schools and built upon that foundation at an academy, but never went to college. He began life as a merchant, but preferred agriculture, to which he devoted some years. He was elected to the Thirty-fourth congress and was returned five times as representative. In 1867 he was made senator to succeed Luke L. Poland, a union republican, and was reelected in 1872, 1878, 1884 and 1890. In 1880 Senator Morrill was made a regent of the Smithsonian institution and has held that position ever since. Seldom has any state so highly honored one of her sons as Vermont has Mr. Morrill. For 50 years he has been a senator, and if he completes this new term he will eclipse all former records for length of service.

Sharkey Gets the Purse.

San Francisco, Dec. 19.—The door of the Anglo-Californian bank was not one minute opened yesterday before Tom Sharkey presented the certified check for $10,000 handed him by Referee Earp on the day of the fight with Fitzsimmons. The cashier notified the sailor that attachments aggregating $1,500 had been filed against the certificate. "All right, then give me the balance," remarked Sharkey in a way that indicated that he was anxious to get the $8,500 out of reach of the collectors. The money was turned over to him and he proceeded on his way jubilantly.

FOREIGN PRESS COMMENT.

How the British Newspapers View the Cuban Resolution.

London, Dec. 19.—Commenting today on the action of the foreign committee of the American senate in agreeing to report favorably Senator Cameron's resolution recognizing the independence of Cuba, the Daily News says it is of the opinion that the committee's action will not tend to any immediate result. It remarks that the condition of Cuba is a serious matter and is naturally irritating to the free neighboring republic. The strength of the supporters of the resolution lies in the fact that Spain is unable to subdue Cuba or let the island alone. The Standard says that it regrets the committee's ill-timed step. It commends the sagacity of Secretary of State Olney, and suggests that Spain, resenting the resolution as a gross insult, will probably be willing to attempt a dramatic stroke of vengeance against the United States. The Standard implies its belief that Spain would be able to take such a course owing to the naval weakness of the United States, although it concedes that the latter country in the long run would obviously provide to act with the force required. The paper does not defend Spain. It denounces as unseemly the Spanish rejoicings over the death of Maceo. The Chronicle regards the resolutions as marking a crisis in the relations between Spain and the United States. It says it believes that the senate and house of representatives will pass the resolution immediately and adds that there would be a bad outlook for the relations of all nations with the United States if its resolution should be passed over the president's veto, the chief danger being for the United States.

WILL EXPRESS NO OPINION.

Spanish Minister To Remain Silent Regarding the Cameron Resolution.

Washington, Dec. 19.—In regard to the Cameron resolution in the senate the Spanish minister says with considerable emphasis that while certain sensational papers may be relied upon to publish alleged statements from him, he is confident that all sensible people will appreciate that he has declined and will uniformly refuse to be led into any discussion or criticism whatever touching a matter under the consideration of congress. Such a matter he would not discuss privately under any circumstances and he seizes this opportunity to warn every one against statements on the subject which may be attributed to him, however indirect.

Princeton's Defeat by Harvard.

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 19.—For the third time in the history of the intercollegiate debating Princeton was defeated here last night by Harvard. The debate was listened to by about 1,500 people, who showed great interest in the discussion of the question: "Resolved, that, assuming the adoption of adequate constitutional amendments, the United States should institute a system of responsible cabinet government." The judges of the debate were Joseph R. Hawley, United States senator from Connecticut provost C. C. Harrison of the University of Pennsylvania, and Dr. Hamilton W. Mabie, editor of the Outlook. Princeton had the affirmative side to support, giving the negative to Harvard.

Proceedings Against Postel Dropped.

Chester, Pa., Dec. 18.—The Postel case, involving the supposed suspicious deaths of the four wives of Albert H. Postel of Wayne, near here, will be dropped. District Attorney Schaffer announced this decision after receiving the report of Dr. John Marshall of the University of Pennsylvania, who made a chemical analysis of the contents of the stomach of Mrs. Postel, the fourth, who was brought from Providence, R. I., after two weeks of legal sparring between the authorities of Delaware county and the attorney general of Rhode Island.

The Sheik-ul-Islam Suffering from Cancer.

Constantinople, Dec. 19.—The Sheik-ul-Islam, Mohammed Djemalsddin Effendi, is suffering from a cancer, and it is stated that his condition is hopeless. The Sheik-ul-Islam is the head of the Mohammedan church. He, with the grand vizier, exercises under the supreme direction of the sultan, the legislative and executive authority of the empire. Without his assent no sultan can legally be deposed.

Fierce Blizzard in Newfoundland.

St. John's, N. F., Dec. 19.—A blizzard which has been raging here for the past two days has caused much devastation. The schooner Pioneer, with a cargo of fish, is ashore at Carbonear. Her crew were two days without food, driving before the gale before they were rescued. Other casualties are feared.

6,000,000 Bushels of Apples.

Lyons, N. Y., Dec. 19.—There are 1,200 apple evaporators in full blast in Wayne county. The total output will be at least 33,000,000 pounds, which required 5,000,000 bushels of the fruit. This added to the green stock barreled makes a grand total of 6,000,000 bushels harvested in the county.

To Meet Next Year at Nashville.

Cincinnati, Dec. 19.—The Federation of Labor has selected Nashville, Tenn., as the next place for the annual convention. Kansas City, Salt Lake City and St. Louis were also contestants. The vote stood: Nashville, 1,618; Kansas City, 336; Salt Lake City, 262, and St. Louis, 256.

More Troops for the Philippines.

Madrid, Dec. 19.—Information has been received here of the intention of Gen. Polavieja, the new governor of the Philippines, to ask the government to send ten additional battalions of troops to the Philippines.

OUR FOREIGN TRADE

Exports Exceed Imports in the Ratio of Two to One.

LONDON STILL BORROWING MILLIONS

Nothing of an Ordinary Nature Can Cause Gold Eports of Consequence---Cotton, Wheat, Iron and Steel and Products.

New York, Dec. 19.—Dun's weekly review of the state of trade for the week just ending will to-day say: Cuban reports, unusual closeness of money in Germany, and the decision that there will be no action on the the tariff at this session, have not really changed the situation, but have been talked about as if they might change it. A sudden demand for gold from Germany, just before the close of the year, is not unusual, nor does it count for much. No facts, but only desires and fears, have led some to look for a change of tariff before March, and considerable speculation based on that idea has been arrested, but other business waits for the gradual improvement of the consuming demand. The holiday trade is generally large and the influence of an increase in the working force is felt in other ways. But until the new year the only material changes expected are such as to prepare for a large business next year. In the iron and steel industry these appear of the utmost importance.

Exports Exceed Imports.

Since events for some months to come will turn largely on the state of foreign trade it is cheering to announce that exports exceed imports in the ratio of two to one. The enormous excess, which has brough hither in three months net imports of gold amounting to $68,640,143, besides establishing credits of many millions in London which virtually pay in advance for future imports, has not prevented, it is believed, a special shipment of gold to Germany next week, for which the German banks pay a premium to meet demands Jan. 1 supposed to be on Russian account. London effects the shipment by borrowing more millions here, so that the amount of such sterling advances is now reckoned at $35,000,000. More of such borrowing may cause advance in the rate of interest, realizing on exchange drafts, of which many may become due before or shortly after Jan. 1, and a sharper demand on London than may be convenient. But with $2 worth of produce going out for every $1 worth of goods brought in, nothing of an ordinary nature can cause gold exports of consequence.

Cotton Market Weak.

Exports of cotton are naturally stimulated by lower prices, and with forced liquidation of important speculative operations cotton has declined. Receipts from plantations continue heavy, while commercial stocks here and abroad are only about as large as a year ago. The demand for goods in this country falls below the increased production, and the market is weak in one, with the prices of some jobbers' bleached goods sharply reduced. Speculation in wool has halted, and concessions are more frequent. The demand for goods seems to have been postponed until after the holidays. Wheat is also lower.

Iron, Steel and Products.

The control of the Mountain Iron Messabi mine has been leased for fifty years or purchased by the Carnegie interest from J. D. Rockfeller, the ore to be shipped by his new steamship line on the lakes, and new railway which the Carnegie company is building to Lake Erie. This, with the erection of sixteen new open hearth furnaces, making thirty-six, ensures enormous increase of product at extreme low cost, and will affect all combinations of steel products or in ore. The billet pool has practically dissolved, and sales are reported at $16 to $17, with contracts to supply consumers through most or the whole of next year. The beam pool has revived and restored the price to $1.55, but nails and steel bars are a shade lower. The rail association has been in session, and our Philadelphia dispatch states that rails are sold at $25, against $28 so long maintained. Bessemer pig and Grey forge are a shade lower at Pittsburg. Virginia and Alabama iron are offered 25 cents lower at the east, and with so much uncertainty regarding great changes in progress, very little is done in finished products and generally at concessions. A sale of 3,000,000 pounds Lake copper is reported at 11¼ cents. Coke production is increasing with contracts reported at $1.50. The boot and shoe industry is near the end of orders, receiving scarcely any at advances asked, but eastern shipments are still large.

Fears for the Safety of a Lightship.

New York, Dec. 19.—The Winter Quarter shoal light vessel, reported as missing by several steamers coming from southern ports during the last few days, and which was moored in sixty feet of water about eight miles from the coast of Virginia, had twelve men on board, and, while the worst is not anticipated, there is considerable alarm over their disappearance.

For Public Buildings.

Washington, Dec. 19.—Bills making appropriations for public buildings at the following places have been favorably acted upon by the house committee on public buildings and grounds: Nashua, N. H., $100,000; Woonsocket, R. I., $75,000; Rome, N. Y., $50,000; Shamokin, Pa., $60,000.

DEATH OF R. G. HORR.

By the death of Hon. Roswell G. Horr, which occurred last night at his home in this city after an illness that has been at critical stages for some time past, the public life of this country loses a figure whose political astuteness was a marked characteristic, quaint, aggressive and resourceful as it was; and Plainfield loses one of its most notable and honored citizens. In his private life Mr. Horr was a companionable man who made friends even among those whom he held up to criticism on the public platform and in the newspapers, to which he devoted his energies, by a wealth of knowledge and language. He was devoted to his family and the fact that his duties called him away from home much of the time seemed to incur in him a greater delight and appreciation of the family circle when it was his privilege to enjoy it. On all sides Mr. Horr's death is regretted.

NEW BRUNSWICK IS HOPEFUL.

Let the citizens of New Brunswick sing paens of praise, for at last there is a remote possibility of the sleepy old town having a building that may relieve the sombreness of the squatty Dutch cottages of the colonial period. It is a fact that the Congressional Committee on Public Buildings has reported favorably on the bill of Congressman Howell to appropriate $125,000 for the erection of a government building at the Middlesex County seat.

TO BOOM CHOATE.

Pliny Fisk, formerly of this city, has been made one of the Committee of Fifty of the Union League Club, of New York, to boom the candidacy of Joseph H. Choate for United States Senator from New York in opposition to Thomas C. Platt.

WHAT A LITTLE SNOW WOULD DO.

What joy there would be if only enough snow would fall by tomorrow to make good sleighing, and how the pockets of the liverymen would bulge with bank notes in exchange for one of horse, sleigh and jingle bells.

An Early Hour For Service.

On the new glass-sign just placed at the corner of Chatham and Somerset streets, noting the hours of service at Warren Chapel, it is noticed that there is preaching on Sundays at 1.30 a. m., which is, of course, a mistake. The error will be rectified.

PASSING COMMENT.

President Stokes, of the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association, has issued the twenty-seventh annual report. It shows that the cost of filling in the big washout on the beach made during the storm of 1895 was $25,000. There were four arrests, four of which were for intoxication. Two hundred and fifty-six persons in improper bathing suits were removed from the bathing grounds, and forty-eight were stopped from going through the streets because their bathing garments were too abbreviated. The number of bicyclists prevented from riding through the streets of Ocean Grove on Sundays was 128. Under the religious department President Stokes reviews all the meetings held during the summer. In a recapitulation he says that the number of conversions was 889. Eleven hundred were reclaimed, 860 sanctified, and more than 10,000 especially helped in their Christian life.

Sarah Bernhardt has been photographed over 1,000 times. The earliest pictures that are extant were taken in 1867. At that time the great actress had a most innocent and childish expression.

A Jersey City minister allowed his two and-one-half-year-old son to play with a number of other children on the street. At night, when the pastor's son knelt and offered prayer, his father was shocked to hear him say "Nit!" instead of "Amen" at the conclusion of his petition. The pastor, after close questioning, learned that his son had heard "Nit" used so often by the children on the street that the lad believed it was the proper concluding formula for all addresses.

Netherwood now has a new protector. In that neighborhood, where the houses are scattered about, in many cases a long distance apart, it is impossible for the police to cover all the ground at once. No one has been more watchful for the welfare of that section than ex-Councilman Leonard Spangenberg, of Woodland avenue. Now Chief of Police Grant has presented him with a Christmas gift that promises to be useful as well as ornamental. It is a gold-plated police call whistle, one shrill blast on which will bring an officer to the scene at once. Residents of that vicinity will now sleep without fear of disturbance, as they know that their former Councilman is ready to summon assistance should it be needed.

She was descending the stairs at 5 o'clock in the afternoon when she accidentally steped on her apron string which throwed her to the landing below. She was picked up in an unconscious state and made as comfortable as possible until Dr. Brakely arrived. The doctor found her suffering from shock, and there were also deep cuts found near the right eye, on the forehead and on the back of the head. THEATRICAL.

Manager Willey, of Music Hall, announces as his attraction for Christmas afternoon and evening, L. N. Woolcott's new farce comedy entitled, "A Yellow Kid." The play will be presented by Woolcott & Jackson's Company of comedians, and it is said to be an extremely funny dramatic history of the pictorial pranks and adventures of the famous yellow kid, whose pictures and antics as represented in the New York Sunday World and Journal have been the laughing craze for the last year or more. The company engaged in the production is strong in comedy talent, including among its members the following well-known performers: McCale & Cunningham, Frank G. Mack, Aida Woolcott, "Cute" MacDonald, Helen A. Furman, LaBord & Ryerson, Sophie Clifton, Katrine Heath, Blanche Gordon, John Cullen and Master Bobbie Lester, who is said to make an ideal yellow kid. The company carry special scenery for the production, and with so strong an attraction the engagement will no doubt prove satisfactory to both the public, the management of Music Hall and the company. Seats may be reserved in advance.

Money to Burn.

The origin of this saying is not known, but its definition is understood to be the consumption of money without return—investing it in that which only satisfies the capriee of the moment. That's what you do with money when you buy a Christmas present which has an ephemeral value. You do not, however, burn money when you buy such durable gifts as you will find at Collier's. You perpetuate its value for the benefit of a loved one, and at the same time insure an enduring remembrance of your kindness.

THE MISTRESS of the Mine.

or A Woman Intervenes.

By Robert Barr.

down that chamber of torture. A quarter of twelve. He heard the chimes ring somewhere. If the message did not come before they rang again, it would be forever too late.

Fourteen minutes—13 minutes—12 minutes—11 minutes—10 minutes to 12. and yet no—

"Here you are!" shouted the operator in great glee. "She's a-coming, it's all right, John Kenyon, Ottawa." Then he wrote as rapidly as the machine clicked out the message. "There it is, now rush!"

John needed no telling to rush. People had begun to notice him as the man who was doing nothing but running between the bank and the telegraph office!

It was seven minutes to twelve when he got to the bank.

"Is that dispatch right?" he said, shoving it through the arched aperture. The clerk looked at it with provoking composure, and then compared it with some papers.

"For God's sake hurry!" pleaded John.

"You have plenty of time," said the cashier, coolly, looking up at the clock and going on with his examination. "Yes," he added, "that is all right. Here is your certified check."

John clasped it, and bolted out of the bank, as a burglar might have done. It was five minutes to twelve when he got to the steps that led to the rooms of Mr. Von Brent. Now all his excitement seemed to have deserted him. He was as cool and calm as if he had five days instead of as many minutes, in which to make the payment. He mounted the steps quietly, walked along the passage, and knocked at the door of Von Brent's room.

"Come in," was the shout that greeted him.

He opened the door, glancing at the clock behind Von Brent's head as he did so.

It stood three minutes to twelve.

Young Mr. Longworth was sitting there, with just a touch of pallor on his countenance, and there seemed an ominous glitter in his eye-glass. He said nothing, and John Kenyon completely ignored his presence.

"There is still some life left in my option, I believe?" he said to Von Brent, after nodding good day to him.

"Very little, but perhaps it will serve. You have two and a half minutes," said Von Brent.

"Are the papers ready?" inquired John.

"All ready, everything except putting in the names."

"Very well, here is the money." Von Brent looked at the certified check. "That is perfectly right," he said. "The mine is yours." Then he rose and stretched his hand across the table to Kenyon, who grasped it cordially.

Young Mr. Longworth also rose, and said, languidly: "As this seems to be a meeting of long lost brothers, I shall not intrude. Good day, Mr. Von Brent."

And with that the young man adjusted his eyeglass and took his departure.

CHAPTER XXV.

When Edith Longworth entered the office of George Wentworth, that young gentleman somewhat surprised her. He sprang from his chair the moment she entered the room, rushed out of the door, and shrieked at the top of his voice to a boy, who answered him; whereupon Wentworth returned to the room, apparently in his right mind. "I beg your pardon, Miss Longworth," he said, laughing; "the fact was, I had just sent my boy with a telegram to you, and now, you see, I have saved sixpence."

"Then you have heard from Canada?" said the young lady.

"Yes, a short message, but to the point." He handed her the cablegram, and she read: "Mine purchased; shall take charge temporarily."

"Then the money got there in time," she said, handing him back the telegraphic message.

"Oh, yes," said George, with the easy confidence of a man who doesn't at all know what he is talking about. "We had plenty of time. I knew it would get there all right."

"I am glad of that; I was afraid, perhaps, we might have sent it too late. One can never tell what delays or formalities there may be."

"Evidently there was no trouble. And now, Miss Longworth, what are your commands? Am I to be your agent here in Great Britain?"

"Have you written to Mr. Kenyon?"

"Yes, I wrote him just after I sent the cable message."

"Of course you didn't—"

"No. I didn't say a word that would lead him to suspect who was the mistress of the mine. In my zeal I even went so far as to give you a name. You are hereafter to be known in the correspondence as Mr. Smith, the owner of the mine."

Miss Longworth laughed.

"And—oh, by the way," cried Wentworth, "here is a barrel belonging to you."

"A barrel!" she said, and, looking in the direction to which he pointed, she saw in a corner of the room a barrel with its head taken off. "If it belongs to me," continued the young woman, "who has taken the liberty of opening it?"

"Oh, I did that as your agent. The barrel contains the mineral from the mine which we hope will prove so valuable. It started from Canada over three months ago, and only arrived here the other day. It seems that the idiot who sent it addressed it in some way by New York, and it was held by some jack in office belonging to the United States customs. We have had more diplomatic correspondence and trouble about that barrel than you can imagine, and now it comes a day behind the fair, when it is really no use."

Miss Longworth rose and went to the barrel. She picked out some of the beautiful white specimens that were in it.

"Is this the mineral?" she asked.

Wentworth laughed. "Think of a person buying a mine at an exorbitant price and not knowing what it produces! Yes, that is the mineral."

"This is not mica, of course?"

"No, it is not mica. That is the stuff used for the making of china."

"It looks as if it would take a good polish. Will it, do you know?"

"I do not know. I could easily find out for you."

"I wish you would, and get a piece of it polished, which I will use as a paper weight."

"What are your orders for the rest of the barrel?"

"What were you thinking of doing with it?" said the young woman.

"Well, I was thinking the best plan would be to send some of it to each of the pottery works in this country, and get their orders for more of the stuff, if they want to use it."

"I think it is a very good idea. I understand from the cablegram that Mr. Kenyon says he will take charge of the mine temporarily."

"Yes, I imagine he left Ottawa at once, as soon as he had concluded his bargain. Of course, we shall not know for certain until he writes."

"Very well, then; it seems to me that the best thing you could do over here would be to get what orders can be obtained in England for the mineral. Then I suppose you could write to Mr. Kenyon, and ask him to get a proper person to operate the mine."

"Yes, I will do that."

"When he comes over here you and he can have a consultation as to the best thing to be done after that. I expect nothing very definite can be done until he comes. You may make whatever excuse you can for the absence of the mythical Mr. Smith, and say that you act for him. Then you may tell Mr. Kenyon, in whatever manner you choose, that Mr. Smith intends both you and Mr. Kenyon to share conjointly with him. I think you will have no trouble in making John—that is—in making Mr. Kenyon believe there is such a person as Mr. Smith, if you put it strongly enough to him. Make him understand that Mr. Smith would never have heard of the mine unless Mr. Kenyon and you had discovered it, and that he is very glad indeed to have such a good opportunity of investing his money, so that, naturally, he wishes those who have been instrumental in helping him to this investment to share in its profit. I think you could make all this clear enough, so that your friend will suspect nothing. Don't you think so?"

"Well, with any other man than John Kenyon I should have my doubts, because as a fabricator I don't think I have a very high reputation, but with John I have no fears whatever. He will believe everything I say. It is almost a pity to cheat so trustful a man, but it's so very much for his own good that I shall have no hesitation in doing it."

"Then you will write to him about getting a fit and proper person to manage the mine?"

"Yes. I don't think there will be any necessity for doing so, but I will make sure. I imagine John will not leave there until he sees everything to his satisfaction. He will be very anxious indeed for the mine to prove as great a success as he believes it will be, even though at present he does not know that he is to have any pecuniary interest in its prosperity."

"Very well, then, I will bid you good-by. I may not be here again, but whenever you hear from Mr. Kenyon I shall be very glad if you will let me know."

"Certainly. I will let you know everything that happens. I will send you all the documents in the case, as you once remarked. You always like to see the original papers, don't you?"

"Yes, I suppose I do." Miss Longworth lingered a moment at the door, then, looking straight at Wentworth, she said to him:

"You remember you spoke rather bitterly to my father the other day?"

"Yes," said Wentworth, coloring, "I remember it."

"You are a young man; he is old. Besides, I think you were entirely in the wrong." He had nothing whatever to do with what his nephew had done."

"Oh, I know that," said Wentworth. "I would have apologized to him long ago—only—well, you know, he told me I shouldn't be allowed in the office again, and I don't suppose I should."

"A letter from you would be allowed in the office," replied the young lady, looking at the floor.

"Of course it would," said George. "I will write to him at once and apologize."

"It is very good of you," said Edith, holding out her hand to him, and the next moment she was gone.

George Wentworth turned to his desk and wrote a letter of apology. Then he mused to himself upon the strange, incomprehensible nature of women. "She makes me apologize to him, and quite right, too, but if it hadn't been for the row with her father, she never would have heard about the transaction, and therefore couldn't have bought the mine, which she was anxious to do for Kenyon's sake—lucky beggar John is, after all!"

CHAPTER XXVI.

After the business of transferring the mine to its new owner was completed, John Kenyon went to the telegraph office and sent a short cable message to Wentworth. Then he turned his steps to the hotel, an utterly exhausted man. The excitement and tension of the day had been too much for him, and he felt that, if he did not

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? JUDGE AND SENATOR.

Judge Willard Martin Gives His Powerful Indorsement to Dr. Greene's Nervura.

The Eminent Judge, Senator and Director of Barre National Bank, Says He Has Used Dr. Greene's Nervura in His Family With Great Benefit.

JUDGE WILLARD S. MARTIN.

The world wants to be convinced.

What people want is proof that a medicine will cure; then they will use it gladly.

Someone you believe in, a prominent person who you know will tell the exact truth and who has seen the wonderful effect and observed the remarkable cures wrought by the remedy he recommends, is what you want, and when such testimony is given, you will not hesitate an instant to follow his advice, obtain the remedy and thus be speedily cured.

When therefore the Hon. Judge Willard S. Martin, of Plainfield, Vt., Associate Judge of the County Court, Senator from Washington County, and Director of the Barre National Bank, a man honored and esteemed throughout the entire state, tells you to use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and backs up his advice by telling you that he has repeatedly used it in his own family with the greatest benefit and that he has known of its having cured many people in his locality and elsewhere, you can certainly have the utmost confidence in the wonderful curative powers of this grand medicine and take it yourself if you are sick, ailing or out of order, with absolute assurance of beneficial results.

Read His Honor's, the Judge's own words in which he advises you to try Dr. Greene's Nervura and be convinced that this wonderful curer of diseases is just what your case requires:

"I have used Dr. Greene's Nervura and blood nerve remedy in my family and have found good results from its use. Especially in cases of sleeplessness and nervousness has it been of benefit to some of my family.

"I have heard of many from this locality who have derived benefit from its use. My son was in a large school when a fire started and at one time threatened to be disastrous, which excited him and unsettled his nerves, and on visiting home, he used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy with quite satisfactory results.

"We are glad of this opportunity to recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura for others' use, and give permission to publish this letter for the good of others."

No greater proof that a medicine will cure you can possibly be given than these words of an honored Judge and distinguished Senator. Take Dr. Greene's Nervura and feel again what it is to be well—to feel powerful and vigorous, to have strong, steady nerves, to sleep soundly and wake mornings refreshed and energetic. No matter how badly you may feel, Dr. Greene's Nervura will go to the root of your disease and cure you of your troubles.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy should not be classed with ordinary patent medicines; it is a physician's prescription, endorsed and recommended by the most eminent doctors of our land. Its discoverer, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th St., New York City, is the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, and can be consulted in all cases free of charge, personally or by letter.

NEW YORK "L" ROADS.

Directors Accused of Borrowing Large Sums To Pay Dividends.

Albany, Dec, 19.—Is the Manhattan Elevated Railway company of New York city paying portions of its dividends out of hundreds of thousands of dollars of borrowed money? This is the question which the attorney general of the state of New York has been called upon to determine. An application has been made to the attorney general asking him to begin an action against the directors for judgment compelling them to pay back to the railroad company the amount of money paid to the stockholders in dividends in excess of surplus profits, and removing the directors from office and restraining them and their successors in office from declaring and paying dividends in excess of the profits of the corporation. The application is made by Mortimer Hendrick, a bond-holder in the railway company. He asserts that during the year ending June 30, 1895, the company paid $1,800,000 dividends which was $277,951 in excess of their surplus profits and during the year ending June 30, 1896, the company paid the same amount of dividends, which was $681,902 in excess of the surplus profits of the company. He says that since June 30, 1896, the directors declared a quarterly dividend amounting to $450,000, although the net income was only $147,000. He claims that the earnings of the corporation have not been sufficient during the last two years to pay the expenses of operating the road, its fixed charges, and the dividends on the stock by about $1,020,000, and he charges the fact to be that the excess of dividends over the profits have not been paid out of the surplus profits, but out of loans made by the corporation, and thus a debt was created to pay excess dividends amounting to over $1,000,000. The directors who Mr. Hendricks desires the court to remove from office are: George J. Gould, Edwin Gould, Howard Gould, Russell Sage, Thomas T. Eckert, Samuel Sloan, Robert M. Galloway, Donald MacKay, Joseph Eastman, A. L. Hopkins, G. P. Morosini, Warren B. Smith and John J. Terry.

ACTIVITY AT NAVY YARDS.

Rushing Work on All Available Vessels for Rendezvous and Drills.

Washington, Dec. 19.—Acting Secretary McAdoo of the navy yesterday afternoon summoned the chiefs of construction, engineering and ordnance, Commodores Hichborn, Melville and Sampson, and ordered them to take whatever steps were necessary to expedite the repairs on all ships now in commission at the Atlantic coast navy yards. This action is taken, it is explained, in order that all available ships may be ready to rendezvous for drill purposes with Admiral Bunce's fleet at Hampton roads not later than January 1. The chiefs were also directed to approve no changes or extensive repairs in ships for the present as it was the desire of the department to get all the commissioned vessels away from the navy yards in order that urgent work may be prosecuted on other vessels which have been dismantled for thorough overhauling.

Mules for Bear Hunters.

The proper beast for a grizzly bear hunter to ride is a good mule. Dr. W. F. Edgar, United States army, tells in recreation why a mule is best. The doctor was wandering near a camp up in Washington state on a mule. He had his rifle with him, and, seeing a big bear in the trail, fired. The bear tumbled over and out of sight. It looked like a clean kill, and the doctor started toward the place, and was nearly in sight of the hollow where the bear had disappeared, when the bear climbed up over the edge and went for him. It was then that the mule was of the utmost service. The mule rose on its hind feet, turned sharply around, and headed for camp. A horse or a mustang wouldn't have been quick enough, the bear was so close, but all the hunter had to do was to hang on. The mule knew what to do without being told.

DOES IT MEAN WAR?

Cameron Resolution the Main Discussion in Washington.

BELIEVED SPAIN WOULD RESENT IT

Actual Hostilities Not Expected, However. One Man Close to the President Says He Would Concur in Joint Action.

Washington, Dec. 19.—There is an impression among some of the members of the senate committee on foreign relations that the president will veto Senator Cameron's resolution recognizing the republic of Cuba, ordered favorably reported to the senate yesterday, as it is a joint resolution and requires executive approval or disapproval, if it is passed by both the senate and house, of which they seem to have no doubt. Should the president veto it they say that enough votes can be secured, in the present state of mind of the members of congress, to pass it over the veto. No effort will be made to bring the resolution up in the senate until after the holidays, but it is very evident that immediately upon the assembling of the senate in January that body will be plunged into a debate that gives promise of possessing an accompaniment of exciting episodes. The vote by which the committee decided to favorably report the measure was practically unanimous, and only two members were absent. Senators Gray and Daniel.

Says Cleveland Would Sign It.

A close friend of the president said this morning that he had been informed that President Cleveland would concur in the joint resolution by congress for the recognition of Cuban independence, should it pass. "I believe it is generally understood among the president's closest friends," said he, "that while he was not willing to take the initiative in a policy that might bring on a war with Spain at the close of his administration, he will not reject the judgment of the people as represented by congress in the Cuban affair." Whatever the course of congress and the president may be, it is the opinion generally that Spain is likely to declare war on the United States. It is not likely that we will ever arrive at a stage of actual hostilities with Spain, because Spain must surely recognize that if she goes to war with the United States it will be the end of the present dynasty, and the inglorious finish of her race as one of the great nations.

Opinions of Members.

The action of the committee is almost the only topic of conversation about the capitol this morning. Whether or not the passage of such a resolution would mean war between this country and Spain is the question uppermost, but the consensus of opinion is that it does not unless Spain sees fit to force hostilities. At any rate, it is said by friends of Cuba, the mere reporting of so radical a measure will have the effect of giving an increased impetus to the efforts of the patriots to drive from the island the hated Spaniards. The ground is also taken that this government possesses the inherent right to recognize any new state, and that if the power previously exercising dominion over such territory protested, upon such power rested the burden of commencing hostilities. Senator Frye is of the opinion that if the masses of the people of Spain control the executive officers of that government, war will certainly follow the passage of the resolution. Senator Mills hopes that speedy action will be taken, and Senator Morgan is of the same mind. Senator Hale deprecates the action of the committee and says that those in the senate opposed to the spirit manifested in the resolution will contest its passage and prevent its adoption by every means possible.

Text of the Resolution.

A verbal change was made in the resolution, and, as agreed to, it now reads: "Resolved, That the independence of the republic of Cuba be, and the same is hereby acknowledged by the United States of America; that the United States will use its friendly offices with the government of Spain to bring to a close the war between Spain and Cuba."

The House Against It.

The house heard with no surprise of the action of the senate foreign relations committee in recognizing the independence of Cuba, and if the opinion of members of the foreign affairs committee and some of the democratic and republican leaders in the house is to be taken as a criterion the popular branch of the government will not sustain the position taken by the senate. Mr. Hitt of Illinois, the chairman of the house committee, is out of the city and is not expected to return until the close of the holiday recess. Of those who remain in—and of this number a United Associated Press reporter talked with five—the entire quintet strongly opposed any action at this time. The republicans objected to any step which would, in their opinion, bring about a war with Spain on the ground that the McKinley administration ought not to be met at the very moment of coming into power by so serious an international problem. It was thought better that Mr. McKinley should formulate his own Cuban policy and in this conclusion the democrats fully concurred.

Will Ignore Cleveland's Message.

Madrid, Dec. 19.—It is understood that the government has abandoned their intention to address a note to the government at Washington concerning that part of President Cleveland's message which refers to Spain and Cuba and will ignore the document altogether.

paign speeches in several States for Blaine and Logan, and neglected his own district.

In 1888 Mr. Horr made campaign speeches for Harrison and Morton in eleven States, and was unable to meet all the demands which were made for his services as a speaker in the campaign. After the election of General Harrison, Mr. Horr's friends urged his appointment to a foreign mission, but the only appointment that was offered to him was that of Consul at Valparaiso, which he declined. Although his friends felt that his treatment had been unjust, Mr. Horr exhibited neither mortification nor resentment, and in 1892 he made campaign speeches for Harrison in nine States.

Mr. Horr joined the Tribune staff about five years ago, and his signed articles in the weekly and semi-weekly editions of the newspaper attracted widespread attention. Many of his articles were republished in the daily edition. He wrote mainly on tariff and currency questions, but his replies to inquiries from every part of the country covered a wide range of topics. In a recent interview he gave the following account of the manner in which he turned out copy for the newspaper:

"When I am at home I dictate to my daughter, who takes it down as I talk it on the typewriter. But fully a third of my writing is done when I am away from home. In that case I dictate it to a stenographer, and revise his copy before I send it to New York. I generally go over my dictation carefully and make numerous interlineations. I have been in Oregon twice campaigning, and in Maine five times since I began to do this work, and I find it quite a task sometimes. I am working so hard now that for a short time I have given up writing almost altogether."

Early in the recent campaign the Republican National Committee made an earnest appeal for the services of Mr. Horr as a speaker in some of the western States, and he consented to make a tour of campaign speaking, with the understanding that he should be required to speak only three times a week. The demand for his speeches increased so rapidly, however, that during the greater part of the campaign he was speaking every day and often twice a day. At the close of the campaign he was worn out, and was prostrated easily by a combined attack of kidney trouble and bronchitis.

One of Mr. Horr's strong points as a campaign speaker was his readiness in answering questions when he was speaking. Any one who sought to confuse him by interrupting him to ask a question was reasonably sure to wish later that the question had not been asked. His replies were instantaneous, and generally were shot out like arrows tipped with lightning. They exhibited his readiness of humor, as well as his good memory and command of facts and figures.

Much public interest was manifested in a debate which Mr. Horr had with Senator Stewart, of Nevada, on the silver question in February, 1893. The debate was reported fully, and was published in a pamphlet by The Tribune. The pamphlet had a large sale. The Horr-Harvey debate in the summer of 1895 also attracted considerable attention, although the author of "Coin's Financial School" made no serious attempt to engage in debate, but confined himself chiefly to reading extracts from a long essay which he had prepared.

Mr. Horr leaves two sons and two daughters. The sons are Frank H. Horr, of Ithaca, Mich., and Rollin A. Horr, of Saginaw, Mich. The daughters are Mrs. F. W. Hebard and Mrs. W. H. Ewart, both of this city.

Rheumatism Cured in a Day.

"Mystic Cure" for Rheumatism and Neuralgia radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system remarkable and mysterious. It removes at once the cause and the disease immediately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits. 75 cents. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, druggist, corner Park and North avenues, Plainfield.

—All persons having claims against the city poor department, must file them with the overseer of the poor by Wednesday, December 23d.

KILLING HAIR SEALS.

The Business as Carried On in the North Atlantic.

Season Begins in March and the Slaughter Becomes General—How the Animals Are Overtaken and Treated.

In the latter part of February the great herd of about 500,000 seals has come south as far as the latitude of the Straits of Belle Isle. The region between these narrows and Notre Dame bay is the seals' habitual breeding ground. It is among the ice of these waters that the steamship Mariposa, of Montreal, is supposed to have met her recent fate. The seals produce their young upon the ice floes, or "pans," within a few miles of the shore. The parent animals swim about in pursuit of fish, and contentedly follow the ice wherever it drifs. The young grow with surprising rapidity. At the age of three weeks they have attained the size of a bulldog, and replace the white fur of infancy with the dark coat.

Seal ships from Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and the neighboring coasts sail early in March. By that time the ice is well on in the process of breaking up, or "spawning abroad," and navigation has become possible. About the middle of March the killing begins. As the ships approach the sealing grounds the final preparations are completed. The long watch is begun, which is not relaxed until the active cruise is over. This watch, lasting from dawn till dark of every day, is kept up by one man alone. His importance is recognized in his rank, which is next to that of captain. From the shape of his station of observation at the masthead, this individual is known as the "barrel man." He is provided with as fine a telescope as can be procured, and skill in its use is one of his most important essentials.

Another part of the preparation is the division of the ship's crew, 200 or 300 in number, into watches. Each is put under command of a master of watch, and is organized into boats' crews and other small divisions for the performance of the various duties aboard ship. It is the perfection of these details of organization that brings a ship's work to the frictionless system that is a landsman's constant surprise.

When at last seals are sighted the word is passed down from the masthead as quietly as possible. Old seals may be disturbed by a shout at a distance of miles; further reason for caution exists if the observer is within hearing of other ships. In the latter case the first ship edges around toward the seals by a circuitous route, intending to throw others off the track. Meanwhile orders are issued forbidding anyone to show his head above the rail. The slightest carelessness will cause the game to disappear into the water. Perhaps the "pan" of seals is sighted by a rival ship. In that case all roundabout tactics are dropped, and a race ensues. The four watches, armed with gaff-tipped clubs, "stand by" for directions. At the instant the ship gets among ice too closely packed for her to proceed further, all hands are overboard.

Away they run, each master of watch picking a patch for his command, which hurries after him in single file. It is a rough chase; now a climb over a washed-up ledge of broken ice; again a leap across a broken strip of water. Occasionally some unfortunate wretch falls in, and is fished dripping out on the gaff of a companion. His clothes are frozen stiff in a few seconds, but he doesn't stop. The seals by this time are thoroughly alarmed, and it is important to reach them as quickly as possible. A seal's vital point is his nose. One blow of the "bat" usually kills; sometimes, however, an old animal offers a hard and dangerous fight. The men hurry about their work of execution with energy, abated only after the last of the living seals has escaped into the water.

The victims are then skinned and the pelts heaped together in stacks, surmounted by the ensigns of their respective ownerships. These stacks, by the way, are another of the objects designated by the useful term "pan." A "pan" of pelts, like a "pan" of seals, is the supporting flat cake of ice. We have the same usage in "pan of bacon." It is seldom that a pan marked by a flag is molested; feeling on the subject is prohibitively strong.

At dark the ship returns over her day's course to collect the "pans" of pelts. A storm may have arisen. It only becomes the more urgent that the prize be brought aboard without delay. Through the rolling, crunching ice the men pick their way in boats, with the water freezing immediately on whatever it touches. At last all the pans have been visited and all the grease-laden skins laboriously stored away.

At such a day's end one is justified in looking forward to a comfortable bed. But to the sealer this is denied. The bunks, limited in number, are allotted to the men who have been with the ship on previous cruises. The remainder of the men are allowed the liberty of the ship, which offers two alternatives—a berth in one of the boats on deck or a less frigid bed burrowed among the coal in the hold. Considerations of temperature make the latter choice the more popular. Even the rest that a coal bunker affords is always liable to interruption to the call on deck to help the ship through the ice.

In the latter part of the season, the seals, by that time well grown, spend most of the time in the water. It then becomes necessary to shoot them from boats, and the danger that a small boat undergoes in the midst of a field of grinding, broken ice needs no explanation. Sometimes a storm cuts off a watch from its ship for a day at a time. —Baltimore American.

A BALK ALL ROUND.

The Time Had Come For Him to Take a Hand.

About half way between Prairie City and Silver Creek I came across an outfit consisting of a lean old mule that was hitched to a rickety cart, and in the cart were seated an oldish couple, who were very evidently man and wife. It was at the foot of a steep hill, and the mule had his back humped up, while the man plied a blue beech switch.

"Is it a case of balk?" I asked as I rode up.

"Fur shore, stranger," replied the man as he put aside his switch and began filling his corncob pipe.

"Anything wrong with the mule?"

"Nuthin in pertickler. He's jest obstinate. Consarn mewls, and consarn women. They ar' both jes' alike in wantin their way."

The wife sat bolt upright, arms folded and her jaws set, and she did not even give me a glance. The man slowly filled and lighted his pipe and then took up the switch and whaled away until he had struck 50 blows. Then he laid it down with a grunt and turned to the woman to ask:

"Say, now, is it to be whisky and terbacker or a pa'r o' shoes?"

"S-h-u-z-e, shoes," she determinedly replied.

"Thar 'tis, stranger," he said with a sigh as he turned to me. "I've got $1 in my pocket to buy whisky and terbacker with when we git to town, but shuck my ole hide if she ain't balkin fur a pa'r o' shoes and will either have 'em or make trouble. What d'ye think o' sich a critter?"

I was hesitating how to answer him when he knocked the ashes out of his pipe, stood up in the cart and shouted:

"Whoop, whoop-ee! Fust the old woman balks, then the mewl balks, and now I'm goin to balk myself. Better drive on, stranger, and git fo' miles away afore the calamity happens."

I took his advice and rode on, but on looking back a few minutes later I saw that the old woman had him by the hair, and the mule was standing on his hind feet pawing the air. The next minute I glanced back they had both fallen to the bottom of the cart, still fighting, and the mule had turned the vehicle around and was legging it for home at a 2:10 gait.—New York Journal.

END OF AN ACTIVE LIFE

FUNERAL OF THE LATE ROSWELL G. HORR HELD YESTEBDAY.

Dr. Collier Conducted a Simple, But Impressive Ceremony—Likening Him to a Patriot Who Died For His Country.

The funeral obsequies of the late ex-Congressman Roswell G. Horr were held at his late residence, 808 Park avenue, yesterday afternoon, at 5:30 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Robert Collier, of the Church of the Messiah, New York, and old friend of Mr. Horr, officiated at the ceremony. A tenor solo, "My Ain Countree," by Elmer E. Runyon, opened the service, and then Dr. Collier read a portion of the Episcopal service and that beautiful poem, "The Sunset Poem," by Edwin Arnold. He then spoke a few words about his late friend as follows:

"It is fitting," he said, "that we should gather with the sorrowing family about the dust of the good man and think how good and blessed it is that we can have such men among us and to help us. I saw in the papers that he came home to die from the long struggle of the summer in which he took such an important part. I do not say too much if I say that our dear friend gave his life for his country as surely as a soldier who falls in battle. It was a crisis of which I will not speak. He came to the rescue with all his power, and after the tremendous work he then performed he rests today.

"I rest my wreath on his coffin for all the work he did for his country. Was not this last act a piece with the rest of his life? In his earlier years he was always striving to fulfill his duty to his country and his family. Through all his years has he not striven to acquit himself as an upright man, a good man, and a true man?

"I do not feel called to ask how he stood in matters of church doctrine, he may have differed from mine. He loved the truth and he loved the right and he was a sweet, tender and good father, friend and patriot man. He could not have been so if he had not trusted in God.

"It is a great thing to have such men among us. He was one of the kind of men that we call the square men. Of his public life you know as much of it as I do, and of his private life, those who have lived with him and loved him know best. He has lived respected and loved. Multitudes have heard him gladly on mighty questions of the country. I consider such a man as useful and essential as any minister.

"Shall we say goodbye to the dust and say the story is ended? Never. Always from the grave we look up to the immortal life above."

Then Dr. Collier gave his thought of the eternal life above and how it had comforted him when his loved ones had passed away and spoke loving words of comfort to the bereaved ones, and ended with an earnest and heartfelt prayer. He next read the rest of the funeral service and then the friends passed into the next room to take a parting look at their kind friend and neighbor.

The floral tributes, which surrounded the casket, were simple but beautiful, while two large palm branches, tied with purple ribbon, were crossed above the casket.

Henry Hall, publisher of the New York Tribune, and Nathaniel Tuttle, cashier of the Tribune, and his son, Horton Tuttle, all of New York, were present. There was also Mayor Alex. Gilbert, Mayor-elect Charles J. Fisk and a number of other friends from this city. The remains were taken to Wellington, Ohio, today for interment.

A BLAZE, BUT NO NEED OF AN ALARM.

An Oil Stove Thrown Into a Yard Brought Out Borough Firemen.

Last evening about 6 o'clock the borough fire department was called out in response to an alarm sent in from Box 152, at the corner of Linden avenue and Grove street, and the apparatus was out of the house on the second round of the box. The cause of the alarm was that an oil stove in the home of ex Chief Marshal J. W. VanHorn, of 171 Duer street, refused to work properly, and Mr. VanHorn threw the stove into the rear of the yard. A young boy saw the blaze and ran to the home of Mr. Lewis on Grove street, where he secured the key to send in the alarm.

The fire was extinguished before the department arrived, and they were not needed.

BE SIMPLE AND HAPPY.

DR. J. F. RIGG'S WORDS OF ADMONITION INSPIRED BY SCRIPTURE.

He that is faithful in Small Things Will Cultivate the Mind to Greater Things—Precious Things Come in Common Place.

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., the Rev. Dr. J. F. Riggs, of New Brunswick, preached both morning and evening in Trinity Reformed church, yesterday, and at each service there was a good attendance. In the evening he read the scripture from First Kings, 20th chapter, and also from Ecclesiastics, 3d chapter. His text was from First Kings, 20th chapter, 1st verse:—"As thy servant was busy here and there, he was gone."

"The tragedy of life," said the doctor, "is not so much what they do, but what they have done, certain conditions in life call for activity and there are tides in men's lives which lead to fame and fortune. But God changes the positions in life. Thousands ignore God's gifts to attain lesser things. Temporal and spiritual opportunities come not infrequently and the greatest opportunity in one's life comes at intervals. Great opportunities oftentimes comes to the unbeliever and he that is fathful in small things will cultivate the mind to greater things. Precious things come to use in the disguise of the common place. The shell of life is the common place. The man whose intellect is clear, who has noble views and can speak the truth in spite of all hostilities, may not readily see the results, but God alone opens the door before us to eternal life, which no one can shut."

Resuming his discourse, the Doctor said in part: "We must be trained under proper conditions. The man who is noble, pure and brave in his everyday life is one of God's chosen people. Learn to be patient in the drudgery of common things, is the one great lesson in spiritual life. Make a wise choice in everything. Jesus Christ saved others yet Himself He could not save. Had He come down from the cross He could not have saved Himself and the world, too. The education God gives us is to give sooner than receive; individually we are absolutely nothing, but collectively we are drawn into His plant. Worldly things are pleasing to the mind, but this God disclaims. Make the humble happy in that which is spiritual. The Poet Whittier recognized the moral munificence of giving rather than receiving.

"Nothing can resist the forces which are perpetual. The time will come when the ordinary forces of nature will collapse. Three great men—Henry Clay, Daniel Webster and Horace Greeley, lay dead of broken hearts, because they longed to be President. We go to God in prayer, ask and receive favors and privileges which are soon lost, yet God comes into our souls and dwells where failure is made impossible.

"Despise secondary matters," said the Reverend Doctor in conclusion, "For he who is born once dies twice; but he who is born twice never dies."

PLAY WHIST AT THE WEEK'S END

Mr. and Mrs. Terhune Entertain the Saturday Evening Whist Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Terhune, of Sandford avenue, entertained the Saturday Evening Whist Club in a charming manner Saturday evening. This was the initial meeting of the club, which was recently organized, and if the rest of the meetings are as enjoyable as the first, the coming winter months will be passed with a great deal of pleasure. In addition to the club members present, Miss Jennings and Mr. Faxton, of Fanwood, and Mrs. J. Fred MacDonald, of this city, were present as guests.

The first ladies' prize, a handsome boudoir clock, was awarded to Mrs. Terhune, and Mrs. Peter Shultz won the second prize, a very pretty Dresden lamp. Harry C VanEmburgh secured first honors for the gentlemen, which consisted of a silver shaving mug. The second prize was a triplet mirror, which was won by C. T. Nightingale. After the game the members and the guests were served with refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Nightingale will entertain the club at its next meeting, Janurry 2d.

Not Quite.

The Dutchess of Marlborough has bought her way to what she will consider a Merry Christmas, by winning the social patronage of the English nobility, but it has cost her a few million dollars. Plainfielders can insure to their families a much merrier Christmas by a visit to Collier's, and it won't cost them quite as much either.

WHERE SHOTS RAINED.

ST. JOSEPH'S PARISHONERS HEAR OF HISTORIC BATTLE FIELDS.

Father Miller Addresses the Holy Name Society and Relates Many Instructive and Interesting Things of the Civil War.

At the meeting of the Holy Name Society for the year, held in St. Joseph's church, yesterday, Father Miller spoke on "Historic Battle Fields" which he had visited. His discourse brought him down through the Virginias and Tennessee. In the vicinity of Chattanooga there are several points of interest, chief among them being the battle field of Chickamaugau and Missionary Ridge, so-called, because many years ago Catholic Missionaries had Indian schools upon it. The battle of Chattanooga was fought on Lookout Mountain, 2000 feet high, and was termed the "battle above the clouds."

This battle has been proclaimed the most brilliant of Grant's achievements and the most picturesque of the battles of the war. Other fields were described and also the battle field of New Orleans where General Jackson repulsed General Pakenham the British commander. It seems that a monument was erected on the field and on the pedestal was inscribed this sentence, "The Union Must and Shall Be Preserved," in raised letters. At the time of the Civil War the Confederates chiselled off these letters, but when Ben Butler came to the city he had the same inscription replaced only done by sinking the letters so that they could not be so easily removed. The speaker also told of the battle fields in Texas around San Antonio where the Texas struggled for Independence.

At the next meeting the question: "Resolved, North Plainfield should be annexed to Plainfield," will be debated.

HURLED A PIECE OF LEAD

DENNIS RAGAN LET HIS ANGER GO TO FAR IN SNOW BALLING.

Struck With a Snow Ball Thrown by George Townley and Retaliated With a Junk of Lead—Townley Was Severely Injured.

George Townley, of the borough, an employe at the Pond Tool Works, narrowly escaped fatal injury Saturday afternoon last during the hour. He, with several other employers, among whom was Dennis Ragan, was in the yards throwing snow balls. All present were indulging in the sport, when suddenly Ragan was hit rather hard with a snow ball thrown by young Townley. In an instant Ragan became angry and went for Townley. The latter ran behind a corner of the building to escape his pursuer. In the meantime Ragan ran to the shop and secured a piece of lead weighing three pounds. He returned in search of Townley, who was still behind the building. Just as the latter put his head out to see what Ragan was doing, the heavy piece of lead was thrown with full force.

It struck Townley square in the forehead, and beside inflicting a deep, ugly gash, the blow stunned him for sometime.

His comrades ran to his assistance, and found that he was losing considerable blood. They were frightened and as soon as possible they took him to the hospital where he was under treatment for two hours. From there young Townley went to the home of his sister, Mrs. Frank Manchester, on Lafayette place, where he remained on Saturday.

Ragan, the man who committed the act, was frightened after he realized what he had done, and he considers himself exceedingly fortunate that his deed did not kill Townley.

As yet it is not known whether any action will be taken against Ragan. Townley will not be able to work for sometime as he suffers a great deal from the injury and it will require considerable time to heel.

GUILD TEA A SUCCESS.

THE CHURCH OF THE REDEEMER WOMEN ADD TO THEIR FUNDS.

The Affair Held at the Home of Mrs. George Dupee and the Profits to be Devoted to the Building of a Church.

The tea and sale held at the home of Mrs. George Dupee, 30 Rockview avenue, Saturday afternoon, under the auspices of the Ladies Guild of the Church of the Redeemer, was one of the most successful in the history of the church. From time to time similar events have been held, the proceeds of which have been placed in church building fund, which at present is quite large, and the women hope that before long they will have enough money to start the work of building a church, which is so much needed.

The fancy table, which was well supplied with dainty articles, both pretty and useful, was in charge of Miss Stevens and Miss Grace Brown, while Miss Effie DeKlyn and Miss Horn had charge of the cake table. A choice assortment of candies was easily disposed of by Miss Helen Phillips.

In the tea room Miss Davis and Miss Barlow poured tea, while Miss Edith Clapp, Miss Woltman and Miss Hull served as waitresses. The receiving of money was left to Mrs. Townsend, whose efficiency is well-known.

Those who received were Mrs. Charles Matthews, Mrs. A. E. Faber, Mrs. George Dupee and Mrs. H. R. Philips.

There was a very large number of fancy articles and cakes donated, also homemade candy, and the sale was so successful that everything was disposed of.

Too much credit can not be given those in charge.

LIKE THE ROCK ITSELF.

SUCH WAS THE SUBSTANTIAL CHARACTER OF PLYMOUTH PILGRIMS.

Rev. Charles L. Goodrich Delivers a Discourse Appropriate to Forefathers Day.—Christians Should Emulate the Pilgrims.

Forefathers' Day was very pleasantly observed, yesterday morning, by the loyal Congregationalists of the church on Seventh street. A large congregation joined in the songs of remembrance and patriotism, and listened to the unusually strong and inspiring sermon on 'Plymouth Rock," which was delivered by the pastor, Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich.

"The Pilgrim's history had, indeed, been like that of the rock," said Rev. Mr. Goodrich. "They, too, had come from far away, and in that far away place they had been slowly gathered and settled together. It was not a company ill assorted and hastily gathered together that landed at Plymouth. Centuries had gone to the gathering of that company, and varied trials and repeated tests had sifted them.

"Like the rock, they had been in the fire and crushed under pressure, and like it had known upheavals and commotions and had been themselves cast out. As a result, the quartz in the rock was not harder than the quartz in their characters. The endurance, the grand patience, that will not yield to hardship, or give way before difficulties, is what we honor in them, and what we may well emulate. Plymouth was but a bleak and cheerless home that first winter: young and old wasted away, at one time only seven being able to tend the sick and bury the dead. But the colonists' hearts never faltered: they endured, they trusted in God, and hoped for better days.

"We need more of the granite of the Pilgrims character in us. We yield all too readily to small difficulties, and give up all too quickly in our attempts to accomplish the work of God."

"If we are to be worthy to claim such men as fathers, let there be some granite in our characters. Let the motives which ruled them be in us as powerful as the great forces of nature. Let the sense of duty be like the grip of a glacier, let faith in God be as potent as the sun, and the desire to do good, like the tug of the earth. Let us put a little Plymouth Rock into our characters: it is made up of three ingredients, patience, pluck, persistence."

Absolutely pure, perfectly harmless, and invariably reliable are the qualities of One Minute Cough Cure. It never fails in colds, croup and lung troubles. Children like it because it is pleasant to take and it helps them. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

NOT A HENPECKED MAN

MARRIED FELLOWS BOWL LIKE FIENDS AT THE PARK CLUB.

Single Men Were Good For Only One Frame—Then Their Opponents' Mascot, "The Yellow Kid," Unnerved Them.

"The Yellow Kid" was all powerful at the bowling alleys of the Park Club Saturday night and the Benedict team, which chose him as their mascot, came out ahead in the first game of the series with the Bachelors of the club. It promised to be an exciting game at the start but the Benedicts rolled much better than anyone, including themselves, while the strong team from the Bachelor ranks went to pieces with few exceptions.

This series of games between the Bachelors and Benedicts has become an annual event at the club and is looked forward to with great interest. So it was not surprising that the alleys were lined Saturday night with the members and their families who had come over to see the first game of the series. The sympathies of the audience were about evenly divided, the wives and members of the older set favoring the Benedicts while the young ladies and junior members encouraged the other team. But as the game went on and the poor Bachelors began to sink deeper and deeper in the mire of defeat, many of the gentler sex changed their allegience and tried to encourage the weaker side.

The game did not begin until 8:30 o'clock and before that everybody had to have a look at the mascot of the Benedicts, which adorned the wall above the score board. It was the famous "Yellow Kid" and like the others of its family, it existed only on paper. It was a real "Yellow Kid," however, the features were too familiar and the inscription that adorned its yellow gown was of the usual nature. "Say?" it said, "we won't do a ting to dem. I'm the mascot for de married mens of the Park Klub. See! Wate till ye see me roll, de Bachelors won't be in it." And the "Yellow Kid" told the truth.

At the appointed hour, VanBuren and Lyman rolled a practice ball and then opened the game for their respective sides. Everybody felt good as both teams had decided to win the game and they informed each other of the fact. Every man on both teams came in for his share of the comments and jokes that were flying about on every hand but Pete Matthews seemed to have more than his share. He appeared on the scene in his famous "eighty-nine cent" sweater which played such a prominent part in the games last year. The moment he took his position at the head of the alleys it was the signal for the breaking out of the most remarkable noises. Everybody had something to say and the result was deafening. That was a starter for the rooters and they continued without cessation for the next five frames. First the Bachelors opened the campaign with a yell but once was enough as the luck began to change. Then the Benedicts delivered an original composition that caused even the "Yellow Kid" to smile. It ran

"One, two, three,
Who are we?
We are the married men,
Hully-gee."

One of the ladies wanted to know the meaning of the last expression, but her question was lost in the uproar and no one happened to find it, so this remarkable phrase remained unexplained. As the game continued and the pitying ladies turned to the victims of the married men, the Benedictine rooters changed the yell to

"One, two, three,
Who are we?
The ladies are against us,
Hully-gee."

Then the Bachelors put their heads together and concocted the following, which was given with great feeling:

"We are the Bachelors,
Here us yell!
Bachelors! Bachelors!
What t'ell!"

Everybody present was appropriately shocked by this and the Bachelors rolled poorer than ever. The lead of the Bachelor team had continued for only the first frame and then the married men began to gain. Their third frame was remarkable, only one Benedict breaking. Councilman J. C. Peck rolled a wonderful game in his usual dignified manner, while Edwin Douglass, of the house committee, swept down the pins until his friends grew frightened at the terrible way in which he was rolling, breaking all his previous records.

The individual scores were as follows:

Bendicts.		Bachelors.

NEW CHURCH OFFICERS.

MONROE AVENUE CHAPEL EVOLVING INTO A REGULAR M. E. SOCIETY.

The Board of Trustees Chosen With William Burt as President—Services to be Held New Year's Eve in M. E. Church.

An important meeting was held Saturday evening at the Monroe Avenue chapel, at which time trustees were elected and committees appointed for the church which will be organized New Year's Eve. The purpose for which the meeting was called was to arrange as far as possible for the organization of the church. The trustees were chosen as follows: William Burt, president, Walter McGee; secretary; James McGee, treasurer; D. P. Hicks, James Stafford, George Whittley and Adam Neuman. The following committees were then appointed: Finance committee, Adam Neuman and D. P. Hicks; committee on church property, James Stafford and George Whittley. After which an informal discussion followed, and it was decided that further arrangements be left until Sunday morning, January 3d, when the quarterly conference will be held. At that time the official board of the church will be organized.

At the watch night service New Year's eve, to be held in the First M. E. church, the Monroe Avenue Chapel will officially be made a church and Rev. C. R. Barnes, of the home church, will transfer the letters to the new church. Presiding Elder G. W. Smith, will officially appoint Rev. W. C. O'Donnell as pastor of the new church, and Rev. H. J. Johnston will make a few remarks on behalf of Grace M. E. church. The dedicatory sermon will be preached by Presiding Elder G. W. Smith. This will be followed by a social hour previous to seeing the old year out and the new year in.

All week day services scheduled at Monroe Avenue Chapel during the next two weeks have been declared off, until after the new organization has been completed. The Christmas entertainment at the chapel will be held Wednesday evening of this week.

FAIR PRIZES AWARDED.

Successful End of the Event Conducted by Engine Company No. 2.

The firemen's fair closed Saturday night after a week of flattering success. The fire laddies were accorded a great deal of patronage from their many friends, and there was hardly room to accommodate all who desired to attend. Those in charge are deserving of merit for the excellent manner in which they conducted the fair.

Before the fair closed Saturday evening several contests were decided. The beautiful doll was given to Miss Catherine Meeney, who guessed the name given which was Ida, Mrs. Wm. McKinley's first name. In the contest for the quilt, Wm. Townley proved to be the most popular fireman, he receiving 203 votes. Jacob Benner was given one pillow, he having drawn the lucky number 15. The one holding number 49 is entitled to the other pillow, and the person holding number 17 is entitled to the chair.

Jacob Benner presented the music rack, which he won, to Miss Lottie Chamberlain.

The five dollar gold piece was presented to Eddie Britton, of East Second street, as he held the lucky number in the drawing which was 723.

Frightened at the Cars.

A lively runaway occurred at the freight house Saturday afternoon, when a horse owned by Woolston & Buckle, the North avenue painters, became frightened at the cars. The animal ran down the hill toward Richmond street and collided with Summers' truck, which was going the other way. When the two wagons came together the rear axle on the truck was broken off near the wheel. By quick action the runaway horse was caught before any further damage was done. The damage to Woolston & Buckle's wagon was slight. Mr. Summers was obliged to send for another truck to finish his day's work.

—Xmas presents at "cut" prices at Edsall's.

Christmas Sale and Festival.

An afternoon tea and sale of fancy articles will take place in the Parish House of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Clinton avenue, tomorrow afternoon beginning at two o'clock. The children's christmas festival and mother goose reception will take place in the evening. No admission to be paid at the door, in the afternoon.

To cure all old sores, to heal an indolent ulcer, or to speedily cure piles, you need simply apply DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve according to directions. Its magic-like action will surprise you. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front st

DENIED BY HAMLIN

American Missionary Says Mustapha Bey's Charges Are Lies.

STORY MANUFACTURED BY TURKEY

The Sultan's Policy Is To Try To Place the Blame for the Slaughter of Armenians Upon the Innocent---Mr. Hamlin Assails Our Government.

Boston, Dec. 21.—In reply to certain charges against himself and other former missionaries of the American board made by Mustapha Bey to the state department at Washington, the Rev. Cyrus. Hamlin, D. D., of Lexington, affirms that all the charges brought against him and the other missionaries are absolutely false. "Whatever proof Mustapha Bey may have presented to the state department," he says, "is manufactured by Turkish methods which will not bear examination. The testimony of Armenians given under torture is not admissable. In Turkey forged letters have been presented, but in every case the comparison, if allowed, with the writings of the accused, has at once revealed their forgery." With regard to the Hunchagists, Dr. Hamlin says that no word of his has ever been uttered or written which was not in earnest and unqualified condemnation. And the missionaties, now unjustly accused, he says, always have been against them, for which they have been threatened by them with assassination. "But the Turkish government is in a very tight place. The sultan is determined to exterminate the Armenians or convert them to Mohammedanism. He has been steadily at it for years. Some seventy or eighty thousand men have been massacred, peaceful, unarmed men, their houses destroyed and the women and children left to perish or become Moslems. This unparalleled drama of slaughter and suffering is attracting too much attention and suffering among the nations. The first plan of stoutly denying the truth of reports has to be given up. The evidence is multiform and overwhelming. The present plan is to lay the blame upon others. The sultan's party cannot accuse the Russians or Frenchmen or Italians or Englishmen. Their governments protect them. But any charge can be made against Americans; any amount of property can be safely destroyed, and any indignity perpetrated with safety. Our government has given us over to Sultan Hamid as the Lord gave Job to Satan—'He is in thy hand—only spare his life.' No evidence has been brought against either of the three missionaries mentioned by Mustapha Bey to the state department—Dwight, Wasburn and myself. We are absolutely not guilty and we challenge the proof. Whatever there is, it is a mass of falsehoods, and the documentary evidence is such as the Turkish government can pile up so long as it has sufficient money to pay the clerks for writing and the authors for forging. Let Mustapha Bey choose which horn of the dilemma he will hang upon. Either the Turkish people and government are the greatest cowards and poltroons in the world, or the greatest liars. There is no question of feeling here. Every one admits, with regard to the parties concerned, that the Armenians number 2,500,000 of unarmed people, who were never allowed to have arms, and a few, possibly 200, Russian Hunchags, unmistakably assassins. On the other side are 24,000,000 of Moslems with the caliph (the successor of the prophet) at their head, and a trained army of, say 250,000 of the bravest soldiers in the world. The sultan's will is law to the army and people. Now the sultan, Abdul Hamid, either could suppress all their disorders at the beginning, or he could not. If he could not, he and his subjects are the greatest cowards and poltroons that ever had existence on the earth. If he could suppress them, which is evident, then his course for the past few years is one of falsehood, dishonesty and dishonor. He wanted to exterminate the Armenians, but the odium of it is arousing the public sentiment of Christian nations, and it may endanger his throne. He now resorts to the mean subterfuge of accusing the innocent, although accusation itself exposes him to ridicule. These awful Hunchags—these terrible Armenians are the sole cause. He has been two and a half years suffering the result. On the ground of my personal knowledge of, and my intimate correspondwith the east, I denounce every charge thus brought against myself and associates as a piece of cowardly falsehood brought against men who have no protection."

Senator Warren's Condition.

Chicago, Dec. 21.—United States Senator Warren of Wyoming, who submitted to an operation for appendicitis at the Auditorium annex Saturday, is reported by Dr. Hammond, the attending physician, to be much improved. Dr. Hammond entertains great hopes of his patient's recovery, but says it will be six weeks before he can leave his room.

Ryan-McCarthy Bout To-night.

Buffalo, Dec. 21.—One of the greatest welter weight contests of the period will take place in the Empire Athletic club arena to-night between Tommy Ryan and Billy McCarthy. Both men are in superb condition, but one thing in McCarthy's favor is that he is heavier and stronger.

Locomotive Explodes.

Gads Hill, Mo., Dec. 21.—A freight locomotive on a side track of the Iron Mountain railroad, in this village, exploded. Engineer Fitzgerald and Brakeman Irby were killed and James Brady, brakeman, badly injured.

THE HOLIDAY RECESS

Congress To Adjourn To-morrow Until After New Year's Day.

PROGRAMME OF WORK ON HAND

Cuban Discussion Likely To Side-Track the Regular Business in the Senate--Cool Heads Counsel Moderation.

Washington, Dec. 21.—The Cuban question and Secretary Olney's statement of the executive's position, may precipitate a debate in the senate this afternoon that will set aside the regular business assigned for the time that body will be in session before the holiday recess. It is not improbable that some of the more radical Cuban sympathizers will start the discussion with the presentation of Senator Cameron's report. Conservative senators who have studied the precedents are inclined to the opinion that the talk about a serious difficulty between the president and congress has no sound foundation. Cool heads will counsel moderation. There is not the remotest probability of Mr. Cameron's resolution recognizing the independence of the republic of Cuba being acted upon in the senate before the holiday recess. When the debate does begin, it is evident that Senators Morgan, Davis, Chandler, Lodge, Cullom and Mills will take up a position adverse to that of the secretary of state, and the discussion may be prolonged till after the 4th of March. It was agreed in the committee on foreign relations that the report on the Cameron resolutions should be made this afternoon and that the matter should not be called up until after the holidays. This agreement will be carried out. If the programme of the senate, made before the Cuban question took such an acute form, is permitted to be carried out, the senate will discuss the Oklahoma free homestead bill, which is the unfinished business. The beginning of the holiday recess, with the adjournment tomorrow evening, gives but two days for business in the house, and there is small prospect of a quorum. Consideration of the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, which is the unfinished business, will be resumed this afternoon, and the measure will probably be disposed of, unless the advocates of the library scheme proposed by the joint committee as a substitute for the provisions reported by the committe should require the presence of a quorum, in which case the bill will go over until after the holidays.

OLNEY AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

Believed That His Visit Had Some Connection with Cuban Affairs.

Washington, Dec. 21.—The president who returned to the white house yesterday attended church a little later with Mrs. Cleveland. He appears much benefitted by his outing. He brought back numerous fat ducks, which he caused to be distributed among the members of his cabinet and his personal friends. Secretary Thurber called to see him and spent some time telling him of the events that had occurred during his absence, but no official business was taken up and it is not believed that the president feels called upon to add anything to the Cuban controversy at present. This morning Secretary Olney made his appearance at the executive mansion and had a brief consultation with the president, and while there is no official guarantee for the assertion it is not to be questioned that their conversation referred almost solely to the latest phase in the Cuban situation.

Lee Leaves for Havana.

Washington, Dec. 21.—Consul General Fitzhugh Lee, accompanied by his wife and daughter, left yesterday in the private car of President Du Val of the Florida Central & Peninsular railway for Tampa, where they are due this evening, and will leave Tampa for Havana on to-night's steamer.

Death of Inventor Lyman.

New York, Dec. 21.—William Lyman of Middlefield, Conn., son of the late David Lyman, died of pneumonia in this city yesterday. William Lyman was best known as the inventor and manufacturer of the Lyman gunsight, in use all over the world. He was a member of the Connecticut legislature in 1891.

Position for T. F. Bayard, Jr.

Wilmington, Del., Dec. 21.—Thomas F. Bayard, jr., son of the ambassador, has accepted a position in the department of the corporation counsel of New York and will remove to that city early next year. He will be connected with the department of street openings. He is a Yale man, class of '90.

Swiss Restrictions on Our Meat.

Washington, Dec. 21.—United States Consul Germaine at Zurich, Switzerland, informs the state department that when American shippers send meat to that country without borax the restrictions against American meat importation will probably be removed.

Against New York Waifs.

Topeka, Kan., Dec. 21.—The new populist legislature will probably forbid by law the importation of homeless waifs from New York city. The Children's Home society has asked to be protected from the waifs brought into this state from New York on the ground that they are criminal and vicious.

Earl of Normanton Dead.

London, Dec. 21.—James Charles Herbert Welbore Ellis-Agar, third Earl of Normanton, is dead at the age of 78 years. He sat in the house of lords as Baron Somerton.

THE ITALIAN WEDDING.

It Pleases the Politicians, But the Bride is to Be Pitied.

The marriage of Princess Helene of Montenegro, daughter of Prince Nicholas (or Nikita), of that principality, to Victor Emanuel, prince of Naples and heir apparent to the throne of Italy, was solemnized in Rome the other day. It was a semi-private affair, no invitations having been issued to the European courts. The civil marriage took place in the ballroom of the quirinal, while the religious ceremony was performed after the ritual of the Church of Rome at the Church of St. Mary of the Angels. The religious wedding was attended by considerable splendor.

Of all royal marriages of the last 20 years this one is literally the worst. The prince is a dwarf, measuring scarce four feet in his stockings, is ugly of countenance, morose, and at times violent of disposition, and withal possesses so weak and puny a constitution that several times during the last two years his life has hung in the balance. His bride, on the other hand, is tall, towering over her husband by a foot and a half, well built, decidedly pleasing of face, vivacious and lively in disposition. Since reaching man's estate the prince has sought for and been refused the hand of nearly every marriageable princess in Europe; while, on the other hand, the princess has been compelled by her parents and the influence of the Russian court to put away from her the attentions of many fascinating and handsome courtiers who have gone a-wooing in her direction. The wedding is a barter of beauty for cash. The prince is as wealthy as he is ugly; the princess as poor as she is handsome. Her father, the harlequin ruler of Montenegro, is a pauper, dependent upon the bounty of the present czar, whose mother undertook the raising and education of the princess. There was a time when it was thought that a match would be made between Princess Helene and the czar, and, in fact, it is generally understood that they once plighted their troth in secret; but this was before the emperor had seen Princess Alix of Hesse, granddaughter of Queen Victoria, and for whom, so the story runs, he jilted the fair daughter of Montenegro. However, he has done the right thing by his former sweetheart by giving her a dowery of nearly $1,000,000 and a wedding present of a diamond ornament purchased in France at a cost of $400,000.

There is, of course, a political aspect to the wedding, inasmuch as it brings about a resumption of the friendly relations existing in olden times between Italy and Montenegro. Now that this principality has furnished a future queen to Italy, the Italians expect to regain the connection and influence in the principality which were broken off three centuries ago.

By its power to respond to all these needs Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved itself the greatest friend of women. Thousands write that they have been given health and strength by its use. It is the great blood purifier, and consequently the true nerve tonic.

"I feel that I should be wanting in common gratitude should I fail to tell the benefit my wife has derived from Hood's Sarsaparilla. She became seriously ill from running ulcers, caused by poorness of and was strongly advised by a friend to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. She said it had cured her and would no doubt cure my wife. So we tried it, and to say that its effect is wonderful, is only using a mild expression. It appears to be building up a new constitution for her; and, as we are a family of eleven, there are eleven of us rejoicing at the result.

"If the foregoing induces only one person, suffering in the same manner, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I shall feel more than rewarded." ELIJAH PACKER, 585 Monroe Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

BIG BANK SUSPENDED.

The Illinois National Closed by the Clearing House Association.

Chicago, Dec. 21.—At a special meeting of the Clearing House association, held at the residence of the secretary, and which adjourned after midnight Sunday morning, the National Bank of Illinois, the second largest institution of the kind in the state, was suspended. It was shown that the bank had made unwarrantable and unjudicious loans and that as a result the capital and surplus is seriously impaired. It is believed many serious business failures will follow the collapse. Great excitement prevails.

PROF. HERRMANN'S FUNERAL.

Both the Hebrew and Masonic Ceremonies Used in the Service.

New York, Dec. 21.—The funeral of Alexander Herrmann, the magician, was held at Masonic temple yesterday afternoon. The large hall was crowded with friends of the deceased. The body, in a rosewood casket, on which was a mass of flowers, was borne into the hall and carried to the front platform. The remains were followed by Mrs. Herrmann, widow of the deceased, who was supported by Adolph Palme, a nephew of the dead magician. A choir from the Temple Emanu-El sang funeral hymns. The simple Hebrew burial rites were conducted by Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman of the Temple Emanu-El, who delivered an eulogistic oration. The members of Munn lodge, of which deceased was a member, were present. After the oration they gathered about the casket, and Charles Heisen conducted the Masonic ritual service. At the conclusion of the ceremonies the body was taken to Woodlawn cemetery for interment. A large number of prominent people were in attendance; also delegations from the Lambs, Phoenix and Press clubs, of which deceased was a member.

Against Oral Hearings.

Washington, Dec. 21.—The ways and means committee of the house is discouraging, as far as possible, oral hearings on the proposed new tariff bill. Many persons who have written for information respecting the hearings have been asked to put their arguments in writing so that they may receive more attention. There is a determined effort on the part of the committee to finish the hearings on the date specified—Jan. 11—in order that there may be no delay in reporting the bill to the house.

Indiana Miners' Strike Ended.

Terre Haute, Ind., Dec. 21.—The strike of the bituminous coal miners in this state, which began May 1, has come to an end. The men at the mines in three counties, representing 2,000 miners, have voted to accept the five per cent. reduction from sixty cents a ton. Some of the men from other fields had gone to work at fifty-five cents, and many more had been conceded the sixty cents. It is understood the operators now paying sixty cents will ask their men to accept the reduction.

Viscount Gough's Successor.

Washington, Dec. 21.—The official gazetting in London of a successor to Viscount Gough, secretary of the British embassy, has caused both surprise and regret in official and diplomatic circles that Lord Gough's career here should have been so brief, but considerable satisfaction is expressed that the new secretary, Maurice Ernest De Bunsen, is well acquainted with Washington, for he was very popular here years ago.

WAR NOT NECESSARY

Spaniards View the Cameron Resolution with Moderation.

CANOVAS DOES NOT EXPECT TROUBLE

The Prime Minister To Make a Declaration on President Cleveland's Message---The Official Organ Advises Spaniards To Go Slow.

Madrid, Dec. 21.—Senor Canovas del Castillo, the prime minister, has received the official text of President Cleveland's message to the American congress and will shortly make a declaration on that part of the document which refers to the Cuban question. Conferences have been held during the past few days between the most prominent men in political life in Spain with the object of seeking a solution of the problem which confronts the government, and which, it is possible, may cause a war with the United States. It is conceded in all political circles that the situation is grave, but it is thought that the willingness of Spain to grant reforms in the Spanish West Indies should tend to avert any disply of aggressiveness on the part of the United States. One point is settled upon, and that is that no reforms shall be put into effect in Cuba until the insurrection shall have been suppressed, for it is held that to offer reforms with the Cubans still in arms would indicate weakness on the part of Spain and would also be derogatory to her honor. Though the popular indignation caused by the receipt of the news of the action of the committee on foreign relations of the American senate shows little sign of diminution, there have been no demonstrations against the United States or its representatives anywhere in Spain. That such manifestations were expected, however, is shown by the fact that police and gendarmes were detailed to guard the American legation here, and precautions were taken elsewhere to protect the consulates of the United States should the excited people attempt to make an attack upon them. Orders were sent to the governors of the several provinces to prohibit any anti-American demonstrations, and from dispatches received from the provincial capitals it is known that the orders were faithfully carried out.

Spain Advised To Go Slow.

The Epoca, the organ of Senor Canovas and the ministerialists, in commenting upon the situation, says that Spain needs at the present moment much calm, sound judgment on the part of the public to avoid greater difficulties than those the government is now facing. As long as prudence is compatible with national honor Spain has nothing to do save defend her rights if they are attacked. A recognition of belligerency is not a casus belli unless such recognition is granted by an interested nation. Formerly Spain recognized the belligerency of the Southern States of America despite the protest of the federal government, which did not regard the attitude of European governments in this matter as a casus belli. If the act indicated by the Cameron resolution shall be consummated Spain will protest, thereby greatly influencing the relations between the United States and Spain, but Spaniards must not forget the attitude of the powers, which, after President Cleveland's declaration anent the Anglo-Venezuelan dispute, abstained from any intervention. Spain ought to keep account of all these precedents.

Canovas Looks for No Trouble.

Prime Minister Canovas holds that, under the the framing of Senator Cameron's resolution, there will be no armed intervention on the part of the United States in Cuban territory. Though the partisans of the proposal may obtain the necessary votes to override the veto which he believes President Cleveland will interpose and so make the resolution an obligatory act of congress, it would only affect a recognition of the independence of Cuba and lead to an offer of its good offices by the United States to terminate the war. With whatever officiousness the United States might interpose Spain will retain the right to accept or reject the offer of American good offices. If the United States recognizes the independence of Cuba she will then have to recognize the laws of neutrality. If she recognizes the belligerency of the Cubans Spain will have the right to stop and visit American vessels at sea. Senor Canovas does not think that the Cameron resolution need cause serious perturbation. It will only make the relations between Spain and the United States more strained, but need not cause a rupture. He will never consent to foreign interference in what is a question of Spain's domestic politics. Spain will regulate her acts so that nobody will be able to say that she made war upon another power, yet she will always repel aggression. The tone of the newspapers generally is more moderate to-day than it was yesterday. They contain little to excite the populace.

American Petroleum in Germany.

Washington, Dec. 21.—From information received here from Berlin it is believed there is no truth in the published report that the German government intends to resort to prohibitive measures against the importation of American petroleum as an act of reprisal for President Cleveland's action in reimposing tonnage dues upon vessels arriving in America from German ports.

THE NEW COUNTY IDEA.

There is probably nothing that would please the average Plainfielder better than to have city and borough consolidation accomplished by the formation of a new county with the Colorado of the East as the county seat, as suggested by Senator Reed and advocated by other borough citizens. There are sections of Union, Somerset and Middlesex counties that turn naturally to Plainfield as a center and to be compelled to travel to either Elizabeth, Somerville or New Brunswick to transact county business is not only an inconvenience but an aggravation to the residents of these particular points. If there is any way of pacifying the diversified elements to be encountered in the proposition to form a new county by the withdrawal of a small section from each of the other counties, it ought to be pushed. For the localities concerned, Plainfield would be a most satisfactory place for a county seat, and beyond the satisfaction that would result from a Greater Plainfield there would be much glory in knowing that we are not playing second fiddle in matters political to the Elizabeth politicians. Of course, just at present on the Republican side, Plainfield is faring very well, but honors were long delayed, and what the future may have in store may simply be what the past has been—a good deal of promise but little of realization. At any rate, with a new county and Plainfield as its capital, there would be no chances.

The Middlesex county grand jury has made a presentment against the justices of peace charging that the county is constantly put to a heavy expense by these lower court officers entertaining trivial complaints, an evidence of which is the fact that out of 136 cases submitted to the Grand Jury only 43 were indicted.

This is the time when progressive merchants find it pays to advertise, and liberally, too.

Many Jersey eyes are looking towards Trenton just now.

Electric Bitters

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

—The Christmas decorations at the First Presbyterian church are unusually pretty. They consist entirely of greens and were arranged by the Advance Circle, King's Daughters, of the church.

Only Three Days More.

Only three days more to Christmas, and Edsall says these must be devoted to clearing out his entire stock of Christmas goods regardless of cost. "Cut" prices on everything. Several cases of new goods have come in late, and in order to sell them they have been marked away below the usual price. Extraordinary inducements are offered to make a clean sweep of these goods.

THEATRICAL.

The company which is announced to appear with Woolcott & Jackson's comedians at Music Hall Christmas afternoon, includes among its members such well-known and clever performers as McCale and Cunningham, Frank G. Mack, John Cullen, Master Bobbie Lester, the Yellow Kid, Aida Woolcott, "Cute" MacDonald, Helen A. Furman, Sophie Clifton, LaBard and Ryerson, Katherine Heath and Blanche Gordon. They will all be seen in L. N. Woolcott's "A Yellow Kid," a dramatic history of the pranks and antics of that funny little fellow, Mickey Dugan, the famous Yellow Kid, whose pictorial pranks in the New York Sunday Journal and World have been the laughing sensation of the year.

"A Run on the Bank" will be presented at Stillman Music Hall next Saturday night by the Ward & Vokes company of thirty people. This means that the most gilt-edged farce comedy organization traveling is coming to Plainfield. Long before Ward & Vokes forsook the vaudeville they were regarded as among the best "teams" in the variety business, and when they made the step from vaudeville to starring honors, the reputation thus made was upheld by the policy of having nothing but the best and plenty of it. The result has been seen through two years of unparalleled success which they have enjoyed as stars.

CLEVELAND'S

BAKING POWDER

BABE OF BETHLEHAM.

REV. J. W. RICHARDSON PREACHES AN APPROPRIATE CHRISTMAS SERMON.

Christ Was Not Unlike Other Children Except That in Him Was Born the New Life and a Disposition to Release Sinners.

The special Christmas service at the Park Avenue Baptist church yesterday morning was an attractive one and exceedingly interesting, and the church was filled to its utmost capacity. The service was opened with two vocal selections 'Hark! the Herald Angels Sing," and "Come Let Us Celebrate the Day," by Miss Florence G. Hawkins, Miss Emma Fisk, Wheaton S Lowry, I. Bailey Hill and Thomas Cuming. Prayer was then offered by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson. As an offertory, a violin solo, "Cavatina," by Miss Udell, of the Ladies' String Orchestra, New York, was rendered in a pleasing manner. This was followed with a vocal solo, "O, Holy Night," by Charles Lewis, of the Crescent Avenue church quartette, with violin obligato, by Miss Udell.

The sermon was then delivered by the pastor. His text was "For Unto You a Child is Born."

The discourse being appropriate to Christmas time was full of excellent thoughts and suggestions. The idea was advanced that there were o her babes in Bethlehem, like unto the Christ, and in this respect ne was not unlike other children, except that in Him was born the germs of a new life and a new disposition which could release the sinner from bondage. Another point made was that astronomers have been unable to locate the "Star of the East," yet its beams now shines in many million hearts.

This Babe, born in a manger, was one with the Father, the speaker said, and when people accept Him, they become one with Him.

Another importan thought was that there are assurances that Christ will appear the second time on earth and there will be no secrecy, but on the contrary there will be publicity, and the second advent will be a cause for punishment or reward. He will come with great power and majesty and all will be under His subjection. The speaker did not think that the second coming was a great way off and he urged all to be prepared.

Mrs. Richardson held the closest attention throughout the discourse and his words were exceedingly impressive.

During the service there was congregational singing under the direction of D. E. Davis, organist, and the choir, and Mr. Davis assisted in the rendition of the solos.

The way to cure catarrh is to purify the blood, and the surest, safest, best way to purify the blood is by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, the One True Blood Purifier.

Hood's Pills are prompt, efficient, always reliable, easy to take, easy to operate.

—The Cooper Lamp Company, of Westfield, has purchased the Chamberlain machine shop building and is having it moved to a lot on Broad street next to The Leader office, where they will use power from the latter office to run the machinery.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN AND NEW MARKET.

Conductor William Cockney is anticipating a pleasant holiday visit with his parents at Harrisburg, Pa.

After a week's confinement to the house by illness, engineer John McCall ran his train as usual on Saturday.

A half dozen young men from this place formed themselves into a stag party, Saturday evening, and attended Waldmann's Theatre in Newark.

While working at the fire in the Presbyterian church Saturday afternoon, Chief Giles and Foreman Joseph Maier both cut their hands severely.

Miss Jennie Stevens, of Hagerstown, Md., is expected to arrive here in a few days to spend the month of January with her friend Miss Emma Giddes

A section of the New Market pond has been cleared of snow, and a large number of young people enjoyed the skating there Saturday afternoon and evening.

There are still many slippery and dangerous walks in town caused by the snow and ice. A few shovelsfull of ashes or a little sawdust would obviate all the trouble.

Mayor P. W. Brakeley and family were in Easton, Pa., Saturday, attending a family reunion. The mayor's mother is eighty-two years of age, but she is remarkably well preserved for one of her years.

A good sized dog owned by a resident named Conover wandered about town on Saturday, snapping at and biting other canines. Four or five dogs are known to have been bitten by the worthless cur. Joel Giddis dispatched the dog with his seven shooter.

A requiem mass was celebrated in St. John's church at 10:30 Friday for the repose of the soul of the late Miss Hart, who died at Bethlehem, Pa., on Tuesday and was brought here the following day. Rev. Father Bogard officiated, assisted by Rev. Fathers Miller and O'Conner.

SCOTCH PLAINS.

The Town Committee of Fanwood Township will meet this evening to make up the list of delinquent tax payers.

Robert Walpole and daughter were in Brooklyn, Saturday, attending the funeral of a near relative. They returned last night.

The scholars of the M. E. Sunday School will be given their Christmas entertainment on Wednesday evening, to be followed by a general sociable in the church parlors, to which all are invited.

The details are complete for the reception and dance, given under the auspices of the Cabinet Social Club, in the Fanwood Club house, tomorrow evening. Prof. O'Reilly will furnish the music for dancing.

The ice on Marsh's pond near here is now about five inches thick, and the skating has been very good for a few days. The owners hope for a thickness of from nine inches to a foot, before they begin to harvest.

If some of the few people who own property and live at the Plains would lay sidewalks in front of their houses, pedestrians would not be obliged to walk in the middle of the street, or else wade through three or four inches of mire.

Owing to the poor condition of the roads it is not likely that any more stone will be delivered from the crushers before spring. Some advanced orders are in the hands of the owners, but they are not very dressing just at this time.

James M. Boyle, formerly manager and superintendent of the mountain stone crusher, has been engaged by the American Engineering Company of Bound Brook. He will travel in the interest of the company, and his territory is unlimited.

The few sleighriders who ventured out yesterday afternoon found it rather difficult to get over Cole's hill on East Front street. The roadbed was bare and in the gutters there were banks of snow to encounter from two to five feet deep. In the Plains and toward Fanwood the sleighing was fairly good.

A genuine, old fashioned cocking main took place at a rendezvous here, late Saturday night, when Plainfield and Orange birds were pitted against Scotch Plains, at 11.30 p. m. When the contest opened there were some twenty sports present from Newark,

The length of life may be increased by lessening its dangers. The majority of people die from lung troubles. These may be averted by promptly using One Minute Cough Cure. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Summit, Rahway, Plainfield and other nearby towns. In all a half dozen battles were fought, and Scotch Plains captured most of these. The gathering did not disperse until sunrise yesterday, and much money changed hands on the result.

Base ball player Billy Lee has a muscoove duck, which in good health can make as much noise as a miniature fog horn. Recent attempts have been made to rob Mr. Lee's hen roost of some valuable game fowls, but the duck invariably sounds an alarm by its loud quacking and the intruders have been frightened away. Saturday night, or early yesterday morning, some one or more unknown persons who were undoubtedly acquainted with the surroundings, cut out an oval piece of glass in one of the rear windows, large enough to admit a hand. Where the glass was cut was directly alongside the catch. Two dogs in the house sounded the alarm and the inmates were aroused probably just in time to prevent a robbery.

NIPPED IN THE BUD.

Presbyterian Church at Dunellen Narrowly Escapes Destruction by Fire.

Fire was discovered in the Presbyterian church at Dunellen, on Saturday afternoon, but fortunately it was extinguished before much damage was done and without sending out a general fire alarm.

The scholars and teachers of the Sunday-school were in the edifice rehearsing their Christmas carols, when the odor of smoke was detected, and soon after flames sprung up through the register in the main right hand aisle and set fire to the woodwork in some of the nearby pews. For a time there was consternation among the teachers and scholars, and acting on the impulse of the moment, a lot of cushions were hastily gathered from the pews and piled on the fire, with the evident intent of smothering out the flames. But this only made matters worse, and the fire was making rapid progress when the firemen were notified. Chief A. S. Giles and Foreman Joseph Maier hastened to the engine house, and procuring tanks of chemicals were driven rapidly to the fire, where they rendered efficient services by keeping the flames from spreading. The tin heating pipe leading from the furnace and through which the flames were shooting upward, was torn away with some difficulty and the chemicals were used with good effect.

The loss occasioned by the fire is trifling, and no blame is attached to the sexton, Chas. Whyhusly.

WORK IN THE "GYM."

Y. M. C. A. Athletes Show Friends What They Can Do.

The exhibition of gymnasium work by the members of the evening classes at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium on Saturday evening proved a great success. The visitors' gallery was crowded with the families and friends of those taking part in the exhibition and all seemed much pleased with the entertainment provided.

About twenty of the members of the evening classes took part in the exibition. First came a bar bell drill under the leadership of Physica Director Heywood, then followed work on the flying rings, the horizontal bar, the parallel bars and the side-horse by different members of the classes. A number of competitive events were held. The three standing broad jumps were won by George Proctor Smith with Gilmore Drayton, second. There was a tug-of-war by two teams of six men, captained by George Proctor Smith and Gilmore Drayton. There were six heats, each side winning three.

The potato race was a most amusing contest and was very exciting. Geo. P. Smith and Mr. Vogel tied for first place. During the race there was some special work done on the horizontal bar by Victor Christofferson, J. Lewis and C, E. A. Heywood.

A game of basket ball ended the exhibition. The game was played by two picked teams from the evening classes, captained by George P. Smith and Max Moraller. The result was a tie, 6 to 6.

THE MISTRESS of the Mine.

or A Woman Intervenes.

By Robert Barr.

[Copyright, 1895, by Robert Barr.]

get out of the city of Ottawa and into the country, where there were fewer people and more air, he was going to be ill. He resolved to leave for the mine as soon as possible. There he would get things in as good order as possible and keep things going until he heard from the owner. When he got to his hotel he wrote to Wentworth, telling the circumstances under which he secured the mine, rather briefly, and dealing with other more personal matters. Having posted this, he began to pack his portmanteau preparatory to leaving early next morning. While thus occupied the bell boy came to his room and said: "There is a gentleman wishes to see you."

He imagined at once that it was Von Brent, who wished to see him with regard to some formality relating to the transfer, and he was, therefore, very much astonished, in fact, for a moment speechless, to see Mr. William Longworth enter and calmly gaze round the rather shabby room with his critical eyeglass.

"Ah," he said, "these are your digs gings, are they? This is what they call a dollar hotel, I suppose, over here Well, some people may like it, but I confess I don't care much about it myself. Their three or four-dollar-a-day hotels are bad enough for me. By the way, you look rather surprised to see me. Being strangers together in a strange country, I expected a warmer

"It's very good of you," said Edith.

greeting. You said last night, in front of the Russell house, that it would please you very much to give me a warm greeting; perhaps you would like to do so to-night."

"Have you come up here to provoke a quarrel with me?" asked Kenyon.

"Oh, bless you, no. Quarrel! Nothing of the sort. What would I want to quarrel about?"

"Perhaps you will be good enough to tell me why you came here, then?"

"Very reasonable request, very reasonable indeed, and perfectly natural, but still quite unnecessary. It is not likely that a man would climb up here into your room, and then not be prepared to tell you why he came, in the first place, to congratulate you on the beautiful and dramatic way in which you secured the mine at the last moment, or apparently at the last moment. I suppose you had the money all along?"

"No, I had not."

"Then you came in to Von Brent just as soon as you received it?"

"Well, now, I don't see that it is the business of anyone else but myself. Still, if you want to know, I have no objection to saying that I came to Mr. Von Brent's room at the moment I received the money."

"Really! Then it was sent over by cable, I presume?"

"Your presumption is entirely correct."

"My dear Kenyon," said the young man, seating himself without being asked, and gazing at John in a benevolent kind of way, "you really show some little temper over this affair of ours. Now here is the whole thing in a nutshell—"

"My dear sir, I don't wish to hear the whole thing in a nutshell. I know all about it. All I wish to know."

"Ah, precisely, of course you do, certainly, but nevertheless let me have my say. Here is the whole thing. I tried to—well, to cheat you. I thought I could make a little money by doing so, and my scheme failed. Now if anybody should be in a bad temper, it is I, not you. Don't you see that? You are not acting your part well at all. I'm astonished at you!"

"Mr. Longworth, I wish to have nothing whatever to say to you. If you have anything to ask, I wish you would ask it as quickly as possible, and then leave me alone."

"The chief fault I find with you, Kenyon," said Longworth, throwing one leg over the other, and clasping his hands around his knee, "the chief fault I have to find, is your painful lack of a sense of humor. Now, you remember last night I offered you the managership of the mine. I thought certainly that by this time to-day I should be the owner of it, or, at least, one of the owners. Now, you don't appear to appreciate the funniness of the situation. Here you are, the owner of the mine, and I am out in the cold—'left,' as they say here in America. I am the man who is left—".

"If that is all you have to talk about," said Kenyon gravely, "I must ask you to allow me to go on with my packing. I am going to the mine to-morrow."

"Certainly, my dear fellow, go at once, and never mind me. Can I be of any assistance to you? It requires a special genius, you know, to pack a portmanteau properly. But what I wanted to say was this—why didn't you turn around, when you had got the mine, and offer me the managership of it? Then you could have had your revenge. The more I think of that episode in Von Brent's office, the more I think you utterly failed to realize the dramatic possibilities of the situation."

Kenyon was silent.

"Now all this time you are wondering why I came here. Doubtless, you wish to know what I want."

"I have not the slightest interest in the matter," said Kenyon.

"That is ungracious, but nevertheless I will continue. It is better, I see, to be honest with you, if a person wants to get anything out of you. Now I want to get a bit of information out of you. I want to know where you got the money with which you bought the mine?"

"I got it from the bank."

"Ah, yes, but I want to know who sent it over to you."

"It was sent to me by George Wentworth."

"Quite so, but now I want to know who gave Wentworth the money?"

"You will have a chance of finding that out when you go to England by asking him."

"Then you won't tell me?"

"I can't tell you."

"You mean by that, of course, that you won't."

"I always mean, Mr. Longworth, exactly what I say. I mean that I can't tell you. I don't know myself."

"Really?"

"Yes, really. You seem to have some difficulty in believing that anybody can speak the truth."

"Well, it isn't a common vice—speaking the truth. You must forgive a little surprise." He nursed his knee for a moment, and looked meditatively up at the ceiling. "Now would you like to know who furnished that money?"

"I have no curiosity in the matter whatever."

"Have you not? Well, you are a singular man. It seems to me that a person into whose lap £20,000 drops from the skies would have some little curiosity to know from whom the money came."

"I haven't the slightest."

"Nevertheless, I will tell you who gave the money to Wentworth. It was my dear friend Melville. I didn't tell you in New York, of course, that Melville and I had a little quarrel about this matter, and he went home decidedly huffy. I had no idea he would take this method of revenge, but I see it quite clearly now. He knew I had received the option of the mine. There was a little trouble as to what each of our respective shares was to be, and I thought, as I had secured the option, I had the right to dictate terms. He thought differently. He was going to Von Brent to explain the whole matter, but I pointed out that such a course would do no good, the option being legally made out in my name, so that the moment your claim expired, mine began. When this dawned upon him, he took the steamer and went to England. Now I can see his hand in this finish to the affair. It was a pretty sharp trick of Melville's, and I give him credit for it. He is a very much shrewder and cleverer man than I thought."

"It seems to me, Mr. Longworth, that your inordinate conceit makes you always underestimate your friends, or your enemies, either, for that matter."

"There is something in that, Kenyon; I think you are more than half right, but I thought, perhaps, I could make it advantageous to you to do me a favor in this matter. I thought you might have no objection to writing a little document to the effect that the money did not come in time, and consequently I had secured the mine. Then, if you would sign that, I could take it over to Melville and make terms with him. Of course, if he knows that he has the mine, there will not be much chance of coming to any arrangement with him."

"You can make no arrangements with me, Mr. Longworth, that involve a sacrifice of the truth."

"Ah, well, I suspected as much, but I thought it was worth while to try. However, my dear sir, I may make terms with Melville yet, and then I imagine you won't have much to do with the mine."

"I shall not have anything to do with it if you and Melville have a share in it. And if, as you suspect, Melville has the mine, I consider you are in a bad way. My opinion is that when one rascal gets an advantage over another rascal, the other rascal will be, as you say, 'left.'"

Longworth mused over this for a moment and said: "Yes, I fear you are right—in fact, I am certain of it. Well, that is all I wanted to know. I will bid you good-by. I shan't see you again in Ottawa, as I shall sail very shortly for England. Have you any messages you would like given to your friends over there?"

"None, thank you."

"Well, ta ta," and the young man left John to his packing.

When that necessary operation was concluded Kenyon sat down and thought over what young Longworth had told him. His triumph, after all, had been short-lived. The choice between the two scoundrels was so small that he felt he didn't care which of them owned the mine. Meditating upon this disagreeable subject, he suddenly remembered a request he had asked Wentworth to make to the new owner of the mine. He wanted no favor from Melville, so he wrote a second letter contradicting the request made in the first, and, after posting it, returned to his hotel and went to bed, probably the most tired man in the city of Ottawa.

CHAPTER XXVII.

This chapter consists largely of letters. As a general thing letters are of little concern to anyone except the writers and the receivers, but they are inserted here under the hope that the reader is already well enough acquainted with the correspondents to feel some interest in what they have written.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable. NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry orders will receive your work.

MAJOR M'KINLEY CHEERED.

Unusual Demonstration as the President-elect Entered a Chicago Church.

Chicago, Dec. 21.—A burst of applause mingled with cheers surprised and greeted Major McKinley when his carriage drove up to the Sixth Presbyterian church on Vernon avenue yesterday. The sidewalk was crowded with people who were unable to find seats in the house of worship. Scores of persons lingered about the vestibule, the doors and the streets in front of the church during the services, and when Major McKinley came out after the services the cheering and applauding were renewed. Consideration of the day and place did not restrain the enthusiastic admirers of the president-elect. It was partially to avoid similar demonstrations that Major McKinley remained so quietly at the home of his friends during the week and declined invitations to visit many of the theatres. He did not suppose enthusiasm would express itself so emphatically on the Sabbath. Major and Mrs. McKinley drove to the East Side after church and dined with a relative, the trip in the keen air being greatly enjoyed. The rest of the day was spent very quietly.

Says McKinley Is Against War.

Vienna, Dec. 21.—The Marquis de Hoyos, the Spanish ambassador here, declares that the Spanish government has received positive information that Mr. McKinley, the American president-elect, is not in favor of a war with Spain. The Neues Wiener Journal publishes an interview with Count de Casa Valencia, the Spanish ambassador to Great Britain, in which he says he is convinced that Mr. McKinley will not allow a rupture of the peaceful relations existing between Spain and the United States.

A Family of Five Burned to Death.

New York, Dec. 21.—A family of five were burned to death at their home at 514 E. Fifty-eighth street last night. The dead are: Aaron Goldsmith, 45 years old; Mrs. Matilda Goldsmith, 35 years old; Bertha Goldsmith, 10 years old: Hattie Goldsmith, 8 years old; Frank Goldsmith, 6 years old. The only person in the house at the time of the fire besides those burned to death was Mary Roska, 20 years old, the servant of the family. She escaped by jumping out of a second-floor window to the rear yard.

Americans at Jerusalem.

Washington, Dec. 21.—Consul Wallace at Jerusalem reports to the state department that according to the consular records of his office it appears that there are 530 citizens of the United States residing in Palestine. Of this number 438 are Jews, who are only nominally Americans, having lived in the United States just long enough to obtain citizens papers and passports. The majority of these emigrated from Russia to the United States and thence to Palestine.

Business Before Parliament.

London, Dec. 21. — The queen's speech has been finished and the ministers now know what their programme is to be. The most important bills demanding attention are the educational, masters' and workmen's conciliation, employers' limited liability and habitual drunkards', all of which have a fair prospect of passing. It is believed that the local government of Ireland bill will take from Ireland at least twenty members of parliament.

Who Will Be Bayard's Successor?

London, Dec. 21.—The interest aroused by the speculation as to the probable successor of Mr. Bayard as United States ambassador to the court of St. James is intense, and among those mentioned in official and semi-official circles the most prominent are Senator Lodge, Whitelaw Reid, Joseph Choate, Col. John Hay and Chauncey M. Depew. Any one of these would be welcomed by the American colony.

Suicide of Frederick Messing.

New Rochelle, N. Y., Dec. 21.—Frederick Messing, aged 31 years, a well known resident of this village, committed suicide yesterday by shooting himself through the head. He had been suffering with neuralgia and it is believed his suffering caused him to commit the deed. He leaves a widow and one child.

New Jersey Trolley Roads.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 21.—The Union Traction company, which has secured rights of way between this city and Hackensack, has sold out to the big Consolidated Traction company, now operating all the main trolley lines in Essex, Hudson and Union counties. The road will be operated in April.

A Child Indicted for Murder.

New Brunswick, N. J., Dec. 21.—It has not yet been decided when the trial will take place of Hilliard O. Newman, the 10-year-old boy who has been indicted for murder in the first degree for killing Frank Pfeister, 12 years old, during a quarrel over a game of "tag" at Weber on December 6.

Charged with Embezzlement.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 21.—Elmer A. Savage has been arrested on a civil process sworn out by the Herenden Manufacturing company of Geneva, N. Y. He is charged with having embezzled $4,500 of the funds of the company of which he is the Milwaukee representative.

Officers Probably Fatally Wounded.

Alton, Ill., Dec. 21.—Chief of police J. Kuhn and night patrolman John Budde were probably fatally shot here by three negroes, whom they tried to arrest. The footpads escaped.

No Contest over Kentucky's Vote.

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 21.—The democratic state campaign committee has abandoned its intention to contest the state's electoral vote owing to the lack of funds.

GERMAN DOCK STRIKE

Emperor William's Plan for a Coalition of Employers.

AGAINST THE WORKINGMEN'S UNIONS

Official Boycott on Journalists Continues. A Reporter Unceremoniously Expelled from Prince von Hohenlohe's Parliamentary Dinner.

(Copyright, 1896, by the United Associated Presses.)

Berlin, Dec. 21.—The parliamentary dinner given by the inperial chancellor, Prince von Hohenlohe, did not attract the attention of the press as has been the rule heretofore upon the occasion of this function and consequently less than usual is known of what actually took place there. The reason for this is the fact that the representatives of the press were entirely excluded from the banquet hall, whereas hitherto they have been especially invited to be present, but the presence of the kaiser, who mingled freely with the guests, conversing here and there upon the subjects of the strike of the Hamburg dock laborers, the rejection of the provision for reform of the judicial procedure by the reichstag and upon other important questions, has lent piquancy to the hearsay reports of the proceedings. While the dinner was in progress one journalist managed to get into the banquet hall upon his presentation of a blank invitation card, but he was soon discovered and unceremoniously expelled. Reliable echoes of the emperor's conversation at the banquet agree that his majesty's sympathies are entirely with the Hamburg employers and he is represented as saying that the employers are wholly lacking in their sense of the importance of forming a general coalition of employers against the unions of workingmen and advising the co-operation of the German, English and other employers in devising a scheme of international communication upon the conditions of trade which would benefit not only the employer but the employe as well.

The Recent German Scandals.

The emperor at Prince Hohenlohe's dinner conversed for some time with Herr von Levetzow, formerly president of the reichstag, and it is supposed that the subject of the conversation was the matter of the acceptance by Levetzow of the presidency of Prussian upper house, which has been declined by Prince Solms Hohensolms Lich on the ground of ill-health. The prince was elected to the office, but positively refused to serve. The scandals which resulted in the arrest of Major Baron von Tausch, chief of the political police, for forgery and perjury, upon which charges he is now in jail awaiting trial, are still being generally discussed in the newspapers and in the cafes and other public places. The Berliner Tageblatt, which paper was shown up during the trial of Baron von Luetzow as the home of one of the agents of Tausch, now endeavors to demonstrate its loyalty to the foreign office and vehemently denounces the at one-time supposed connection of Tausch with Prince Bismarck and count Herbert Bismarck as the grossest calumny against the ex-chancellor and his son. The Tageblatt, the Hanover Courier and other newspapers inspired from a common source, are conducting an agitation with the object of obtaining the arrest of Norman Schumann, alias Mundt, who was for a long time an active agent of Tausch and at the same time an occasional correspondent of a New York newspaper and a secret agent of the porte. Mundt maintains a villa on Lake Lucerne in Switzerland, and has long enjoyed the confidence of the German embassies in Rome and Constantinople.

Strikers May Accept Employers' Offer.

In regard to the Hamburg strike, it may be said that the prospects of success by the strikers are gloomy. The dispatches which have been cabled during the past week, while giving a general outline of the situation, really told nothing of the actual condition of affairs, which are such that some of the men are losing heart and are applying for reinstatement, but the masters remain obdurate and refuse to permit any of them to return until the strike is finally ended. At the beginning of the strike the employers offered to pay the men four shillings and six pence for a day of twelve hours, including meal times, but the strikers demanded five shillings a day with overtime. The employers are now renewing their offer, together with a reference of the matters in dispute to the court of inquiry suggested by the Hamburg senate with a view of preparing a method of settling disputes by negotiations between the employers and employes, and it is probable that, despite the fact that the balloting at Saturday's meetings of the strikers resulted in favor of continuing the strike, the offer will be accepted during this week, perhaps before Christmas.

A Cannon's Romantic History.

Hartford, Dec. 21.—The famous old cannon which was placed in the capitol Saturday has a romantic history. It is a 12-pounder smooth-bore cannon, presented to the state in 1862 by the United States minister to Belgium. When sent to the front it was found that the government had no ammunition which would fit it, so, although it was carried all through the war, it never fired a shot.

CYCLING COMMENT.

At the annual meeting of the New Jersey Division of the League of American Wheelmen, held at Newark, Thursday evening, the report of the membership of the division showed a great increase during the last year. The membership in December, 1895, being 2,437, and in December, 1896, a total of 4,659. In Plainfield the membership has decreased during that interval of time from 199 to 98, which is rather hard to account for. Asbury has also decreased, but all the other important cities have greatly increased their number of members. Montclair making the greatest gain, which was from 7 to 245, during the year. Plainfield was not represented at the meeting, and her wheelmen were not remembered in the appointment of the different chairmen by Chief Consul Frank Kireker, who took the chair for the first time.

WHIST.

The whist "four" of the Park Club again showed their skill on Saturday afternoon by defeating the crack team from the Brooklyn Whist Club in an exhibition game at the club club rooms of the latter club. The game was a close one, the Park Club winning by a score of 13 to 11. The Park team consisted of Messrs. Rogers, Townsend, Howell and Senator Reed. The team from the Brooklyn Club consisted of Messrs. Rowe, Weems, Neuman and Taylor.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

Tomorrow evening the Park Club bowling team will go to Roselle and bowl the team at that place. It is hoped that a large delegation will accompany the Parks and help them win the game by their cheers and presence.

TOM KELLER MAKES A CHANGE.

He Will Now Represent the Peters Cartridge Company.

About the most popular traveling representative that visits the trade engaged in the sale of ammunition is Thomas Keller, of this city. "Tee Kay," as he is familiarly known among the shooting men. Has been engaged as a representative of the United States Cartridge Co., of Lowell, Mass., for several years. Mr. Keller has severed his connections with that company and has now become associated with the Peters Cartridge Co., and Kings Powder Co., of Cincinnati, O., a firm well-known to the trade throughout the land. We congratulate the Peters Cartridge Company in securing the services of such a hustling salesman as Tom Keller, and also congratulate Mr. Keller in connecting himself with such a progressive firm as the Peters Cartridge Company.

Tom Keller is known among sportsmen from Maine to California, and is a popular fellow with the trade as well as with the shooting men. He is one of those fat, jolly fellows who always have a good story, a joke or a bit of humor ready to keep all in a happy mood when a gathering of trap shooters is held.

As a trap shot he stands well in the front rank, and last spring he made a record on live birds in California that placed him in the front rank in that State as a live-bird shot. His record at inanimate targets is a good one, and he often lands among the winners in the big tournaments. He has an easy, natural way of shooting, which really does not give him the appearance of trying to break them all. A few misses never ruffle his temper, and his good-nature beams under defeat, as though it was a victory.

The Peters Cartridge Co. will have a representative that will boom their product, and the trap shooters and sportsmen will be glad to see Tom Keller in a new harness, where he can pull with all his might.

—All bills against the city must be in by Thursday night to ensure payment by the Common Council at the next meeting.

—To accommodate the Christmas rush, the United States Express office will be kept open to 9 o'clock in the evening till after Christmas.

NEED OF MORE ROOM.

EAST THIRD STREET MISSION NOT NOW ABLE TO ACCOMMODATE ALL.

Plans Under Conideration to Build a New Edifice for Worship and if Need be to Call a Minister to Look After Work.

For some time past the East Third Street Mission has been doing a great work in the neighborhood in which it is located, and the influence of the mission has been felt in many parts of the city.

The membership has increased to such an extent that the present quarters have been for some time too small to successfully carry on the work, and the leaders of the mission together with the officials of the First Baptist church have been considering ways and means whereby a chapel could be built to meet the demands of this thrifty mission. From time to time meetings have been held with the above purpose in view.

The Sunday School membership has grown rapidly and there is not sufficient room to accommodate all the classes, and in consequence the classes have been combined. This has not given the best results as the various teachers have had more scholars than they could conveniently handle. As regards the regular meetings at the mission, there has not been enough room to comfortably seat all who desired to attend.

Recognizing these facts the officials have decided to erect a chapel which will in every way be adapted to the present and growing needs of the mission. The chapel will probably be erected on East Third street, on a lot yet to be selected. It will be a handsome, modern structure and fully in keeping with the church it represents. The idea of the First Baptist church is, if possible, to place the mission on a solid foundation, so that in time it will be self-supporting, and if the needs demand it a pastor will be called to the work.

The earnest and efficient work accomplished by Superintendent L. W. Randolph and his able corps of assistants, has been recognized, and the many conversions during the mission's existence has been considered of such great importance that a chapel is deemed an absolute necessity.

It is understood that the work will be commenced at an early date, and that the building will be pushed rapidly toward completion.

PASSING COMMENT.

Mayor-elect Charles J. Fisk was in Elizabeth, Saturday, while the big fire was in progress, and when a second alarm was sent in from another section of the city. The department officials were at a loss to know how to cope with the second conflagration as all the apparatus was in use at the first fire, and some of Mr. Fisk's companions suggested that the Plainfield department be called on to send assistance, but the suggestion was followed up with a bit of sarcasm by some one commenting that it would be necessary to call the council together for such action, as Plainfield is such a stickler for red tape. Mr. Fisk repled that if they really wanted to have the assistance of Plainfield, he would telephone Chief Doane, and would guarantee that in five minutes after, some of the apparatus would be on its way to Elizabeth. No one said the word, however. There is but little doubt but what Mr. Fisk could have made good his statement.

The members of the Sunday-school of the Congregational church believe in giving as well as receiving presents and yesterday they brought gifts of various kinds to be sent to the Italian Mission in New York and a colored mission school in Marshallville, Georgia. The roll was called of the different classes and one member of that class came forward with his or her arms laden with the presents brought by the members. Then each member of the primary department came up to the platform with their share of goods. Soon the platform was covered with a wonderful assortment of clothing, toys, shoes, games, provisions and, in fact, a little of everything. They were heaped about the desk and nearly covered the platfrom. They will be packed up at once and sent to their destination in time for Christmas.

Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, and his sister, Miss E. S. Coles, have offered to the Newark Public Library, from the estate of their father, Dr. Abraham Coles, the statue of Benjamin Franklin and his whistle, executed in Carrara marble by Pasquale Romanelli. It was made in Italy in 1863 and belongs to the Coles estate. It attracted great attention at the Centennial Exposition in 1876. It stands on a pedestal carved of dark Algerian marble to suggest "E Pluribus Unum," and the wisdom of united effort conjoined with brotherly love. The figure is exquisitely graceful, and the execution shows the highest technical power. The conception is based on the incident described by Franklin himself in a letter written to a friend in Philadelphia, in November, 1779.

THE FIRE IN NEW BRUNSWICK.

A Loss of $350,000—The Theatre Destroyed.

The fire which broke out at 12:30 o'clock this morning in the Allen Theatre building in New Brunswick, raged for nearly four hours, and when the flames were extinguished the damage caused was estimated at more than $350,000. The building was one of the largest in the city, extending 150 feet on George street and 220 on Albany street, and being of five stories. Besides the theatre, it was occupied by stores and the upper part was used for offices. The fire began with an explosion in the rear of the stage. Mrs. R. W. Hughes and Mrs. Charles Perkins, who live on Church street in the rear of the building, were aroused by the noise, and seeing the glare, gave the alarm.

Among those who had offices in the building and lost their property were:

Leonard Scheidig, restaurant in basement, $8,000; no insurance; a cash register containing $250.

The D. K. E. Greek Society of Rutgers College students; records for thirty-seven years back burned, and $500 worth of other property.

Palestine Lodge, F. & A. M; records and $1,200 other property.

The Common Council of the city of New Brunswick, $800.

New Brunswick Traction Company, $1,000.

Henry R. Baldwin, drug-store, ground floor, $2,000.

William McGovern, a cigar-dealer, $500.

J. B. Hickman, insurance agent, $200.

Harry B. Cook, lawyer, $300.

The burned thratre building was owned by the Newark Home Building Association, which purchased it from the Masons, who erected it in 1872 at a cost of $240,000. The McElroy Stock Company was to have opened for a week's engagement in the theatre this evening. Nearly all their trunks and scenery were in the theatre and these were lost. It is said that the building was insured for about two thirds of its value.

A SNAPPING CUR.

After Much Shooting He Was Finally Sent to His Hereafter.

Although they did not know it, the children of the neighborhood of LaGrande avenue and Richmond street, had a narrow escape Saturday afternoon from a mad dog. A water spaniel, belonging to Mrs. Moore, of LaGrande avenue, has been acting queerly for several days and on Saturday showed all the symptoms of hydrophobia. The colored man that works around the house tied the dog to a tree and Frank Neal emptied the contents of a revolver in the direction of the dog. The bullets did not take effect, however, and Captain Benjamin finally ended the canine's life with his shot gun. The dog had been snapping at the children during the morning and all were very thankful that no one was bitten.

At the same time Deputy Grand Chancellor Bowman and staff will install the officers-elect of Unity Lodge. A pleasant time is anticipated, and it is hoped that the members will make a good showing.

WE

Care more about closing out our entire stock of Christmas Goods for the next three days than we do about the profits we make on them.

You have no idea how LOW we have cut our prices down to until you come and see.

We don't want a thing left over, so we will devote the remaining three days before Christmas to clear them out regardless of what they cost us.

Come in just as soon as you can, while the variety is good, and make your selections; there is no trouble at all about the prices, and everything is just as new and pretty as it can be.

We were awfully busy last Saturday, up to 10 o'clock at night, with our two wagons and big truck delivering goods from one end of the town to the other, including the towns all around.

We received today a large lot of 6-piece Toilet Sets, first quality, underglazed, handsomely decorated in poppy designs in brown, blue, green and gray. It's so late we mark them at $1.10. Also in the same lot, as handsome a variety of Jardiniers as you want to see. They are marked low, too.

Our order, too, for Umbrellas from the factory of Folmer, Clogg & Co. is delated, therefore they will have to be marked away down in order to sell them. A Good School Umbrella as low as 39c., and better goods proportionally low. In fact, everything in the Christmas line must go; no matter about the cost.

You will save money if you will come right to

MADE THE TROLLEY GO SLOW.

Conductor Tried to Lead the Horse off the Track and a Fight Ensued.

Paul Hemnelo, a milkman from Piscataway township, appeared before City Judge DeMeza this morning and wished to swear out a warrant for the arrest of Timothy McCarthy, conductor on the street railway, but he finally decided that he wouldn't. Hemnelo was driving down Putnam avenue when he stopped on the car track for a few moments. A trolley car came up behind but the milkman says he did not hear it. Finally the conductor, McCarthy, attempted to lead the horse off the track. Words ensued and at last they came to blows Both suffered from the encounter but the conductor's blows were the most effective.

Lamp Exploded.

A lamp exploded at the home of Mr. Wolverton on Central avenue, while the family were eating supper. In the attempt to get the lamp out doors, a valuable rug was burned, also a portion of the carpet. After a little hard work the lamp was thrown out, thus avoiding the necessity of sending in an alarm of fire.

AMUSED AT THE CHAPEL.

MEN'S MUTUAL IMPROVEMENT SOCIETY CONDUCT A GOOD AFFAIR.

The Programme Made up Various Entertaining Features—Rev. G. Kennedy Newell Explains the Society's Work.

A large and appreciative audience gathered in Hope Chapel last evening to see and hear an excellent entertainment given under the auspices of the Men's Mutual Improvement Society in connection with the chapel.

The entertainment was given to help raise funds to supply the reading room in the chapel with newspapers, magazines and other periodicals.

After a few introductory remarks by W. G. Gray, president of the society, the programme was entered into.

The first number was an instrumental solo by Master Hugh J. Gray on the violin, with Miss Annie I. Gray, piano accompaniment. This was followed with stereopticon views of the Old World, interspersed with some comic views on the canvas by Prof. C. E. Hepburn, and was received with loud applause.

Then came another instrumental solo by Miss Gray and Master Gray, and then Wilbur Sherwood in his necromancy acts was introduced.

Mr. Sherwood showed before the audience some very fine sleight-of hand tricks, and great credit is due this young gentleman for the manner in which he did the same. He proved to those present that the hands was quicker than the eye, and the closer you watch the less you see. Mr. Sherwood then retired amid loud hand clapping.

A short speech on "Objects of the Society" by Rev. G. K. Newell, pastor of the chapel, came next. In his remarks Mr. Newell made an earnest appeal to the men of the chapel that those who had not already joined the society to do so at once; also that those who live in the western part of the city can come to Hope Chapel any evening and avail themselves of the many privileges that is being offered by the above society.

After a few more tricks by Prof. Sherwood and the rest of the pictures shown on the canvas, the entertainment was drawn to a close.

Taking all in all the entertainment was one of the finest that has been held in Hope Chapel in a long time, and it is hoped that in the near future the members of the Men's Mutual Improvement Society will give an entertainment such as the one given last night.

THE MILKMEN ARRESTED.

Tim McCarthy Alleges That Henley Struck the First Blow Yesterday.

The trouble between the trolley car conductor and the milkman from Piscataway township is not over by any means. Paul Henley, the milkman, did not care to press the matter after all, but Timothy McCarthy, the conductor of the trolley car which was blocked by the wagon, has made a complaint and Henley was arranged before the City Judge this morning. It is alleged that Henley struck the first blow.

Henley pleaded not guilty and was held in $50 bail to appear for trial on Friday morning.

MARRIED ALMOST A YEAR.

But the Announcement of the Nuptial Event Just Made.

The announcement of the marriage of Miss Maude Cole and George Wilson, both of the borough, has just been made. The marriage took place last March and has been kept a secret until a few days ago, when the groom made known the fact to his mother.

A Daily Press representative called at the home of the groom's mother this morning, where Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are living, but was unable to learn any further particulars regarding the affair, except a confirmation of the fact that her son was married.

To Hold Open House.

The Young Men's Christian Association of this city will hold "open house" on New Year's Day. There will be some kind of literary entertainment in the hall, and the visitors will also be entertained in the gymnasium. There will probably be a drill and some work on the different apparatus. There will also be several contests open to the members of the Association. There will probably be the running high jump, putting the shot and the running broad jump. A basket ball game, between the teams from the evening classes and the business men's class, will be played. The hours will be from 3:30 to 5:30 o'clock.

To cure all old sores, to heal an indolent ulcer, or to speedily cure piles, you need simply apply DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve according to directions. Its magic-like action will surprise you. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front st.

THE HOSPITAL REPORT.

INTERESTING FACTS AND FIGURES ABOUT THE INSTITUTION.

The Operating Expenses for a Year Are Now About $8,000, and This Sum is Only Raised by Active and Hard Work.

The annual report of Muhlenberg Hospital for the year ending June 1, 1896, has just been issued, its publication having been unusually delayed.

The most interesting items of the report, in fact and figures, have already from time to time been published in the Daily Press. One of the most important, however, will bear repeating. The annual cash expenses of the Hospital are now about $8,000, and this amount does not include the various and considerable gifts of supplies and materials received and used.

The work of the Hospital constantly increases, and the character and quality of its service has recently been greatly improved. But this improvement of the service necessarily causes the cost to increase at a more rapid rate than the amount of work done.

The Woman's Auxiliary Board, upon whose shoulders rests to a great extent the domestic management of the Hospital, and which does a great deal in contributing and obtaining funds for its support, seems to be a very flourishing and popular association, its membership at the date of the report being 134, and having since increased.

Since the first of June, the date of the report, several events in Hospital matters have taken place. In September a great loss was incurred in the death of Mr. Erickson, the President of the Board of Governors, and in October G. H. Goddard was elected as his successor.

During the summer and fall the drainage of the hospital was connected with the public sewer, and for the first time gas was introduced, the gas company laying 1800 feet of new mains for that purpose. The gas is of great advantage not only for light, but much more for use in heating, cooking and sterilizing in the wards, the dining room and in the medicine and operating rooms.

In October was finished and occupied the new detached laundry, built and equipped at a cost of $750, with a part of the funds left by the late Henry F. Stites of Scotch Plains. This is one of the most important improvements ever made at the hospital, the laundry work having been done heretofore in a small and very unsuitable room in the basement of the main building. In September the constitution was amended to allow physicians not members of the medical staff to place patients in the hospital and treat them there—a new departure, which will, no doubt, win for the institution many new friends and give much satisfaction to all. The Nurses' Home which is now nearly completed, was begun on September 3d, and is an ornament to the neighborhood in which it stands. It is to cost about $4,700, unfurnished. Of this amount $3,000 was appropriated from the proceeds of the Kermess held a year ago, $1,000 has been contributed by a friend, and the remaining $700, together with the cost of furnishing the house, is yet to be provided for. The Training School for nurses is in successful operation, having at present seven pupils, taking the two years' course.

At the Plainfield High School.

The Christmas exercises will be held tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock in Assembly hall. There will be a large attendance of graduates and friends of the school.

All the classes are busy this afternoon decorating the classrooms and Assembly hall for Christmas. Greens and bunting are being used.

A meeting of the class of '97 was held yesterday afternoon and Henry W. Brower chosen president. He appointed the following as a decorating committee: the Misses Ellen Osgood, Lydia Loizeaux and Adel Kirby.

There will be no meeting of the Kappa Delta Phi this week.

The High School Cadets will drill on Thursday afternoon at the Jersey Cycle Academy.

Routine Business Transacted.

The Borough Board of Education met last evening and transacted routine business, which included the payment of all bills for the month. The board also officially received the immense quantity of clothing, flour, groceries, etc., which was donated by the borough citizens for the Children's Home, and they extended their thanks to all for their gifts.

Absolutely pure, perfectly harmless, and invariably reliable are the qualities of One Minute Cough Cure. It never fails in colds, croup and lung troubles. Children like it because it is pleasant to take and it helps them. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

HER LIKENESS A BLANK

A NETHERWOOD WOMAN THINKS SHE HAS BEEN DUPED.

Subscribed for a Series of Papers With a Crayon Portrait for a Prize—Agent Took Photograph and Has Not Returned Yet.

Mrs. Adam Hubler, of Netherwood avenue, appeared before Justice Newcorn, yesterday, and claimed that she was the victim of a fake photograph concern, under the name of the American Weekly Journal, represented by a Mr. Thompson.

The woman says that the man called on her several weeks ago and made her a proposition that if she would take a certain number of copies of the Weekly Journal at twenty cents each, he would give her free a crayon portrait of herself. As Mrs. Hubler was desirous of securing such a picture, she accepted the offer and regularly took the papers. When she had almost received the required number the agent took the photograph from which the crayon was to be made. As time passed on she heard nothing from the agent, and after writing him several letters and getting no word she came to the conclusion that she had been duped, and accordingly she sought Chief Grant. The latter referred her to Justice Newcorn, who considered her case, gave her the necessary instructions, and she is to call again today, when proceedings will probably be taken to find the agent and bring him to justice.

GONE MAD ON RELIGION

A SERVANT IMAGINES THAT SHE IS A GREAT SAINT.

It is Said That the Woman Was Quiet Until She Attended the Moody Meeting in Cranford—Now Has Religious Mania.

Ellen Feeley, a servant in the employ of Mr. Christ, of Cranford, was taken to the county jail, yesterday, and locked up for safe-keeping until her mental condition can be inquired into.

As soon as she was lodged in a cell, she began a kind of religious dance, capering about the floor and jumping in the air at intervals. Then she knelt on the floor, and went through certain mysterious rites, the significance of which was known only to herself. When questioned she said that she was a great saint, whom the Almighty had called to do a wonderful work. It is said that she has been brooding on religion for some time past. She was quiet, however, until she attended the recent revival meeting in Cranford, at which Rev. Dwight L. Moody made an address. Then she became greatly excited, and her mania took an active form.

Dr. Mumford called at the jail in the afternoon and examined her carefully. He afterward stated that she was suffering from religious mania, and should be confined in an asylum. She will be sent to Morris Plains, today.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured in 3 Days

Morton L. Hill, of Lebanon, Ind. says: "My wife had Inflammatory Rheumatism in every muscle and joint, her suffering was terribe and her body and face were swollen almost beyond recognition; had been in bed for six weeks and had eight physicians but received no benefit until she tried the Mystic Cure for Rheumatism. It gave immediate relief and she was able to walk about in three days. I am sure it saved her life." Sold by T. S. Armstrong, druggist, cor. Park and North avenue, Plainfield.

SAMUEL A. HAYNES DEAD.

SHOCK OF HIS DAUGHTER'S DEATH BROUGHT ON HEART FAILURE.

In the Far West When Mrs. C. P. Ralli Died and Did Not Learn of the Death Till Several Days After—Well Known.

The large circle of friends of Samuel A. Haynes, of Netherwood, will be shocked to learn of his sudden death, which occurred early yesterday morning at his home in Indianapolis, of heart disease.

Mr. Haynes was the father of the late Mrs. Constance P. Ralli, of Netherwood, whose sudden death last week was such a shock to the community.

At that time Mr. Haynes was in the far west and it was several days before he could be reached by wire. When he received the sad news, he immediately returned to Indianapolis, arriving there yesterday morning.

The shock of the death of his daughter was too much and he passed away suddenly, as above stated.

Mr. Haynes was president of the Samuel A. Haynes Company, of Indianapols, prominent in the manufacture of bicycles. For many years he was a member of the hardware firm of Graham & Haynes, of New York, and he has always been a member of the Hardware Club, of New York.

He was well-known to many Plainfield citizens and delivered many temperance lectures in this city.

Only three weeks ago he spent several days in Netherwood with his daughter. He leaves a wife, daughter and son.

He was a man of the highest attainments and was loved and respected by all who knew him.

TO TRY FOR THE NATIONAL TROPHY.

Park Club Will Endeavor to Regain American Whist Association Honors.

The crack whist "four" of the Park Club will again try for the trophy of the American Whist Association which they held several years ago for a short time. The Park's challenged for this trophy some time ago and they are scheduled to play for it on Saturday. The Hamilton Club, of Philadelphia, has been holding the trophy and the Park team expected that they would have to go there to play but in a match for the trophy just played, the Hamilton's were defeated by the team from the American Whist Club, of Boston, and so the Park experts will have to go to Boston Saturday to play their game. They expect to bring the trophy back with them or, at least, they will try very hard to and they have the good wishes of their Plainfield friends.

An Honor.

At the last meeting of Minerva Temple, No. 4, Rathbone Sisters, there was read a dispensation from the Supreme Chief of Rathbone Sisters, Ida M. Weaver, to Mrs. Wm. J. Ford, appointing the latter Supreme Representative and Installing Past Chief for the next term. This evening Mrs. Ford will read notes of interest of the proceedings of the last session of the Supreme Temple, Rathbone Sisters, branch of Pythian Army. There will also be nomination and election of officers and other important business. The members are urged to be prompt in attendance.

Christmas Business.

Although White, of Plainfield, has done the biggest business in the history of his store during the past ten days, late buyers will find as good a selection of Christmas gifts as though they had bought early. Every stock in the store is as complete as can be as they buy in large quantities and always have enough to go around. They have fifty sales people to attend to your wants and guarantee prompt delivery and good service. They are naming special low prices on certain lots of goods that they do not wish to carry over.

Horses on Trial.

Bairey, the horse dealer of Newark, sent a team of horses to Plainfield yesterday, to be placed on trial at fire headquarters. They were driven to the truck and exercise wagon and they seemed to work all right. They will be kept here for a few days on trial.

Entertained Friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Zimmerman, of Duer street, entertained a few friends at their home last evening. The time was pleasantly spent in playing games and dancing, and it was a late hour when the guests left for their homes.

Engagement Announced.

A THROAT HE WOULD CUT

MAT. WALLACE DOESN'T WANT TO BE HOUNDED BY AN OLD LOVE.

He is Married to Another Now and Don't Propose to Have Scandalous Stories Circulated—Complaint in Court Not Pushed

They met under the Park avenue railroad bridge one evening last week and he said things to her which she thinks he should not have said. They were not in love with each other exactly, they had quarreled sometime ago, and their relations were a trifle strained.

Matthew Wallace lives on Sycamore street, and he has only been recently married. He is attentive to his wife as he ought to be. Wallace is a colored man employed in a local plumbing shop, and has the reputation of being a steady man. There is a colored woman in this city, now housekeeper for Mail Carrier James Frisbie, with whom Wallace has not been on good terms for some time. They have quarreled and there has been trouble before. They met as above stated, and she claims that he used insulting language and threatened to cut her throat.

Such language was not to be thought of and she put the matter in the hands of the police. She appeared before the City Judge and the complaint duly made and sworn to. Then the alleged offender was ordered to appear before the Judge last evening.

Wallace appeared before the Judge last evening according to orders, but the complainant didn't come. They waited a little while for her, but the courts are not called at the convenience of the parties but when they can be held. Wallace told his story. The complainant in the case, he said, had been making all sorts of scandalous remarks about him and his conduct since his marriage and he had met her on the street and told her that if she didn't stop that he would cut her throat, making the latter remark more impressive by the addition of a well-known adjective.

As the complainant failed to appear and push the case, the Judge dismissed the complaint.

AN EVENING'S DIVERSION.

Central Avenue Euchre Club Spend a Pleasant Evening.

Mrs. Talmage and Mrs. Ege, of Central avenue, entertained the Central Avenue Euchre Club last evening and there was a slight diversion from the usual set programme. The euchre party was enjoyed first and Mrs. F. O. Herring and Mr. Duxbury won first honors.

The feature of the evening was the Christmas tree brilliantly illuminated and holding a present for every guest. The gifts were all intended for little children and there was a great deal of genuine fun in distributing the gifts. Some of the little guests were jealous of the others and there was considerable rivalry shown. The whole affair ended in a good hearty laugh and those present all agreed that they never had a better time.

Those present as guests of the club were:—Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Herring, Mr. and Mrs. Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Van Vliet, Mrs. Phiser, Miss Phiser, Mr. Phiser, Mr. Abbott, Mr. Duxburry, Mr. Middiedith, Mr. Gilbert, the Misses Anthony, of Plainfield; Miss Worthingham, of New York.

A Stag Gathering.

An informal "stag" gathering was held at the home of Charles B. Morse, of Franklin place, last evening in honor of his birthday. A game of progressive hearts was played at which the first prize was won by Everett J. Peck. Carl D. Pfender took the second while the consolation prize was awarded to Wilbur F. Cornwell. Parlor football and several other exciting games occupied the rest of the evening with an intermission for refreshments and story telling.

Broke His Leg.

A runaway on High street, Somerville, yesterday afternoon, resulted in the serious injury of John Kenner, of that town. A number of the fast horses were out and some lively racing was held. Kenner's horse became frightened and ran away, upsetting the carriage and smashing it while the driver was thrown out and had his leg broken. He was taken to the hospital in Somerville.

TWO MILLION CAPITAL.

PLAINFIELD TO BE THE SEAT OF A STUPENDOUS ENTERPRISE.

James Clark at the Head of a Company to Supply Water to Plainfield or the Whole of New Jersey—To Deal in Stocks.

John Lynn, a Jersey City lawyer, filed in the County Clerk's office at Elizabeth, this morning, papers of incorporation for one of the largest enterprises ever undertaken in Plainfield. The incorporation is that of a water company capitalized at $2,000,000. James Clark, of West Seventh street and Central avenue, who is engaged in the wholesale leather business in New York, and is one of the wealthiest citizens of Plainfield, is at the head of the business. Associated with him is J. C. Rogers and Edward J. Farrell, both of New York, and well-known in the business world. There are 20,000 shares of stock in the company, valued at $100 per share. The sum of $5,000 will be paid in on the capital stock.

The company is organized to supply Plainfield and villages in New Jersey and elsewhere with portable water, the leasing or sale of the same to municipalities and other corporations, the dealing in municipal water bonds and other bonds and securities, and generally to do such business as is necessary and proper for the supplying of communities with water for public and private use

Mr. Clark is in New York today and it is impossible for The Press to inform its readers as to just what the new corporation intends to do in Plainfield, but on the face of it seems to be one of the most stupendous undertakings ever started in this section.

BIG SALE OF U. S. BONDS.

E. H. Harriman Offers $1,000,000 and Pliny Fisk Took Them.

Pliny Fisk, of Harvey Fisk & Sons, was on the floor of the Stock Exchange yesterday when E. H. Harriman offered a block of $1,000,000 United States 4 per cent bonds of 1925, coupon, at 119. This price was half a point below that of the last sale. Mr. Fisk bought the block.

Mr. Fisk said of his purchase that it might be fair or unfair to conjecture that speculative purposes dictated the offer of so large a block. If the aim was to break the market, it missed, as the market became strong, the demand for the bonds being at 119¼.

Vermilye & Co. claim that Mr. Harriman offered $500,000 of the bonds at 118⅞, and that they, through a clerk, bought "over the rail," by calling out "I'll take that." This bid was not recognized, and Mr. Fisk coming in and hearing the offer at 119 bought the block in two lots of $500,000. Under the rules the bid of Vermilye & Co.'s clerk could not be recognized, but the Govering Committee of the Stock Exchange may be appealed to.

LEADING DUNELLEN MAN DEAD.

Thomas Thomas Passes Away After a Week's Illness.

Thomas Thomas, a well-known and respected citizen of Dunellen, died at his home on Washington avenue, last evening, after a week's illness. His death was caused by liver trouble. Mr. Thomas had resided in Dunellen for many years and was identified with the rising prosperity of that place. He was a member of the Board of Education and considered one of the leading men of Dunellen. He conducted a flour and feed establishment in New York and owned some property in the neighborhood of Dunellen.

He leaves a wife and four children, Louis, Joseph, Thomas and Nancy. The two elder sons attend Princeton University, and were expected home every day on their Christmas vacation. They have been telegraphed for and will probably return this evening. His sister, Mrs. George Churchill, also resides in Dunellen.

The Turks Annihilated.

A thousand or more able-bodied Turks, under command of one Huff, came on from Virginia, and secreted themselves behind Lutkins's stronghold. Lutkins thinking there would be trouble about Christmas time, armed several Armenians and blacks and made an attack upon the lucious Turks, and annihilated them. Now their carcasses hang in the differsnt markets, for the natives to feed upon Christmas Day.

HE LEAVES CHICAGO

Major McKinley and Wife Start for Their Home in Canton.

NO REST IN THE WINDY CITY

His Visitors Became Almost as Numerous as They Were at Canton---Greeted by a Big Delegation of School Children.

Chicago, Dec. 22.—If Major McKinley came to Chicago for rest and quiet, which undoubtedly was the principal object of his visit, he must have been a sorely disappointed man for his visitors increased in number every day he was here. Late yesterday afternoon there was a demonstration, which in character and magnitude rivalled some of the scenes witnessed at Canton on the closing days of the campaign. Seven hundred children from schools on the south side, near where Major McKinley is visiting, came shortly after 3 o'clock to call upon him. Teachers accompanied the children, and when Major McKinley appeared on the porch to bow his acknowledgements, the air rang with cheers and there was a crimson flash of waving flags. The girls' glee club from the Hyde Park high school sang "America" and the "Star Spangled Banner." The cheers and the fresh young voices lifted in patriotic song attracted hundreds of adults and in the course of fifteen minutes the visit of the school children was turned into a b g reception. The clamor to see Major McKinley and to shake his hand became so great that the people were asked to form in line and walk through the house. Major McKinley met them in the reception room and shook hands with more than 3,000 persons. A feature of the crowd was the large number of working men who left their tasks to pay their respects to the president-elect. The private car in which Major McKinley came to Chicago was attached to the 11:30 o'clock Pennsylvania express last night, and the president-elect, his wife and the newspaper correspondents returned to Canton. There was no demonstration at the depot, the major's plans not being generally known to the public.

The Danville Junction Accident.

Lewiston, Me., Dec. 22.—The seventeen passengers who were injured in the railroad accident near Danville Junction yesterday, and who were brought to the hospital here for treatment, are reported this morning to be doing well. In fact some of the injured were so slightly hurt that they have proceeded to their destinations. That the twenty-five passengers on the train were not all killed is considered almost a miracle, as the entire train, except the locomotive and tender, plunged over an embankment twenty-five feet high. The accident was caused by a broken rail.

Raines Law Better Enforced.

Albany, Dec. 22.—State Excise Commissioner Lyman says that the recent reports of his special agents show that the number of prosecutions for violations of the Raines liquor tax law is greatly increasing. This is thought to be due to the agitation of the matter during the past few weeks, which has been the cause of spurring on the authorities who have the enforcement of the law in charge. The work of Senator Raines' special committee has also had much to do with the present better enforcement of the law.

Army Transfers.

Washington, Dec. 22.—Capt. Thomas Cruse, assistant-quartermaster, recently appointed, is ordered to take station at Washington and assume the construction of public buildings at Fort Washington, Maryland. Second Lieut. M. L. Walker, corps of engineers, is relieved from duty under the immediate orders of Lieut.-Col. Samuel M. Mansfield, corps of engineers, and will repair to Seattle, Wash., and report to Capt. Harry Taylor, corps of engineers, for duty.

Came Near Foundering.

St. Johns, N. F., Dec. 22.—The British steamer Avalon, which sailed from Newport News, Va., December 12 for Cardiff, encountered a hurricane last Friday when 300 miles off the coast. The seas swept her decks, bursting open the fore hatch, damaged her stanchions and bridge boats and started her funnel. The fore hold filled with water and the ship nearly foundered. OFF FOR THEIR HOMES

Exodus of Senators and Representatives from Washington.

CONGRESS TO ADJOURN THIS EVENING

Little Interest in the Proceedings---Even the Cuban Discussion Fails To Attract Many Visitors to the Galleries.

Washington, Dec. 22.—Both branches of congress will adjourn this evening for the holiday recess. Nothing of special importance is before the senate to-day, and already many senators and representatives have left for their homes, and the outgoing trains to-night will carry many more away. By to-morrow the city will be practically deserted of lawmakers. Many official clerks and other government employe have also left for their homes to ea turkey next Friday with their familie or relatives. There was no special excitement manifested yesterday either by senators or by the general public in the matter of joint resolutions acknowledging the independence of the republic of Cuba. The galleries were not occupied to the extent of two-thirds of their capacity. The proceedings were of a formal and uninteresting character. They consisted merely of reporting the joint resolution by Mr. Cameron, rep., Penn., from the committee on foreign relations, and of the offering of various substitutes for it on the part of senators. Mr. Vest, dem., Mo., presented a resolution declaring that the exclusive power to determine the independence of a foreign people struggling to establish a government for themselves should be recognized is vested by the constitution not in the president of the United States but in congress. Mr. Hill, dem., N. Y., offered a substitute for the committee joint resolution, declaring that a state of war exists in Cuba; according belligerent rights to the Cubans, and announcing that the United States will preserve a state of neutrality between the belligerents. Mr. Bacon, dem., Ga., offered a resolution asserting that the question of recognition of any people as a free and independent nation is a question exclusively for the determination of congress, and does not appertain to the executive department. And still another resolution was offered by Mr. Chilton, dem., Tex., declaring that a condition of public war exists between the government of Spain and the government which has been for some time maintained by force of arms by the people of Cuba, and that the United States will maintain a strict neutrality between the contending parties, according to each all the rights of belligerents in the ports and territory of the United States. These various resolutions and substitutes were either laid on the table—with the foreign relations committee's report—or were referred to the committee on the judiciary. The whole subject, however, will be open to discussion this afternoon when Mr. Vest calls up his resolution. There was no other business of importance transacted. An effort was made by Mr. Gear, rep., Iowa, to have the Pacific railroad funding bill made the unfinished business, but objection was interposed, and Mr. Gear gave notice that he would call up that bill immediately after the reassembling of congress after the holiday recess.

House of Representatives.

The house spent most of another day's session in consideration of the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, and still "came to no resolution thereon." Nearly all of the time was given to discussing the future control of the library, whether by the joint committee on the library, as proposed by that committee in Mr. Quigg's substitute, or by the librarian, as proposed by the committee on appropriations. The principal speeches in favor of the appropriations committee's plan were made by Messrs. Bingham, rep., Pa., and Cannon, rep., Ill., of the committee, and by Mr. Cummings, dem., N. Y., in favor of the Quigg substitute. The latter was rejected—27 to 85. On motion of Mr. Shaforth, sil., Col., the salary of the librarian was reduced from $6,000 to $5,000. In the morning hour the immigration bill was taken from the speaker's table and the senate's request for a conference on the amendments made by that body agreed to.

Swindler Dutton Sentenced.

New York, Dec. 22.—Stephen A. Dutton, the swindler and alleged member of the Valentine gang of forgers, has been sentenced to three years and pay a fine of $5.000 or stand committed one day for each dollar until the fine is paid. Dutton was convicted of swindling Mrs. Mary A. Godfrey and her daughter of Washington out of some real estate in that city.

COW'S STRANGE DEATH.

Found Hanging in the Fork of a Wild Cherry Tree.

Did Bessie commit suicide, or was she disporting herself like Anna Held or the naughty Barrison sisters? This is a question that is agitating the farmers and good people near Port Chester, N. Y. Bessie was a sleek, glossy Jersey cow owned by ex-Congressman William Ryan, and kept by him on his place in King street. That she committed suicide is hard to believe, for she had always been an amiable dispositioned cow, and was so gentle that she would even approach the fence and allow the children to pat her fat sides as they went to and from school. By the Ryans she had always been treated with the most tender care, and besides Bessie had a little calf with big brown eyes to take up her spare time. That a cow with such happy environments as this would deliberately take her own life seems almost beyond reason. But this is what many people in the village think she did. One Thursday morning Bessie was found with her head lodged between the forks of a wild cherry tree. She was dead. The forks of the tree are nearly nine feet from the ground, and to have reached them Bessie had to jump several feet from the ground. The theory that she was trying to eat the leaves was first advanced, but was afterward abandoned when it was learned that ruminating beasts have never been known to eat the leaves of a wild cherry tree. The fence might have aided Bessie in reaching the fork of the tree, but it is not near enough, unless, as some have suggested, she jumped on a curve or did the giant swing.

The curious sight was witnessed by hundreds of people who could not fully satisfy their minds as to the real manner of death. After fruitless efforts to dislodge her by the aid of a team of horses, it was found necessary to cut off her head. The accompanying portrait was sketched by Miss Susie Marshall, a daughter of Village Trustee Joseph H. Marshall, who was one of the first spectators on the [illegible]

DISTRIBUTING NATURAL GAS.

Sent Long Distances Through Pipes by Means of Air Pressure.

The transmission or conveyance of gas under pressure to long distances, which was an unsolved problem some 20 years ago, is now a fixed fact, represented by the present use of about 75,000,000 feet of pipe used in the distribution of natural gas. On the first discovery of this article, says the Philadelphia Bulletin, the pressure at the well was sufficient to drive it through the pipes almost as far as desired, but this pressure declining some additional methods were necessitated, the well-known air compressor being resorted to to pump the gas; and, as showing its efficiency, there are at Greenland, in Indiana, gas wells which have long carried supplies to Chicago. There are two eight-inch pipe lines used, the gas being pumped a distance of about 160 miles. There is at Redky, Ind., a pumping station of this character that supplies the towns of Springfield, Tiffin, Lima, Dayton, Piqua and other places in the western part of Ohio. Near Pittsburgh there is a gas plant which pumps 20,000,000 cubic feet every 24 hours for use in mills, the pumping of this being without the least difficulty; and the Philadelphia company pumps many millions of cubic feet a day. There are New England air compressors that are pumping every day, at various stations in the United States, the enormous quantity of nearly 100,000,000 cubic feet.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? turn to pay out in January. Mr. Wolf said he had no serious concern about the safety of the money and has received ample assurance from the other city banks which hold city money that the corporation will not be embarrassed. County treasurer D. H. Kochberger has $300,000 of county funds tied up in the national bank, and Fred M. Blount, the newly appointed treasurer of the drainage board, had over $80,000 of district funds at the bank, whose officers were on his bond. The bank officials were also on the bonds of the city and county and West park board treasurers. The fact that the bank officers were bondsmen of these public officials was a strong reason for the decision of the other banks to force immediate closing of the bank before funds were deposited.

NEW YORK'S FINANCES.

Annual Report of State Comptroller James A. Roberts.

Albany, Dec. 22.—The financial condition of the state treasury is a source of great satisfaction to state comptroller James A. Roberts. He finds on balancing his books for fiscal year September 30, 1896, that there is a balance in the state treasury of $4,930,046. This completes the third year of Comptroller Roberts' term and it is the first year since he has served as comptroller that he has not been compelled to borrow money to pay the expenses of the state government from October 1 to the following February each year, when the taxes under the annual levy pour into the state treasury. Last year he borrowed $3,500,000 and the year before $1,800,000. The ample surplus in the treasury at present will enable the comptroller to carry the state government along without borrowing a dollar until the $11,751,837 which is to be raised under the annual tax levy provided for by the last legislature, is received by the state treasurer in the spring. The balance in the state treasury on October 1, 1896, exceeded the balance in the treasury on October 1, 1895, by $3,518,961.

PHILADELPHIA BANK ALL RIGHT.

The Independence National Not Affected by the Chicago Failure.

Philadelphia, Dec. 22.—The Independence National bank of this city which was the Philadelphia correspondent of the National Bank of Illinois of Chicago, will not be affected by the failure of the latter institution. Theodore Wiedersheim, treasurer of the Independence bank, states that his bank is merely the holder of a portion of the western banks' eastern funds. Mr. Weidersheim further says that advices he had received from Chicago are to the effect that every obligation of the embarrassed bank will be paid dollar for dollar, and that the failure has been caused by a futile endeavor to realize on securities in hand.

If he wishes to avail himself of the few months' grace remaining to him, the Gazette says, he must change his resolutely immoble attitude for resolute action.

DEPOSITORS HOPEFUL

Efforts To Relieve Chicago's Big Closed Bank.

ASSOCIATED BANKS OFFER AID

Condition of the Related Institutions That Are Affected---Astounding Recklessness in Making Loans.

Chicago, Dec. 22.—The closing of an institution which was considered the strongest national bank in Chicago, quickly followed by the failure of three private banking houses which did business with it, caused a flurry of excitement in financial circles and led to runs on several banks by timid depositors. A flood of rumors relative to other banks and business firms added to the intense nervousness which pervaded all classes of people long after business hours and the close of the courts. The banks which were closed follow: National Bank of Illinois, capital $1,000,000; liabilities, $11,000,000. E. S. Dreyer & Co., bankers, mortgage brokers and real estate dealers, liabilities, $1,500,000; estimated value of assets, $1,650,000. Wasmansdorf & Heineman, bankers and mortgage brokers, liabilities, $416,000; estimated value of assets, $550,000. Roseland Savings bank, Roseland, Ill., small capital, and assets estimated equal to liabilities. All the private banks which closed their doors cleared through the National Bank of Illinois, and the big crash compelled their suspension to conserve their assets and protect creditors. The two private city banks went into liquidation through receivership proceedings in the courts. Reassuring action was taken at a largely attended meeting of the clearing house association, which was held after banking hours yesterday afternoon. The following resolution, offered by ex-comptroller of the currency, E. S. Lacey, president of the Bankers National bank, was unanimously adopted: "That the clearing house committee, after calling to their aid such other persons as they may desire, be requested to formulate a plan which will enable creditors of the National Bank of Illinois to avail themselves of the offer of the associated banks to make advances by way of loans to said creditors to the extent of 75 per cent. upon properly proven claims." The chairman of the clearing house committee stated that the readiness of bankers to do this was so evident that it was not probable any formal organization to accomplish the object set forth in the resolution would be necessary although the committee appointed will give prompt attention to the duty imposed on them. William F. Dummer, president of the association and vice-president of the Northwestern National bank, read the following telegram which he had received from Comptroller of the Currency Eckels, dated Washington: "I have appointed Bank Examiner McKeen temporary receiver of the National Bank of Illinois and I instructed him to publish notice to creditors to prove claims. He informs me that the clearing house committee will advance 75 per cent. on evidence of claims. Notice will be published at once, and if claims are proven immediately I shall within thirty days be able to pay a very considerable dividend. I appreciate the action of the clearing house in offering to advance on such certificates."

Cause of the Trouble.

The decision of the clearing house committee to refuse clearing privileges to the National Bank of Illinois, and also to refuse funds by which the bank could have gone into voluntary liquidation was chiefly due to the astounding discovery that the bank had loaned $2,400,000 to the Calumet Electric Street Railway company on its bonds as sole security. This loan exceeded the bank's capital and surplus. Another account, which caused the bankers to hesitate, was stated to be near $500,000, the debtor being E. S. Dreyer & Co. Robert Berger, the only partner of Mr. Dreyer, is a son-in-law of George Schneider, president of the failed national bank. There was two other big loans which were considered poor collateral. The necessary sequel to this refusal to lend aid or to continue clearing privileges was that the big national bank on Dearborn street failed to open its doors yesterday for public business. This was anticipated by the action of the clearing house committee, but there was a small knot of anxious depositors waiting on the marble steps of the entrance when the big iron screen in front of the doors was rolled up to admit several clerks. Later a card was hung on the grill work reading as follows: "This bank is in the hands of a national bank examiner. By order of the comptroller of the currency." This cheerless announcement for depositors was quickly followed by the posting of notices that certain private banks and business firms would clear through other banks, or pay checks which had been given Saturday on the suspended institution.

Promise To Pay All in Full.

It is reported that the National Bank of Illinois has on hand about 45 per cent. of its deposits of $11,000,000, and their is general confidence that depositors will be paid in full in a short time. The officers and stockholders of the bank unite in saying so. The failure was a great surprise to the public. There was no suspicion on the part of the large depositors that the bank's capital and assets had been seriously impaired. The heaviest creditors are the municipal corporations. City Treasurer Wolf has $650,000 of city funds on deposit there. The bank was one of the five which are depositories for city funds, and each of the banks take turns by the month in cashing city checks. It was the failed bank's

A NOBLE REVENGE.

Kansas intends to make New York and Chicago ashamed of the libel which they thrust upon her intelligence in public affairs during the last campaign. Kansas was, of course, the hot-bed of the free silver agitation, and the story was started that the business standing and prosperity of the State had been greatly impaired by the propogation of the isms of politics. Naturally, this story made the Kansas mind agitated and incensed, but just how they might retaliate with the effect of disabusing the mind of the country from that reflection on their astuteness, was much of a puzzle. Now, however, the opportunity presents itself in the touching story of want and suffering that comes from the poor of New York and Chicago, and Kansas newspapers are advocating that a few carloads of provisions be sent to these cities to prove that Kansas has enough, and some to spare, too, of the world's goods. It would be a noble revenge.

Leap year will soon leap to 1904.

The fire fiend worked disastrously when Elizabeth and New Brunswick each suffered a $250,000 fire, and only one day apart.

The most disagreeable thing about buying Christmas gifts is to choose what will be pleasing and serviceable to the recipient.

After Christmas the exodus from Sunday-schools may be looked for. July and August with their excursions and December with her visit of Kris Kringle are great incentives for the rising generation to be constant in attendance at Sunday-school.

It may be interesting to Plainfielders to know, since there has been so much trouble about the polluting of Green brook by running sewage into it, that the New York State Board of Health, has decided that hereafter no town will be permitted to empty sewage into a running stream.

THEATRICAL.

The attraction for Christmas afternoon and evening at Music Hall will be Woolcott and Jackson's comedians in L. N. Woolcott's original farce comedy, "A Yellow Kid." The piece is said to be brimful of fun from beginning to end. Of course Mickey Dugan, the yellow kid, is the principal comedian, but he is ably supported by an excellent company of comedians which includes such well-known and clever people as McCall and Cunningham, Frank G. Mack, John Cullen, LaBord and Ryerson, Aida Woolcott, Sophie Clifton, Helen A. Furman, Katherine Heath and "Cute" MacDonald. Mickey Dugan, the yellow kid, is played by Master Bobbie Lester, who acts and plays the pranks of this mischievious character to perfection. The company carry special scenery for the production and the management promise a performance first class in every particular.

There is no attraction before the public, in the musical farce line, which has a more solid reputation than Ward and Vokes as "Percy and Harold" in "A Run on the Bank," these funny fellows may justly be credited with filling the vacancy in the musical farce world, by the retirement of Evans and Hoey, "A Parlor Match" used to be the most absurdly funny makeup to be seen on any stage, and it was because the performance was presented by a picked company of farceurs, and it is so with "A Run on the Bank." Ward and Vokes know how to cater lovers of farce, and their remarkable success for the past two years fully demonstrates this fact.

Electric Bitters

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but, perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

PASSING COMMENT.

Henry Aitken, former Comptroller of Elizabeth, has a record of having voted for every successful candidate from James K. Polk down to William McKinley. This list includes one Whig, four Democrats and six Republican Presidents.

If there is anything the Chinaman loves to do, it is to give presents especially at Christmas time. Plainfield's Chinamen are no exceptions to the rule as was evident at the Chinese Sunday-school, which is held in the Y. M. C. A. building every Sunday afternoon. Last Sunday one of the scholars at the school appeared at the door with his arms loaded with packages while several of the others assisted him in bringing in the things. All the teachers had been remembered and not only with one article but with several. There were white China silk handkerchiefs for the men and red for the women. Two Chinese lily bulbs were given to each of the teachers, as well as a bag of Chinese nuts and a box of tea. When it is remembered that there are six teachers in the school and that all were given presents, the generosity of the poor Celestial can be seen.

* * * * *

'Twas a little drama of love and jealousy that was enacted on North avenue late Saturday night and the cause of all the trouble flitted away on the arm of the triumphant gallant. It was nearly midnight when a young man and a young lady descended the stairs from Central hall where the Firemen's fair was being held. As they reached the door, there was another young man watching their progress with jealous eyes, and, as they started to pass out into the night, he stepped forward and offered to escort the lady to her home. Dark grew the face of the hitherto victorious rival and he resented the attempt to thus snatch the fair lady from his very side. Both were excited and words were passed. The language grew more threatening and at last a blow was struck. Another followed and another while the cause of the altercation looked on in silence. The very passerby stopped at the prospect of a fight when the blue uniform of Roundsman Mattox appeared around the corner. A night in Plainfield's famous rookery had no delights for either of the combatants and they separated. The rival, who had been the lucky one to escort the young lady down stairs, offered her his arm and they walked triumphantly away while the vanquished one slunk away in the shadow to dream of revenge at some future time.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN AND NEW MARKET.

Thomas P. Cady visited his home in Trenton on Sunday.

The Misses Hunt, of Front street, is visiting Bound Brook friends.

Mrs. Fred Wilcox is visiting Miss Vail, at 441 Orchard place, Plainfield.

Mr. E. Eckle and family, of Westfield, visited Mr. Paul Kraetzel, yesterday.

Herbert Waters, clerk for Adam Dealaman, is confined to the house, suffering from a heavy cold.

Rev. Mr. Custard, pastor of the M. E. church, attended the ministerial meeting in New York, yesterday.

Conductor Charles Dinneen was in Phillipsburg, Sunday, visiting Delaware Lodge, No. 31, of the O. R. C.

Fireman William Dunham of 75 engine has returned to his post of duty after an illness of a week or more.

The Christmas entertainment at the Presbyterian church will be held Thursday evening, and will consist of a fairy play and cantata.

A party of young Plainfield dudes and dudines went over to the New Market lake skating last evening, and they found the ice in fairly good condition.

The skating on the New Market pond is yet good, and every afternoon and evening large numbers of young people enjoy the exhilerating sport of skating.

Michael Boyle, assistant engineer, overseer and repairer in the round house here, is laid up with a sprained back, and John Sayres is serving in his place.

The Christmas exercises in the M. E. church will take place on Friday evening. There will be, as usual, singing of carols, recitations and a brief address, followed by a good time for all.

Owing to the fire in the Presbyterian church, Saturday services were held Sunday, both morning and evening, in the chapel. Rev. A. I. Martine, the pastor, preached at both services.

Christmas exercises will be held by the Sunday-school of St. John's church, on Thursday afternoon. There will be a profusion of presents for the scholars, and refreshments as usual will be served in abundance.

Theodore Kuldoshes, who has been in the employ of he Central Railroad Company as car cleaner for the past four years, has resigned his position to take up the carpenter trade. Arthur Vail has been engaged in his stead.

T. J. Romaine, the valuable day operator in the Western Union office here, has been laid up for a day or two suffering from a severe cold. Extra operator "Joe" Brokaw, of Somerville, has been taking his place.

The Dunellen Building and Loan Association had a meeting last evening for the reception of dues, after which adjournment was made until Thursday night, when a general transaction of business will take place.

That big 164 pound pumpkin, grown by "Al." Wilson and on exhibition in Adam Dealaman's store, is a dandy. Mr. Dealaman may have to cut the pumpkin up and sell it in sections, as no one family could hardly eat it all this winter.

Judge Lucky says since the borough lockup has been ready for occupants their are no unruly customers in town. The sight of the new town building and its 3x6 feet non-carpeted cells has no doubt had a deteriorating effect upon the rougher element.

Eugene Runyon's town pump, or rather the pump in front of his store, has been a god-send to both man and beast since the cold weather has set in. The supply is furnished at Mr. Runyon's expense and the flow of water is adequate, pure and wholesome.

Tuesday and Friday nights are now the regular ones for checker players in W. H. Cole's office. Some expert players gather there and amuse themselves in a harmless way. Generous and kind-hearted Mr. Cole goes home early and leaves his office in charge of the players, who, when through, lock it up for the night.

After the morning service in the Presbyterian church, Sunday, when the damage done by the fire the day before was announced and contributions were asked for a new furnace, in less than seven minutes thereafter, some $160 had been pledged by the members, more than enough to repair all damages. This shows conclusively that the congregation is ever-ready in case of emergency and at all times.

SCOTCH PLAINS.

Mrs. Jacob Blimm and son, Harry, of Somerset street, have been spending a day or two with Mr. and Mrs. John Blimm.

On the evening of the 29th instant there will be given an entertainment by the children of the Baptist church in the church.

Ex-Councilman John Johnson, of Netherwood, has a 20½ pound live turkey gobbler in W. H. Turton's show window, and the bird is admired by many patrons and passersby.

Skating on what is known as the back pond has been unusually good for a few days past. The ice is about four inches thick and the work of harvesting the crop will begin when two inches more are added to the thickness.

The regular meetings of the Young Men's League are held in the Baptist chapel on the second and fourth Tuesdays in each month. On the next meeting night the farce-comedy: "Wanted, A Confidential Clerk," will be presented in its entirety and all by local talent.

Thomas Paff, Sr., has given up the idea of fishing any more this winter, and now devotes his time to getting people to locate here in the spring. He and many others are under the right impression that if the trolley once strikes the Plains there will be an unprecedented boom in real estate. Land that is now valueless except for corn and pumpkin raising could and would undoubtedly be put upon the market; ready purchasers could be found; new and attractive cottages would be erected, and the Plains would recover from its state of lethargy and become a part of the Union.

WASHINGTONVILLE.

A Christmas praise service was held in the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel Sunday evening, and was very largely attended, the chapel being crowded to its utmost capacity, while many had to stand. Travell, the Misses Newman, Stewart and Boice, sopranos; Mrs. Alice Faxton, Miss Carrie Dewey and Miss Anna W. Watson, alto; Nelson Runyon and C. W. Hummer, tenors; I. Winthrop Travell, Charles H. The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. —A tourist, noting the many attractive and refined homes in Plainfield, remarked that the town, taken altogether, compares favorably with the best. Speaking of the business center, he said, the Plainfield Confectionery, 112 West Front street, had a breezy, hustling air about it, such as he had not seen anywhere else from Maine to California; and judging from the numbers constanly-buying candies there, thought the people of Plainfield appreciated, and were judges of, the good things offered them.

THE MISTRESS of the Mine.

OR A WOMAN Intervenes.

By Robert Barr.

[Copyright, 1895, by Robert Barr.]

It was nearly a fortnight after the receipt of the cablegram from Kenyon that George Wentworth found, one morning, on his desk, two letters, each bearing a Canadian postage stamp. One was somewhat bulky and one was thin, but they were both from the same writer. He tore open the thin one first, without looking at the date that was stamped upon it. He was a little bewildered by its contents, which ran as follows:

"MY DEAR GEORGE: I have just heard that Melville is the man who has bought the mine. The circumstances of the case leave no doubt in my mind that such is the fact, therefore please disregard the request I made as to employment in the letter I posted to you a short time ago. I feel a certain sense of disappointment in the fact that Melville is the owner of the mine. It seems I have only kept one rascal from buying it, to put it in the hands of another rascal. Your friend, JOHN KENYON."

"Melville the owner!" cried Wentworth to himself. "Whatever could have put that into John's head? This letter is evidently the one posted a few hours before, so it will contain whatever request he has to make," and, without delay, George Wentworth tore open the envelope of the second letter which was obviously the one written first. It contained a number of documents relating to the transfer of the mine. The letter from John himself went on to give particulars of the buying of the mine. Then it continued. "I wish you would do me a favor, George. Will you kindly ask the owner of the mine if he will give me charge of it. I am, of course, anxious to make it turn out as well as possible, and I believe I can more than earn my salary, whatever it is. You know I am not grasping in the matter of money, but get me as large a salary as you think I deserve.

"I desire to make money for reasons that are not entirely selfish, as you know. To tell you the truth, George, I am tired of cities and of people. I want to live here in the woods, where there is not so much deceit and treachery as there seems to be in the big towns. When I reached London last time I felt like a boy getting home. My feelings have undergone a complete change, and I think, if it were not for you and a certain young lady, I should never care to see the big city again. What is the use of my affecting mystery and writing the words 'a certain young lady.' Of course you know whom I mean—Miss Edith Longworth. You know also that I am, and have long been, in love with her. If I had succeeded in making the money I thought I should by selling the mine, I might have had some hopes of making more, and of ultimately being in a position to ask her to be my wife. But that, and very many other hopes, have disappeared with my recent London experiences.

"I want to get into the woods and recover some of my lost tone and my lost faith in human nature. If you can arrange matters with the owner of the mine so that I may stay here for a year or two, you will do me a great favor."

George Wentworth read over the latter part of this letter two or three times. Then he rose, paced the floor and pondered over the matter. "It isn't a thing upon which I can ask anyone's advice," he muttered to himself. "The trouble with Kenyon is he is entirely too modest. A little useful self-esteem would be just the thing for him." At last he stopped suddenly in his walk. "By Jove," he said to himself, slapping his thigh. "I shall do it, let the consequences be what they may." And he sat down to his desk and wrote a letter.

"MY DEAR MISS LONGWORTH: You told me when you were here last that you wanted all the documents in the case of the mine in every instance. A document has come this morning that is rather important. John Kenyon, as you will learn by reading the letter, desires the managership of the mine. I need not say that I think he is the best man in the world for the position, and that everything will be safe in his hands. I therefore inclose you his letter. I had some thought of cutting out some part of it, but knowing your desire, as you said, to have all the documents in the case, I take the liberty of sending this one exactly as it reached me, and if anyone is to blame, I am the person. I remain your agent,

"GEORGE WENTWORTH."

He sent this letter out at once, so that he would not have a chance to change his mind. "It will reach her this afternoon, and doubtless she will call and see me."

It is, perhaps, hardly necessary to asy she did not call, and she did not see him for many days afterward, but next morning, when he came to his office, he found a letter from her. It ran:

"DEAR MR. WENTWORTH: The sending of Mr. Kenyon's letter to me is a somewhat dangerous precedent, which you must, on no account, follow by sending any letters you may receive from any person to Mr. Kenyon. However, as you were probably aware when you sent the letter, no blame will rest on your shoulders or on those of anyone else, in this instance. Still, be very careful in future, because letter sending, unabridged, is sometimes a risky thing to do. All the same, you are to remember that I always want all the documents in the case, and I want them with nothing eliminated. I am very much obliged to you for forwarding me the letter.

"As to the managership of the mine, of course, I thought Mr. Kenyon would desire to come back to London. If he is content to stay abroad, and really wants to stay there, I wish you would tell him that Mr. Smith is exceedingly pleased to know he is willing to take charge of the mine. It would not look businesslike on the part of Mr. Smith to say he is to name his own salary, but unfortunately Mr. Smith is very ignorant as to what a proper salary should be, so will you kindly settle that question? You know the usual salary for such an occupation. Please write down that figure and add $200 a year to it. Tell Mr. Kenyon the amount named is the salary Mr. Smith assigns to him.

"Pray be very careful in the wording of the letters, so that Mr. Kenyon will not have any idea who Mr. Smith is. Yours truly, EDITH LONGWORTH."

When Wentworth received this letter, being a man, he did not know whether Miss Longworth was pleased or not. However, he speedily wrote to John, telling him he was appointed manager of the mine, and that Mr. Smith was very pleased to have him in that capacity. He named the salary, but said if it was not enough, no doubt Mr. Smith was so anxious for his services that the amount would be increased.

John, when he got the letter, was more than satisfied.

At the same time Wentworth had been reading his letters, John had received those which had been sent him when the mine was bought. He was relieved to find that Melville was not, after all, the owner, and he went to work with a will, intending to put in two or three years of his life with hard labor in developing the resources of the property. The first fortnight, before he received any letters, he did nothing but make himself acquainted with the way work was being carried on there. He found many things to improve. The machinery had been allowed to run down, and the men worked in the listless way men do when they are under no particular supervision. The manager of the mine was very anxious about his position. John told him the property had changed hands, but until he had further news from England he could not tell just what would be done. When the letters came John took hold with a vim, and there was soon a decided improvement in the way affairs were going. He allowed the old manager to remain as a sort of submanager, but that individual soon found out the easy times of the Austrian Mining company were forever gone.

Kenyon had to take one or two long trips in Canada and the United States to arrange for the disposal of the products of the mine, but, as a general rule, his time was spent entirely in the log village near the river. When a year had passed he was able to write a very jubilant letter to Wentworth. "You see," he said, "after all the mine was worth the £200,000 we asked for it. It pays, even the first year, ten per cent. on that amount. This will give back all the mine has cost, and I think, George, the honest thing for us to do would be to let the whole proceeds go to Mr. Smith this year, who advanced the money at a critical time. This will recoup him for his own outlay, because the working capital has not been touched. The mica has more than paid the working of the mine, and all the rest is clear profit. Therefore, if you are willing, we will let our third go this year, and then we can take our large dividend next year with a clear conscience. I inclose the balance sheet."

To this letter there came an answer in due time from Wentworth, who said that he had placed John's proposal before Mr. Smith, but it seemed the gentleman was so pleased with the profitable investment he had made that he would hear of no other division of the profits but that of share and share alike. He appeared to be very much touched by the offer John had made, and respected him for making it, but the proposed rescinding on his part and Wentworth's was a thing not to be thought of. This being the case, John sent a letter and a very large check to his father. The moment of posting that letter was doubtless one of the happiest of his life, and this ends the formidable array of letters which appears in this chapter.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Kenyon's luck, as he said to himself, had turned. The second year was even more prosperous than the first, and the third as successful as the second. He had a steady market for his mineral, and, besides, he had the great advantage of knowing the rogues to avoid. Some new swindles, he had encountered during his first year's experience, had taught him lessons that he profited by in the second and third. He liked his home in the wilderness, and he liked the rough people among whom he found himself.

Notwithstanding his renunciation of London, however, there would, now and then, come a yearning for the big city, and he promised himself a trip there at the end of the third year. Wentworth had been threatening, month after month, to come out and see him, but something had always interfered.

Taking it all in all, John liked it better in winter than in the summer, in spite of the extreme cold. The cold was steady, and could be depended upon; moreover, it was healthful and invigorating. In summer John never became accustomed to the ravages of the black fly, the mosquito and other insect pests of that season. His first interview with the black fly left his face in such a condition that he was glad he lived in a wilderness!

At the beginning of the second winter John treated himself to a luxury. He bought a natty little French Canadian horse that was very quick and accustomed to the ice, because the ice of the river formed the highway by which he reached Burntpine from the mine. To supplement the horse, he also got a comfortable little cutter, and with this turnout he made his frequent journeys between the mine and Burntpine with comfort and speed, wrapped snugly in buffalo robes.

If London often reverted to his mind, there was another subject that obtruded itself even more frequently. His increased prosperity had something to do with this. He saw that, if he was to have a third of the receipts of the mine, he was not to remain a poor man for very long, and this fact gave him a certain courage which had been lacking before. He wondered if she remembered him. Wentworth had said very little about her in his letters, and Kenyon, in spite of the confession he had made when his case seemed hopeless, was loth to write and ask his friend anything about her.

One day, on a clear, sharp, frosty winter morning, Kenyon had his little pony harnessed for his weekly journey to Burntpipe. After the rougher part of the journey between the mine and the river had been left behind and the pony got down to her work on the ice, with the two white banks of snow on either side of the smooth track, John gave himself up to thinking about the subject which now so often engrossed his mind. Wrapped closely in his furs, with the cutter skimming along the ice, these thoughts found a pleasant accompaniment in the silvery tinkle of the bells which jingled around his horse's neck. As a general thing he met no one on the icy road from the mine to the village. Sometimes there was a procession of sleighs bearing supplies for his own mine and those beyond, and when this procession was seen, Kenyon had to look out for some place by the side of the track where he could pull up his horse and cutter and allow the teams to pass. The snow on each side of the cutting was so deep that these bays were shoveled out here and there to permit teams to get past each other. He had gone half way to the village when he saw ahead of him a pair of horses which he at once recognized as those belonging to the hotel keeper. He drew up in the first bay and awaited the approach of the sleigh. He saw that it contained visitors for himself, because the driver, on recognizing him, had turned round and spoken to the occupants of the vehicle. As it came along the man drew up and nodded to Kenyon, who, although ordinarily the most polite of men, did not return the salutation. He was stricken dumb with astonishment at seeing who was in the sleigh. One woman was so bundled up that not even her nose appeared out in the cold, but the smiling, rosy face of the other needed no introduction to John Kenyon.

"Well, Mr. Kenyon," cried a laughing voice, "you did not expect to see me this morning, did you?"

"I confess I did not," said John, "and yet," here he paused. He was going to say, "and yet I was thinking of you," but he checked himself.

Miss Longworth, who had a talent for reading the unspoken thoughts of John Kenyon, probably did not need to be told the end of the sentence. "Are you going to the village?" she asked.

"I was going; I am not going now."

"That's right. I was just going to invite you to turn round with us. You see, we are on our way to look at the mine, and, I suppose, we shall have to obtain the consent of the manager before we can do so." Miss Longworth's companion had emerged for a moment from her wraps and looked at John but instantly retired among the furs again with a shiver. She was not so young as her companion, and she considered this the most frightful climate she had ever encountered.

"Now," said John, "although your sleigh is very comfortable, I think this cutter of mine is even more so. It is intended for two. Won't you step out of the sleigh into the cutter? Then, if the driver will move on, I can turn and we will follow the sleigh."

"I shall be delighted to do so," said the young woman, shaking herself free from the buffalo robe and stepping lightly from the sleigh to the cutter, pausing, however, for a moment before she did so, to put her own wraps over her companion. John tucked her in beside himself, and, as the sleigh jingled on, he slowly turned his pony round into the road again. "I have got a pretty fast pony," he said, "but I think we will let them drive on ahead. It irritates this little horse to see anything in front of her."

"Then we can make up speed," said Edith, "and catch them before they get to the mine. Is it far from here?"

"No, not very far; at least, it doesn't take long to get there with a smart horse."

"I have enjoyed this experience ever so much," she said. "You see, my father had come to Montreal on business so I came with him, as usual, and, being there, I thought I would run up here and see the mine. I wanted—" she continued, looking at the other side of the cutter and trailing her well-gloved fingers in the snow—"I wanted to know personally whether my manager was conducting my property in the way it ought to be conducted, notwithstanding the very satisfactory balance sheets he sends."

There were no witnesses on the white-topped hills.

"Your property!" exclaimed John, in amazement.

"Certainly. You didn't know that, did you?" she replied, looking for a moment at him and then away from him, "I call myself the Mistress of the Mine."

"Then you are—you are—?"

"Mr. Smith," said the girl, coming to his rescue.

There was a moment's pause, and the next words John said were not at all what she expected. "Take your hand out of the snow," he commanded, "and put it in under the buffalo robe; you have no idea how cold it is here, and your hand will be frozen in a moment."

"Really," said the girl, "an employe must not talk to his employer in that tone! My hand is my own, is it not?"

"I hope it is," said John, "because I want to ask you for it." For answer Miss Edith Longworth placed her hand in his.

Actions speak louder than words. The sleigh was far in advance, and there were no witnesses on the white-topped hills.

"Were you astonished," she said, "when I told you that I owned the mine?"

"Very much so, indeed. Were you astonished when I told you that I wished to own the owner of the hand?"

"Not in the slightest."

"Why?"

"Because your treacherous friend, Wentworth, sent me your letter applying for a situation. You got the situation, didn't you, John?"

THE END.

—As turning the logs will make a dull fire burn, so change of studies a dull brain.—Longfellow.

RAISE A SUNKEN STEAMER.

Wrecking Tugs Exert an Enormous Force Unsuccessfully on the Ailsa.

Quarantine, S. I., Dec. 22.—Another effort will be made to-day to raise the steamship Ailsa, sunk near Fort Hamilton by collision with the French liner La Bourgogne on Feb. 29 last. The combined forces of the Midford Salvage company, and the Chapman Wrecking company were at work yesterday on the steamer, and although a lifting force of over 2,000 tons was exerted she did not move an inch. Twenty-one chains had been run under the Ailsa, which lies in an upright position embedded in sixteen feet of mud. To either end of these chains were attached thirty-four immersed barrel-like caisons, each thirty feet long and eight feet in diameter. Air was forced into these through lines of hose or by powerful compressors. A number of large rubber bags were also placed in the holds and inflated. The derrick Reliance was moved near the bows and the Monarch at the stern and both exerted such force as to heel over under the strain. The suction of the sixteen feet of mud was, however, too great to be overcome and the Ailsa never moved. The attempt made yesterday was more or less of an experiment, and means will be found by dredging or otherwise to break the force of the suction. One method suggested was to force water through pipes into the mud under the vessel and thus loosen it.

Cuban Subject in the Italian Chamber.

Rome, Dec. 22.—In the chamber of deputies last evening a member of the radical party gave notice of his intention to introduce a motion expressing the sympathy of the chamber of deputies with the Cuban insurgents. The Marquis di Rudini, prime minister, intimated that the ministry would oppose the adoption of such a motion by the chamber, his remarks evoking violent protests on the part of the radicals. In the course of the discussion Signor Imbriani, the radical leader, declared that his party at least would join the American and other civilized people in hoping that the Cubans might be victorious in their struggle for freedom.

CUBA'S SUPPORTERS

Monster Demonstration in New York City Last Night.

BIG PARADE AND A CROWDED MEETING

Many Men of National Prominence Take Part in the Proceedings---President Cleveland's Name Received with Disapproval.

New York, Dec. 22.—The demonstration held by the Cuba Libre in this city last night was a great affair. First was a monster parade and then an enthusiastic mass meeting at Cooper Union. At the conclusion of the great demonstration the wildest kind of enthusiasm had been worked up, and the cause of free Cuba had made a great advancement among the citizens of New York. The parade was formed at East End avenue and Eighty-seventh street. Long before the hour set for the line to move thousands of Cubans and American sympathizers had congregated in the neighborhood. It was a scene never to be forgotten. There were upwards of 2,000 men in line when shortly after 7 o'clock Grand Marshall Franz Meyer gave the command to start. The line was divided into ten battalions each headed by a band of music. At the head of each battalion the American and Cuban flags were carried by stalwart Cuban patriots. There were also a number of huge banners and transparencies. These had been prepared very carefully by the members of the Society of American Friends of Cuba, under whose auspices the demonstration was given. Several of the banners contained the pictures of Washington, Lincoln and Maceo, all of which were fittingly inscribed with mottoes. One of the most prominent transparencies was that of the Virginius massacre. Under it was the inscription "Has the American government forgotten this." Other banners and transparencies bore scenes representing Weyler's butchery in the island of Cuba. The wildest excitement attended the paraders throughout the entire line of march. Crowds of men, women, and children gathered along the sidewalks and cheered the patriotic men, who appeal to the United States government for freedom. Hats were thrown into the air and men shrieked themselves hoarse. Long before the line reached Cooper Union the meeting there had begun. As early as 7 o'clock the crowd began to gather about the entrance to the famous old meeting hall. Among the list of vice-presidents appeared the following names: Gov. Morton, Hon. Frank S. Black, Col. John Jacob Astor, Senator David B. Hill, Hon. Charles A. Dana, Andrew H. Green, Gen. Daniel Butterfield, Hon. Roswell P. Flower, Andrew Carnegie, William Rockefeller, W. R. Hearst, James Gordon Bennett, Chauncey M. Depew, Thomas C. Platt, Russell Sage, Gen. Tracy, and many other prominent persons. As the name of each prominent man was read it was cheered to the echo. "Where is Grover's name?" asked a facetious listener when the list had been completed. The mention of the chief executive's name was the signal for a series of groans and cat-calls of derision. Speeches were made and resolutions demanding the recognition of the insurgents adopted.

MACEO WAS ASSASSINATED.

Information Which Is Said To Have Come from Weyler's Palace.

New York, Dec. 22.—"I am able to say upon what I consider the best of authority that General Maceo was murdered and not killed in honorable warfare," said Captain Burley of the steamship City of Washington, which arrived in this port from Havana last night. "I have it from a most reliable source," said Captain Burley to a reporter, "that Maceo was ambushed and assassinated. I got my information through a third party from no less a source than the chief telegraph operator at the palace. Maceo was killed at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of the 8th. He was decoyed under the bluffs and shot from them. Major Cirujeda had 350 men in readiness at Punta Brava. The letter found on Gomez's son was a base forgery, for the purpose of misleading sentiment. There were just forty in the Cuban party with Maceo. It is whispered that two escaped, and that one of these is with Juan Riviera in the Rosario hills. The others were killed. It is from these two that the truth has come. A Spanish officer told me confidentially that Maceo was ambushed. It was expected that many resignations would follow the news of his death. Instead the Cubans have become doubly determined and have gained numbers. The feeling in Havana is intensely anti-American among the Spanish. The same Spanish officer told me frankly that they could and would clean us up at the first chance. The Spanish in Havana honestly think they can best us in a war. The truth is that most of the people in Havana would welcome a war with the United States as the quickest solution of the present difficulty. It is a mixture of bombast, commercial shrewdness and despair."

Against Recognizing the Cubans.

Baltimore, Dec. 22.—At a special meeting of the board of trade the following resolutions were adopted: Resolved, that we greatly deplore the action of the senate committee on foreign relations in reporting favorably a joint resolution to recognize the independence of the republic of Cuba. That we believe that in view of the conditions now existing in Cuba as reported from all sources, such action is very ill-timed and hasty and calculated, if approved by congress, to greatly embarrass if not actually sever the peaceful relations now existing between Spain and

The old repair shop in the rear of the store will be moved into the store. This change has been made necessary by the need of increased space for the exhibition and storage of wheels.

CHRISTMAS.

Now Christmas opens wide its wings
And peace to cot and castle brings.
Swing wide the portals of good cheer
And gifts dispenses far and near.
And those that fit the giver's mind
Attractive you'll at Collier's find.

YOUR TIRED STOMACH.

"I have no appetite," you say, "and the little I do eat does me no good At first it feels cold and dead in my stomach and by and by I have aches and pains that sometimes go to my chest and back. I feel weak, low spirited and out of sorts all over. I fancy the demon of dyspepsia has got me." That's the way you talk and no wonder. But wait a moment. Let us reason together. Perhaps thus far your stomach is merely tired. You have been eating too much, eating the wrong things, and irregularly. You have given it too much to do, and like all living things, when overworked, it stops at length from sheer exhaustion. There may not be an actually diseased condition as yet. Still it is nature's warning, and you must heed it or worse will follow. "But I must eat or starve," you say. True enough, but safety usually lies in middle courses. Here is one for you. You don't need drastic purges or exciting stimulants. Your condition is one easily relieved if we go about it gently and sensibly. The tired stomach wont work under whip and spur. It has probably had too much of that already. What you require is something that is at once a food and a digester of food. Such an article is the Shaker Digestive Cordial, discovered and prepared by the Shaker Community of Mt. Lebanon, N. Y. Taken right after eating, so as to mix with the food, it does the stomach's work for it, gives it the advantage of further rest, strengthens you in a natural way, and soon enables the stomach to do full duty. There is nothing else like this simple, safe, certain and palatable remedy. Yet the Shakers respect your doubts and authorize druggists to sell a trial bottle for ten cents.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

THE WIDOWER'S GUEST.

He Had Reasons For Buying a Tombstone For the Deceased.

A countryman entered the office of a dealer in monuments.

"I want a stone to put at the grave of my wife," he said.

"About what size and price?"

"I don't know. Susan was a good woman. A trifle sharp mebbe at times, but she was a good woman and never got tired of working. Just seemed to sort of fade away. She brought me a tidy sum when I married her, and now I want to put up a stone that her children and me kin be proud of."

"Did she die recently?" asked the dealer sympathetically.

"Not so very. It will be five years next month. I thought to put up a stone sooner, but I've been too busy. Now I've got around to it and want one right away."

"Well, here's a book of designs. Select what you think will suit you."

"I don't know much about such things, and you are in the business. I'd ruther you would take $50 and do the best you can. I want sumthin showy. I'll tell you how it is, and then you'll know the kind. I want to marry the Widder Scroggs, and I heerd she said that I was too mean to even put a stone at the grave of my first wife, when she brought me all my property. Put up a stone that will catch the eye of a widder and write a nice verse on it. If $50 ain't enough and you are sure a leetle more will help me with the widder, put it on, and I'll make it all right soon as I marry her. She's got a heap of property, and while it seems a lot of money to put into a stone, I reckon the chances are wuth it." And the sorrow stricken widower paid $50 and inquired where he could get a present cheap that would suit a widow.—New York Journal.

The Professor's Discovery.

One of Washington's scientific men found himself in an assemblage where there were a great many young people. He endeavored to rise—or, perhaps, to descend—to the occasion as gracefully as possible. Having been introduced to a number of young women, he tried to make himself agreeable by explaining some of the latest information in ethnology, and he became so absorbed in his discourse that he did not notice, until they were nearly all gone, that a youth with a nasal voice was winning his audience away from him with a funny song. He tried it again with archæology as the theme. A girl with a banjo wrecked his ambitions. He thought he was making some headway by means of his remarks on paleontology when a man who took a rabbit out of a silk hat eternally quenched his pride.

"My dear," he said to his wife on their way home, "I have been thinking it over, and I find that the evening has been far from wasted."

"I was very much afraid that you would feel differently about it."

"No. I have made a very important and interesting discovery. The merest accidents sometimes lead to the most surprising revelations, and tonight I learned something which completely overturns an accepted theory."

"Is it possible?"

"We have been led to believe that the chief of all forces is the attraction of gravity."

"Yes."

"Well, I have found out tonight that there are times when it can't hold a candle to the attraction of levity."—Washington Star.

WE

Care more about closing out our entire stock of Christmas Goods for the next three days than we do about the profits we make on them.

You have no idea how LOW we have cut our prices down to until you come and see.

We don't want a thing left over, so we will devote the remaining three days before Christmas to clear them out regardless of what they cost us.

Come in just as soon as you can, while the variety is good, and make your selections; there is no trouble at all about the prices, and everything is just as new and pretty as it can be.

We were awfully busy last Saturday, up to 10 o'clock at night, with our two wagons and big truck delivering goods from one end of the town to the other, including the towns all around.

We received today a large lot of 6-piece Toilet Sets, first quality, underglazed, handsomely decorated in poppy designs in brown, blue, green and gray. It's so late we mark them at $1.10. Also in the same lot, as handsome a variety of Jardiniers as you want to see. They are marked low, too.

Our order, too, for Umbrellas from the factory of Folmer, Clogg & Co. is delated, therefore they will have to be marked away down in order to sell them. A Good School Umbrella as low as 39c., and better goods proportionally low. In fact, everything in the Christmas line must go; no matter about the cost.

You will save money if you will come right to

FAVORS A NEW COUNTY.

FARMER ORATOR BELIEVES PLAINFIELD SHOULD BE A COUNTY SEAT.

It is Not a New Question, For Twenty Years Ago the County of Central Was Proposed—Will Come in the Future.

A Press reporter today asked J. E. Martine what he thought of the project of a new county.

"I have long been in favor of such a movement," he said, "and believe it would be of great advantage to Plainfield. The notoriety and publicity that a county seat would bring would materially advance a l interests."

"But would there not be opposition from Elizabeth and the rest of the county?"

"Naturally, yes. They would regret to lose Plainfield. And so would Somerset county regret to lose North Plainfield, but notwithstanding all this I believe it will be brought about ultimately."

"Would you not take in a part of Middlesex county?"

"Certainly, and I believe that old Middlesex would rebel but little. I feel quite sure that the population in that portion proposed to be annexed would hail it with joy. The extending of streets and roads, the construction of bridges and the like would be simplified and be much more satisfactory within one county than it is at the present."

"How about the political aspect of the situation?"

"Ah! Ah! There is small choice in rotten apples. Viewed from the result of the last election I don't see that we Democrats could be any worse off—though I confess for many reasons I should dislike to cut away from old associates in other parts of the county, but then a matter of this character should be viewed in a broad light, and not from a political standpoint."

"This is a new question for Plainfield, is it not?"

"Bless you, no! Some twenty years ago I caused to be published in The Constitutionalist a notice that application would be made to the session of the Legislature for the formation of a a new county from parts of Union, Somerset and Middlesex counties, the same to be known as the county of Central, with Plainfield as the county seat."

"Where would you draw the lines to embrace the new county?"

"Oh! That would have to be a matter of much deliberation. I have a general idea, but no definite thought on this."

"Do you believe the matter will come up this winter?"

"No! It will be slow. It is a question for agitation and education, but I believe it will come."

His Stolen Watch Recovered.

The house of Jacob Peterson, a farmer near Raritan, was robbed early in November, and among the articles taken was a gold watch. No trace of the thieves could be found, but recently Mr. Peterson recovered his watch in a strange manner. Jas. Lahey last week was killed by the night freight near the Raritan station of the Central Railroad. When his body was found and County Physician Wagoner searched his clothes he found a watch which a county detective recognized as resembling the description given by Peterson of the one stolen from his house. Subsequently Peterson identified it as his property. Lahey's friends say that he purchased it from some man, whom they do not know.

At the High School.

A meeting of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association was held yesterday morning at recess and delegates to the annual meeting of the New Jersey Interscholastic A. A., to be held at Pingry's School, Elizabeth, on Monday, December 28, were elected. The following were chosen:—Charles Noble, Lindley Hillman and Carroll L. Runyon. George Proctor Smith will be in attendance, as he is president of the association.

The accident came near proving fatal to Mr. Dunn. He was laid up for months and has not fully recovered.

GALA DRESS OF YULETIDE

HIGH SCHOOL ELABORATELY DECORATED FOR CHRISTMAS TIME.

Each Class Had a Hand in the Trimming and a Pretty Sight the Combination Made—A Funny Poem for the Occasion.

A lively place is the Plainfield High School at Christmas time, for every class room decorated for the occasion and there is an air of expectancy about the scholars that increases as the time draws nigh for Christmas vacation.

The interior of the building looked very pretty, indeed, this morning, while Assembly hall wore a gala dress the like of which was never seen there before. Instead of the Senior class alone decorating the hall, the Seniors and Juniors combined their efforts and the result was very charming. All along one side above the folding doors into the class rooms the class of '98 had draped their colors, light blue and yellow. The Senior class had the position of honor for their colors. Blue and white bunting was draped about the platform and on the wall behind. The American flag was hung behind the desk while over it hung the blue and white of '97, and a beautiful star of white and gold with '97 in the centre of it was placed in the middle of the flag.

Ninety-eight had charge of the decorations in the first class room which included bunting and drawings on the black board. The members of the class of '99 decorated the other class room very prettily. They selected as their colors, red and white, the same as those of the famous class of '95. Bunting was draped about the chandelier and sides of the room while the boards also wore a holiday dress. The mascot of the class, "The Yellow Kid," smiled at his friends from one of the front boards.

The members of the Fourth class, or the "Naughty Naughts," as they are called, decorated one of their class rooms on the second story. Their colors are red and dark green, and the holly branches were used to great effect. Red bunting was stretched across the room, while the boards were in harmony with the rest of the room. This room was thought my many to be the prettiest in the building.

Very little evergreen was used in the decorating, and that was by the seniors in arranging the platform.

The members of the Third class had their present for the Fourth class in the shape of two baby rattles which were hung on the wall of the Fourth class room. They were accompanied by some verses, printed on a large sheet of paper, and written for the occasion by the poet of the class, Tom Muir. Tom is employed in the circulating department of The Daily Press, and is known among his schoolmates as the wit and poet of the school.

The verses were as follows:

TO THE FOURTH CALSS.

Christmas comes but once a year.
And this one's almost due.
So, infants, we are going to give
A souvenir to you.

But children are such artless things,
They only laugh and prattle.
And being such, we give to you
This pretty little rattle.

The exercises were held this morning, and they were attended by a large number of graduates and friends of the school.

The programme, as published in yesterday's Daily Press, was followed out and greatly enjoyed by all. The singing was especially fine, and much improvement was noticed, especially by the graduates. Great praise was given to Mr. Lewis for his excellent work there. Some of the selections were difficult, but they were given without a break, while the volume of voices was noticeable.

Rev. J. O. McKelvey was the speaker of the morning and made a few remarks appropriate to the occasion. He spoke on the future and how each one is the architect of his or own fortune and the necessity of system, concentration and perseverance, in order to be successful. Then he spoke of the moral future and how the world wants men and women of character.

After the exercises, the senior and junior classes adjourned to the laboratory where the seniors presented the members of the other class with their Christmas present. There was something funny for each and with it a humorous selection of a few lines. Sydney R. Titsworth, president of the senior class, presented the different gifts with a few appropriate words.

Miss Gilbert of the Franklin School, had some charming exercises and beautiful pictures in her room this afternoon at two o'clock.

Julius Williams, of Elmwood place, has returned from an extended business trip and will not remain home until after January 1st.

Miss Anna Reinger, of Newark, is visiting her sister, Mrs. William Stephenson, of Watchung avenue.

REAL WINTER WEATHER

MORE SNOW FALLS TO MAKE EXCELLENT CHRISTMAS SLEIGHING.

This Storm Was a Gentle One and Flakes Fell Into Just the Right Spot to Make the Steel Runners Slip Easily.

Plainfield has seen more of real winter weather during the last month than for several years in the same period of time. Another snow storm arrived yesterday afternoon at about five o'clock and has covered the first fall of snow with several inches more of the light feathery flakes. The first storm was accompanied by a biting north wind that swept the snow up in big drifts but last night's storm was a gentle one, the snow falling quietly and easily in fine flakes which soon covered the sidewalks and bare spots on the roads.

It was just what the lovers of sleigh-riding have been hoping for as the other storm left a fine bottom on which two or three inches of snow was needed to make glorious sleighing. And then it appears as if Plainfield was at last to have a real "white Christmas" such as she has not seen for many a year.

Although the snow was dry and fine, it clung to the trees and soon transformed the city into fairyland, all robed in white in honor of the approaching holiday. The pedestrians who were out in the storm did not find it unpleasant as the temperature was very moderate, but they were soon robed in white for the snow clung to coat and wrap and soon transformed the wearer into a living snow man. About eight o'clock last evening the snow ceased and the stars came out but it was but for a few minutes and soon they disappeared from view and the snow began to fall with steady vigor. There was another lull in the storm this morning early but again it resumed for a time.

At seven o'clock, four inches of the white mantle had fallen and the sleighing was excellent. The mercury was at 26 degrees above zero and there was no wind to disturb the snow laden trees.

The snow plows of the street railway were on duty early this morning and the cars were running according to schedule time at an early hour. The trains on the Jersey Central Railroad were not delayed by the storm.

G. A. R. POST INSPECTED

WINFIELD SCOTT POST MADE A SPLENDID SHOWING.

After the Official Business the Meeting Was Thrown Open to the Relief Corps and S. of V.—A Jolly Time Was Enjoyed.

The annual inspection of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., took place last evening in their rooms on East Front street. Inspecting Officer Stryker, of Gen. Wadsworth Post, Somerville, performed the work of inspection and all the visitors agreed that they had never seen the work done in such an excellent manner.

After the inspection the meeting was thrown open and a large delegation from the Woman's Relief Corps and Sons of Veterans was escorted to the room where the festivities of the evening were enjoyed.

The first number on the programme was a vocal solo by Miss Jomini, entitled "Marching Through Georgia." She was accompanied on the piano by Clifford Braider. Another solo, "Brave Boys Were They," by Miss Jomini, was accorded hearty applause.

Then came the speechmaking, which was opened by Department Commander Ernest C. Stahl, of Trenton, who gave an interesting address on the work of the Grand Army. Department President, Mrs. Mary Morse, of the Woman's Relief Corps, followed with a few well-chosen remarks. Other remarks were made by Junior Vice-Commander Hader, of Bloomfield; Department Inspector Hand, of Atlantic City; Chief Mustering Officer Askfeld, of Trenton; Assistant Inspector General James Atwood, of Trenton; J. Kentz, member of National Council of Administration; Past Commander L. V. F. Randolph, of Post 73

After the speechmaking all retired to the banquet room when a fine collation was served by the members of the Relief Corps.

The visitors left for home on the 1:17 train this morning, thoroughly pleased with their visit to this city.

A Clue to Postoffice Robbers.

A clue that may aid in capturing the robbers who looted the Cranford postoffice on Saturday was found yesterday. The brace and chisel left behind by the thieves were identified as the property of F. E. Miller, a carpenter at Aldene. These tools were stolen from Miller's shed on Friday night. Three strangers were seen loitering near his house that afternoon. Good descriptions have been secured of them and furnished to the police.

ROBBED A COAL DEALER.

W. H. COLES' SAFE BLOWN OPEN AT DUNELLEN THIS MORNING.

The Sound of the Explosion Deadened by Bags of Feed Piled Around the Safe—Valuable Papers and Some Money Taken.

Last night burglars visited Dunellen who were evidently of the depraved and most dangerous class. At 2:30 o'clock this morning George Richardson, who lives nearly opposite to Wm. H. Cole's coal office, was rudely awakened from his slumber by a muffled report, and getting up looked out of his side and back windows, thinking perhaps that Dealaman's store had been broken into again. He saw nothing unusual, although the night was comparatively light, and returned to bed.

This morning when Mr. Cole's colored driver went to the office he found the place in perfect confusion. The padlock on the front door had been cut and the bolts on the back door pried off, giving both a means of entrance and exit for the burglars. On the floor were scattered around many papers, receipts, etc., some valuable and some worthless. The safe had been drilled open and two of the drawers in it, in which were kept valuable data, including church documents and other papers, removed.

Bags of feed had been taken from a rear room and piled around the safe. Two of the compartments in the safe are missing along with their contents.

There was a considerable amount of money in the safe, and this was, of course, taken, but the robbers evidently had some respect for Mr. Coles for they left his account books without mutilation.

The main loss is the church insurance policies and Mr. Coles' papers, some of which are in connection with the Dunellen Building and Loan business. But of course payment on all of these can be easily stopped.

The only clue left behind was a carpenter's chisel with the name "Isaac Lyons" on it. Mr. Lyons is erecting a new house for Dr. Nelson, at New Market, and it is believed that the tools were stolen from there. Chief of Police Warden was notified of the robbery early this morning, but as yet he has been unable to get any trace of the thieves, though several suspicious looking persons have been seen.

A PRESENT FOR THE JANITOR

North Plainfield Public High School Remembers Richard McDonald.

The Board of Education, teachers and scholars of the North Plainfield Public High School had a jolly time this morning when they joined in a Christmas celebration, which was attended by many surprises.

In the chapel, a programme, consisting of recitations, vocal and instrumental music, was rendered by the scholars.

One of the great surprises was given to Richard McDonald, the janitor, who was presented with an elegant gold watch by the Board and teachers. Superintendent Warde made the presentation with a few appropriate remarks. The recipient was so surprised that all he could say was, "Merry Christmas." This was followed with cheers by all present.

Superintendent Warde was handsomely remembered by the scholars and teachers and he received a large number of useful and pretty gifts. Every teacher was kindly remembered by their class in a substantial manner.

The scholars in the kindergarten department enjoyed a Christmas tree and they decorated it with their own handiwork, which was presented to their parents.

After school, Mr. Warde's office was thronged with scholars who would not be satisfied until he had shown them his presents.

The school is now closed until January 4th.

Christmas at St. Mary's.

The first service in St Mary's church on Christmas morning will be at 6 o'clock, and will be a high mass. The other masses will be at 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 10:30 o'clock, the same hours as on Sunday. At 10:30 special music appropriate to the great festival of Christmas will be rendered. The choir will have additional singers, and an orchestra will also assist at this service.

Improving in Strength.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck, PhD., who is at the Laurel House, Lakewood, is steadily gaining strength at that most excellent health resort and will remain there until Thursday of next week when he will return to Plainfield. On the following Sunday, Jan. 3d, he expects to resume charge of his pastoral duties in Trinity Reformed church.

—Randolph's drug store window on West Front street is filled with a large assortment of the finest brands of perfumes at reasonable prices.

A CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL.

GAYETY FOR THE CHILDREN OF HEAVENLY REST CHURCH.

A Mother Goose Reception Was One of the Features, and After the Programme Presents Were Given Away.

The parish house of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Evona, was the scene of activity and gayety yesterday afternoon and evening, when the children's Christmas festival and "Mother Goose" reception was held. The weather and the bad walking kept some away, but there was, nevertheless, a good attendance.

The "Mother Goose" reception was arranged by Mrs. Lines, as was also the "broom drill," both of which were most successfully carried out. In the "broom drill" there were ten boys and ten girls, together with eight of the older girls of the school, and the various evolutions and changes through which they passed showed precision and marked training. The balance of the musical and literary part of the programme included a song by Miss Alice Ashworth, recitations by the Misses Lizzie Hendry, Agnes Van Norden, Nellie Arthur, Agnes Hendry, Anna Pierce, Grace Conkling and Ernest Ashworth. Following the above was a brief address by the superintendent, Wm. Winans Moore, and the distribution of handsome boxes of choice canky, church-like in appearance, calendars and Christmas cards. Special gifts of work boxes were given to the members of the sewing class.

Among the most prominent ones who took part in the Mother Goose entertainment were: Miss Ruth Lyons, as "Miss Muffet;" Erick Van-Norden, as "Little Jack Horner;" Miss Nellie Morgan, as "Little Boo-Peep;" Eddie Ashworth, as "Little Boy Blue." Harry Wyckoff impersonated "Dr. Foster," and George Stiles, "Chas. Wagg." "Little Daffy Down Dilly" was shown by Miss Agnes McNaughton.

The table for the sale of fancy articles was presided over by Mrs. Graves, while Mrs. Morgan was in charge of the chocolate table. The committee of arrangements consisted of Mrs. C. S. Lewis, Mrs. Graves, Mrs. Morgan, the Misses Graves and Miss Wenzel.

At the close of the entertainment ice-cream, coffee and cake were served in abundance to all present.

SOMEWHAT OF A MYTH.

James Clark Refuses to Talk About the New Water Company.

The exclusive announcement in yesterday's Daily Press of the formation of a new water company with a capital of $2,000,000, of which James Clark, of this city, is the head, was read with great interest. It is by far the largest enterprise that was ever undertaken in Plainfield and, as such, was the leading topic of conversation last evening.

Mr. Clark was interviewed at his home on West Seventh street, corner of Central avenue, by a Press reporter, this morning, but he had nothing to say regarding the new company, which is known as the New Jersey Water company. The article in yesterday's Daily Press, he said, was correct. Now that the company has been formed, he remarked that the next thing to do was to find the business. Besides the last remark, he absolutely refused to say anything about the interest at present.

Mr. Clark has at different times been largely interested in water interests in New Jersey, at one time owning valuable rights in Pequonnock lake. The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company brought suit against him at one time for lowering the water level of the lake and its tributaries, which acted as a feeder for a canal operated by them. Mr. Clark engaged the late Benjamin Butler as counsel, and defeated the railroad company. He was also one of the original organizers of the Plainfield Water Supply Company.

Bright and Cheerful.

The Commercial Palace never appeared more bright and cheerful than it does this season. Filled, as it is, to overflowing with the prettiest, tastiest and most attractive Christmas novelties and useful articles ever shown by this most popular house before, and sold at such low prices as to meet the smallest purses. Edsall's has well earned the popularity and success it enjoys today.

—There will be prize bowling for turkeys on Christmas and New Year's eves at the alleys in the Ulrich building, on East Second street.

The old lady was right when she said the child might die if they waited for the doctor. She saved the little one's life with a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure. She had used it for croup before. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

STRUCK ON HIS HEAD.

A KALSOMINER LOSES HIS BALANCE AND TAKES A TUMBLE.

Garrett Smith Was the Workman and He Was Engaged in the City Hotel—Blood Issued From His Ears and Nose.

An accident of a very serious nature occurred in the City Hotel yesterday afternoon, in which Garret Smith, a painter and kalsominer, was dangerously if not fatally injured.

Some improvements were being made in the hotel and Smith had been employed to kalsomine the ceiling of several of the rooms. He was at work yesterday afternoon on his scaffold in the room alone. In some way he fell; it is supposed that he lost his balance when leaning too far backward. He struck on the back of his head and the blood spurted from his nose and ears. Other people in the building heard the noise when he fell and rushed to his side. He was unconscious when he was picked up and Dr. Long was summoned at once. It was impossible to tell at first what effect the fall had had except that he was injured internally. A hack was summoned and the injured man taken to his home. Mr. Smith resides at 676 West Third street and is a painter by trade. He works on his own account.

Dr. Tomlinson was called to attend Smith at his home. Smith is still in a partially conscious state and the doctor says that the shock has caused a complication of troubles in his head. The injury is a serious one, but not fatal, he says.

ONLY A POINT BEHIND.

Y. M. C. A. Basket Ball Team Defeated By a Small Margin at Summit.

Since their recent crushing defeat by the second team from the Twenty-third street branch of the New York Y. M. C. A., the basket ball team of the Plainfield association has rather lost interest in the game, but last night the excellent showing made by the team has brought back all the old time enthusiasm.

The game was played in the gymnasium of the Summit Y. M. C. A. against the first team of that association and the final score stood 11 to 10 in favor of the home team.

The baskets were not of the regulation height and the visitors were not accustomed to the place. The Summit boys had it all their own way the first half, when the score stood 7 to 2 in their favor. Then the Plainfield team began to get onto the game and the contest grew more exciting until when time was called, Plainfield was only one point behind. The Summit team played a rougher game than the visitors and four fouls were called on them against one called on the Plainfield team. The Plainfield team consisted of the following: Right forward, William Prugh; left forward, Max Moraller; centre, Eric Moraller; right guard, Henry Jessop; left guard, Frank Richards.

Last evening the following officers were elected at the meeting of Minerva Temple, Rathbone Sisters: Past chief, Mrs. Bowman; most excellent chief, Mrs. Thatcher; most excellent senior, Mrs. Mattis; most excellent junior, Mrs. McComas; manager, Mrs. Pope; protector, Mrs. Bellis; guard, Mrs. Higgins. The officers will be installed January 6th.

Will Please the Children.

Next Tuesday evening the scholars of the Sunday-school of the Seventh-day Baptist church will hold their Christmas exercises. Besides the usual first-class musical and literary entertainment, for which the school is noted, there will be a general distribution of boxes of candy among the scholars and teachers.

Rheumatism Cured in a Day.

"Mystic Cure" for rheumatism and neauralgia radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It removes at once the cause and the disease immediately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits. 75 cents. Sold by T. S Armstrong, druggist, corner Park and North avenues, Plainfield.

Caught a Sleigh Runner in the Track.

A sleigh, in which were seated Miss Marie Martine, her friend, Mrs. Fredericks, and a driver, was wrecked this noon on the car tracks corner of Front street and Park avenue. The occupants of the sleigh were not injured and they alighted from the sleigh before any serious damage resulted.

Absolutely pure, perfectly harmless, and invariably reliable are the qualities of One Minute Cough Cure. It never fails in colds, croup and lung troubles. Children like it because it is pleasant to take and it helps them. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

He stated this fact to Assemblyman Kelly of Albany, who broached the subject to him. Mr. Thacher said he would not take the nomination even if the democrats had a majority vote in the legislature. Mr. Kelly said he would vote for Senator Hill to receive the minority complimentary nomination for United States senator.

A number of negroes have been warned to leave town and more trouble is expected.

Warrants for Two Bankers.

Chicago, Dec. 23.—Warrants were sworn out before Justice Hall last night for the arrest of E. S. Dryer and Robert Berger of the wrecked banking firm of E. S. Dreyer & Co. The warrants charge the bankers with the violation of the banking law of Illinois, by receiving deposits after the institution was insolvent, and were sworn out by Frank Kennedy, a saloonkeeper on Dearborn street. He claims to have made a deposit in the bank after it had been insolvent. Robert Berger, one of the partners, is a son-in-law of George Schneider, president of the defunct National Bank of Illinois.

CHICAGO FAILURES

Fears for the Safety of Several Other Financial Firms.

BANKERS BELIEVE THE WORST IS OVER

Savings Banks Take Refuge Under the Sixty Day Notice Law---Fear That the Clearing House May Withdraw Its Offer of Aid.

Chicago, Dec. 23.—The failure yesterday of Angus & Gindelen, one of the largest contracting firms in this city, with assets of $300,000 and liabilities of $250,000, has added greatly to the excitement caused by the bank failures, and fears are entertained for the financial safety of several other banks and large private firms. The firm of Angus & Gindelen was a heavy debtor of the National Bank of Illinois and, it is claimed, owed that institution over $200,000. The news of the failure of the Bank of Minnesota and the Union Stock Yards banks at St. Paul has had no appreciable affect upon the situation here, as those banks had very small business dealings with any of the financial concerns here and their failure was really not unexpected. The associated banks have taken prompt, thorough and conservative action to avoid a serious scare on the part of the public which has millions of dollars in savings accounts deposited with city banks. The Illinois Trust leads all the local banks in its saving deposits, having nearly $12,000,000. The Hibernian bank has less than $3,400,000 of such accounts. The solid showing made by the banks which did not loan on the collapsed national bank has had a somewhat reassuring affect on the public and the general feeling in the banking community is that the worst is over, so far as those institutions were concerned. There is a fear in some quarters that the Clearing House association may not prolong its offer to loan 75 per cent. of approved claims against the National Bank of Illinois and that within the next ten days there may be a tightening of their purse-strings. At a conference of the savings banks of the city, which was held when the runs began at the Hibernian and Illinois Trust banks, it was unanimously agreed to adopt an unusual means towards checking what might become an epidemic of apprehension. Instead of attempting to allay the scare by paying all demands in full on the spot, which has proven to be an unwise policy in the past, the banks decided to stand upon their statutory rights and demand notice of sixty days in case of all withdrawals exceeding $100. John Angus, president of the Angus & Gindelen Contracting company, says that the assets are estimated to be worth $300,000 and the liabilities are placed at $250,000. These figures are believed to be largely guesswork, however, and exaggerated in case of the assets. It is said the firm owes the National Bank of Illinois alone $250,000 for money borrowed, and the security is said to be of a class which will be slow to realize on. The present partnership was formed in 1888. The company had a large contract on the drainage canal and was the principal owner of the security building at Madison street and Fifth avenue, which was built by the firm.

Health

Depends upon keeping the blood in a pure condition, free from disease germs, and yet there are very few people who have perfectly pure blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla cleanses, vitalizes and enriches the blood, throwing out the impurities that clog and irritate the system and permits no lodgment of the seeds of disease. Read the following:

"I cannot recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla too highly for it has done wonders for me. I was

and all run down and my health was so poor I could not get out of doors. I was not able to do anything, being troubled with asthma and heart disease. I was nervous and could not sleep nights. I had become completely discouraged when I happened to read an advertisement of Hood's Sarsaparilla and concluded to give it a trial. After taking the first bottle I felt better and since taking five bottles I am so much improved that I feel like a new man. I am now able to do a fair day's work and sleep at night. My heart does not trouble me and I have realized great relief for asthma. I feel full of courage once more and life seems brighter and worth living. I would recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all afflicted as I have been, for I know it will help them. If this statement of facts will be of benefit, you are welcome to use it as you please." HENRY J. WRIGHT, Box 502, Oxford, New York.

A Great Battle.

Do consumptives recover? Yes, thousands of them. Even after the disease has a firm hold? Yes, no doubt about it. After cavities have been formed and hemorrhages have occurred? Yes, even then. If the system is too weak, the disease will probably conquer, but if the body can be reinforced there is a fair chance for a winning fight. For twenty years, thousands have testified how they gained the victory.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil with the Hypophosphites is still coming to the rescue. Out-door life, fresh air, and good pluck are of immense value. But in addition to these the body must be supplied with that peculiar kind of fat which is found only in cod-liver oil; combined with valuable medicinal agents; and there must be the tonic effect which comes from the hypophosphites. It is a great battle, and a great victory is often gained.

"Just as Good" is not SCOTT'S EMULSION.

NEW ENGLAND SOCIETY.

Ninety-First Anniversary of Its Organization Celebrated Last Night.

New York, Dec. 23.—The New England society celebrated the ninety-first anniversary of its organization and the 276th of the landing of the Pilgrims by a dinner last night at the Waldorf. The dinner was held in the new ball room of the hotel, which was elaborately decorated for the occasion. Banners on which were inscribed in letters of gold the names of the New England states were around the banquet hall. There was a wealth of choice flowers at the various tables, and wreaths of evergreen were everywhere seen. In the absence of Chas. C. Beaman, the president of the New England society, who has gone out of town for the holidays, ex-judge Henry F. Howland, the first vice-president, presided at the dinner. The following is the list of toasts and the names of the gentlemen who responded to them: "Forefathers' Day"—E. J. Phelps ex-minister to the court of St. James; "Our Debt to the Pilgrim Fathers"—the Rev. Dr. Minot J. Savage. "Some New Englanders in Georgia"—Col. Richard Malcom Johnston of Baltimore. "New England Literature"—Hamilton W. Mabie. "The results of Puritan Influence"—Gen. Horace Porter. "The Navy"—Hilary A. Herbert, secretary of the navy. "The Army"—Gen. Nelson A. Miles. "The Civic Compact and the Church Covenant of the Pilgrim"—Nathan Lord, president of the Pilgrims society of Plymouth. "The City of New York"—Mayor Strong. "Our Sister Societies"—J. Kennedy Tod. Covers were laid for 500. Among those present besides those mentioned above were Horace Russell, Stewart L. Woodford, Elihu Root, J. Pierpont Morgan, Gen. Thos. H. Ruger, Hon. J. Sterling Morton, Hon. Adlai E. Stevenson, Commodore Montgomery Sicard, Charles A. Dana, Cornelius N. Bliss, C. P. Huntington, Arthur F. Bowers and ex-Gov. Roswell P. Flower.

FRIZZELL UNDER ARREST.

The Man Who Shot Mrs. Young and Himself Must Stand Trial.

Plymouth, N. H., Dec. 23.—Harry Frizzell, the 19-year-old youth who shot Mrs. Edith Calvin Young in both ears with a 22-calibre revolver at the Central house, last Wednesday, and then attempted to kill himself, has been placed under arrest at the instance of County Solicitor Adams, the charge being attempt to kill and murder, with malice aforethought. Frizzell is under a keeper and will be arraigned as soon as his health will permit, which will undoubtedly be in a few days as his health is improving as is his intended victim. Since she has been able to tell her story, it is more generally believed than his, but there are circumstances in the case which make it look as if it she planned the shooting as claimed by Frizzell.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN POOR.

All the Sheriff Could Find to Attach Was a Chip.

Boston, Dec. 23.—John L. Sullivan was in the poor debtor court yesterday on a florist bill of $318 on which judgment has been obtained. The items in the bill dated from June 19, 1893, to December 9, 1894. The first was for four buttonhole boquets, but nearly all the others were for funeral designs, ranging in cost from $25 to $100. The bill had been allowed by the court and a deputy sheriff was given a writ of attachment. John L. lived at 23 Folsom street, Roxbury, but the officer could not find that he had anything to attach, so he attached a chip which fulfils the legal requirements. The ex-champion was examined as to the amount of money he had made and how he spent it and the case was postponed until January 11.

An investigation will be held. The cheese came from the commissary stores.

Buffalo, Dec. 23.—Assemblyman Fred Nixon of Chautauqua county who arrived here from Albany yesterday, says that the assembly slate as at present made up bears the name of O'Grady for speaker, and his own for the leadership of the majority. Mr. Nixon said it was the general opinion among the legislators whom he met while in the east that the democratic leader would be Mr. Finn of New York.

Want a Duty on Lumber.

Savannah, Ga., Dec. 23.—A meeting of the manufacturers of yellow pine lumber of this section was held here yesterday for the purpose of taking steps to present the views of the lumbermen to congress on the subject of the tariff on lumber. The meeting was very strongly in favor of the restoration of the tariff of 1882 of $2 per thousand. A committee was appointed to memoralize congress on the subject.

WEYLER IS DEJECTED

Would Really Welcome the Appointment of His Successor.

REBELLION POSSIBLE IN HAVANA

News of the Military Chief's Operations in the Province of Pinar del Rio Awaited with Intense Interest---The Battle of Placetas.

Havana, Dec. 23.—Reports of the operations of General Weyler on the field of military activity in the province of Pinar del Rio are awaited here with intense interest, as the captain-general intimated before his departure yesterday that advices announcing a decided Spanish victory might be expected within a day or two. Spaniards here profess to believe that the military chief will keep good his word at this time, as they think he is in possession of secret information telling him of the concentration of a large body of the insurrectionists in that province, which, they assert, he will not hesitate to attack, having every confidence in his ability to achieve a brilliant success. Beneath this confident attitude, however, may be discerned anxiety, not for the death of the captain-general, but that his plans may be again frustrated, in which event it is believed that the American congress will surely take a hand in the struggle to the great detriment of the Spanish cause. Another cause for this anxiety is the growing scarcity of funds with which to purchase those luxuries so dear to the Spanish heart, for, although many of them have an ample stock of money, prices for even the necessities of life are rapidly advancing. The announcement of the fact that the United Railways of Havana can pay no dividend and that arrangements are being completed for their sale to an English syndicate has also operated to cast a damper upon the spirits of even the most hopeful. While subdued in tone, the dissatisfaction with the conduct of affairs in Cuba is none the less deep on the part of those who are compelled to bear the largest part of the burden of the war, who have been repeatedly disappointed by the non-performance of General Weyler's bright promises, and it may be necessary for him to return to Havana to hold in check a possible revolt at the very heart of Spain's hold upon Cuba. These things are, of course, only whispered in secret, but they are none the less evident to an acute observer. It is also vaguely rumored that Gen. Weyler is becoming weary with the never-ending warfare and the petty annoyances and complaints to which a man in his position is naturally subjected, and it is said that he would not only welcome the appointment of his successor, but would resign were it not for the fear that his military reputation would suffer by so doing. While only news of an encouraging character is permitted to be published, many Spaniards read between the lines of the dispatches and discover that the so-called successes of the Spanish arms are in reality mere pretences on the part of the authorities to prevent the real truth being known. It is safe to say that there is more doubt and uncertainty as to the outcome of the war in Spanish minds to-day than at any time since the rebellion began. General Solano reports that the battle recently fought by Col. Lara with the combined forces of the insurgents under Mayia, Rodriguez and other leaders in the Oliver hills, near Placetas, was a more important engagement than was at first reported. It has since been learned that the rebels had upwards of 200 killed or wounded, while the loss to the troops was only one captain and twelve privates wounded.

CLEVELAND'S CUBAN MESSAGE.

Spanish Cabinet To Have the Document Read in the Cortes.

London, Dec. 23.—A dispatch from Madrid says that a meeting of the cabinet, which was held yesterday, discussed the Cuban section of President Cleveland's message to congress, an official copy of the message having been received by Prime Minister Canovas del Castillo a short time ago. The matter was considered in all its aspects, and it was finally agreed that as the references to Cuba in the message affected the cortes they must be read before that body. The cortes is not in session now, and, unless an extraordinary session is called, it will not meet for some weeks. The cabinet arrived at no decision as to when the message should be read. Admiral Beranger, minister of marine, submitted requests for money for the purchase of coal and for other naval purposes and these were granted. The cabinet at its meeting last evening decided to make no diplomatic reply to President Cleveland's message.

PROGRESSIVE TRADESMAN.

But one day more is left of the tradesmen's harvest. Business as a rule, has been very good among Plainfield merchants this holiday season. By their enterprise in handling up-to-date and a large variety of goods, they draw trade from surrounding towns whose residents in former years sought other centers. While merchants in Elizabeth, New Brunswick and some of the more modest places have been slow to meet the demands of city competitors, the Plainfield dealers have marched in the van at all times, and are now reaping the profits of their progressiveness.

MUST COME BY AGITATION.

The interview of James E. Martine anent the new county proposition, published in the news columns of today's Press, is interesting in the practical view the Farmer Orator takes of the question. Like many others, he realizes that it is something that cannot be accomplished with dispatch, but in common with other great movements and reforms, must come from long and persistent agitation. It will be news to many young in years to know that the new county question was thought of twenty-five years ago.

THE RIGHT SENTIMENT.

At Trenton the general sentiment is that the Legislature will not appropriate money to send the National Guard to Washington on Inauguration Day as an escort to Vice-President elect Hobart. That is sentiment in the right direction. Of course, it is a great honor for New Jersey to have one of her citizens elected to the second highest office in the country, but to tax her $25,000 for a single day's military display in honor of the event is clearly out of the line of economical government.

DISCOURAGING.

That is a pretty idea of consolidating Plainfield and North Plainfield, and making Greater Plainfield the seat of government of a new county, but the Legislature of 1897 isn't going to create any new counties.—New York Tribune.

DISAPPOINTMENT FOR SOME.

The news comes from Trenton that the Legislative offices have all been settled on, and still there are scores yet to placate. Disappointment will be the lot of some.

Electric Bitters

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

Oil Stove Exploded.

A serious fire was narrowly averted last evening about 6 o'clock, at the home of Charles Lippencott, No. 39 Chatham street, when an oil stove exploded and set fire to the carpet. With the explosion the tube attached to the stove was blown out which increased the damage considerably. Mr. Lippencott was eating supper at the time and he very quickly threw the stove out doors before the fire spread, and the only damage resulted to the carpet which was quite badly burned near the centre of the room.

LEGISLATURE'S WORK.

SENATOR VOORHEES TELLS WHAT WILL BE DONE AT TRENTON.

He Says That He Believes the Session Will be a Short One—Thinks the Constitutional Amendments Will be Approved.

More Senators and Assemblymen were at the State house in Trenton yesterday than on any day since election. They went for work, and before evening practically settled the organization of both Houses.

It was the first appearance of Senator Voorhees, and he will be the leader of the majority again this year. He has the following to say concerning the work of the session:

"I believe the session will be a short one, not over ten weeks, and the volume of legislation small. Much of it will depend on the report of the Commissioners of Equalization, to codify the Borough laws, and purify the Passaic. T ack elevation may be up again, and I believe the constitutional amendments of the last session will be approved. It is certainly the best we can get, and further delay means no amendments at all, as a constitutional convention will not be permitted by the smaller counties, which would lose control of the Senate by such a move; and although that is what we should have, I think we had better accept what we can get now than nothing at all.

"The only logical excuse for delay would be to provide for district representation in the House, but that was defeated by the larger counties last year. I suppose the usual flood of special measures will appear, with Essex and Hudson in the van, but I do not think they will occasion much delay.

"Bills looking for appropriations for armories and the like might as well be kept at home, for while we have an ostensible taeasury surplus of $1,000,000, it is only enough for a working fund."

In conclusion the Senator added that from what he could learn the Senate Investigating Committee would be continued, and that it would probably find more work than it had last year.

Gov. Griggs said he hoped Senator Voorhees was correct in his surmise of a short session, but added that he had serious doubts in that direction. He agreed with the Senator in his views on treasury raids, and said that bills with that object in view would hardly reach the statute books.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN AND NEW MARKET.

Mrs. John Lindsley, of Prospect avenue, is entertaining company from Camden.

Miss Caroline Hurd, of Davenport Centre, New York State, is visiting Mrs. Henry TenEyck, of Fairview avenue.

Benjamin B. Furlong and O. F. Meredith, of Chicago, have been guests at Maier's Park Hotel for a few days part.

The closing exercises in the Whittier school took place at eleven o'clock today. There were recitations by the scholars and an address by the principal.

Contractor Charles Corrieli shipped two car load of logs to New York yesterday, and he will ship two more cars on Thursday. The logs are used for piling.

The engine room in the new town hall has been put in thorough order, but the upper part of the building remains as it was when the carpenters and masons left it.

The Dunellen firemen are arranging for a grand fair in the engine house some time before spring. The proceeds will be devoted to furnishing the parlors and reception rooms.

The members of the Dunellen Board of Education, of which the late Thomas Thomas was a valuable member, will meet within a day or two and adopt suitable resolutions condoling the death of Mr. Thomas.

The farm house of Alexander Dunn, which was destroyed by fire some time since, is being rebuilt. The insurance on the burned building has been satisfactorily adjusted, and Mr. Dunn proposes to put up a structure that will be both neat and lasting.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Swackhamer, of Lincoln avenue, are rejoicing over their Christmas gift. It's a young daughter and the little girl arrived Monday night. Harry was so elated over the event, yesterday, that he forgot to go to business. Both mother and child are doing nicely.

The closing exercises in the Lincoln school took place yesterday afternoon and attendance of parents and pupils was unusually large. There was singing and recitations by the scholars and addresses by Principal Whitney, and Rev. Messrs. Custard and Fletcher.

W. H. Coles is considering the advisability of having duplicate keys made to his office for his patrons, in whom he has so much confidence that he is not feared of being robbed. A jolly lot of residents meet there twice a week and amuse themselves for an hour or two around the checker board.

Mayor Brakeley does not pretend to be an expert hunter, and yesterday when a poor, full-grown, but unprotected rabbit accidentally dropped into his pharmacy through the back door, which had been left open, and persumably to get a porous plaster and a bottle of soothing syrup, Isaac Laing, who was in the store at the time, dispatched the rabbit with a revolver.

SCOTCH PLAINS.

Christmas Eve and on the following day Mr. and Mrs. William Lee will be "at home" to their friends.

The skating continues good on the upper pond.

More Light for Washingtonville.

The extension of the electric lights up Somerset street from the end of the trolley to the store in Washingtonville has been almost completed. The increased light along that thoroughfare will be gladly welcomed by those that have to use it much at night.

Stands at the Head.

Aug. J. Bogel, the leading druggist of Shreveport, La., says: "Dr. King's New Discovery is the only thing that cures my cough, and it is the best seller I have." J. F. Campbell, merchant of Safford, Ariz., writes: "Dr. King's New Discovery is all that is claimed for it; it never fails, and is a sure cure for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I cannot say enough for its merits.'

Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds is not an experiment. It has been tried for a quarter of a century, and to-day stands at the head. It never disappoints. Free trial bottles at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

CHRISTMAS.

"With trembling fingers did we weave
The holly round the Christmas hearth;
A rainy cloud possessed the earth.
And sadly fell the Christmas eve."

No wonder! For in days of yore
Mankind could not, as now they may.
Bring joy to homes on Christmas day

PASSING COMMENT.

One West Front street merchant attempted to go to New York on a commuter's ticket yesterday, and the ticket was taken up by the conductor. No return can be had for the confiscated ticket.

* * * *

More pack peddlers were in town yesterday and today than there has been for a long time past. Last night three were seen on Watchung avenue near the depot, and two more were seen on West Front street just at dusk.

* * * *

The residents of West Front street, in the vicinity of Washington avenue, have good reason to complain regarding the nuisance they are obliged to bear. Just off of Washington avenue, near Front street, is dumped nearly all the ashes, tin cans and refuse that is collected about town, and at present the sight is a disgrace to the city. Of late some of the old rags etc., have been set fire to and the stench has been terrible. It seems as though it is about time that someone with authority put a stop to the nuisance which grows worse every day.

* * * *

It is wonderful the effect a little lesson will have even among the good citizens of Plainfield. Last year Street Commissioner Meeker's raid on those who did not clean their sidewalks caused lots of excitement and several citizens were very indignant at the three dollar fine imposed. In conversation with a Press reporter, yesterday, Mr. Meeker told how effective that little lesson had been. This year the citizens looked after their sidewalks and Mr. Meeker only found the snow in front of vacant lots, most of which were owned by parties living outside of this city.

There is a new salesman at the store of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company on Park avenue. He walked in there the other day and made himself at home while the others in the store admired his appearance, accepted the situation and the new salesman remained. He hadn't any money but one of the employes looked after his meals and a bed was arranged for the stranger in the rear of the store. Then the visitor purred his thanks and is now looked on as part of the establishment. "Cleve," the wandering feline, has been named in honor of the wheels for which the company is agent. "Cleve" has already made many friends and is fast becoming one of the leading characters of the neighborhood.

THEATRICAL.

Manager Willey of Music Hall presents a real holiday attraction Christmas afternoon and evening. The programme offered is L. N. Woolcott's new farce-comedy, "A Yellow Kid," which is to be presented by Woolcott & Jackson's company of comedians. The play is a dramatic history of the funny pranks, fortunes and adventures of "Mickey Dugan," the famous "yellow kid" of the New York Sunday Journal and World.

Ward and Vokes, the famous "Percy and Harold of the farce-comedy world, will present "A Run On the Bank" at Stillman Music Hall, Saturday evening, December 26th. These funny fellows are supported by a large troupe of farce-comedy people, thirty in number. The two years of uninterrupted success which have been enjoyed by Ward and Vokes, since they left the vaudevilles, has demonstrated that they know how to please lovers of high-class musical-farce. There is none better en tour.

Death of S. H. Baker.

Silas H. Baker, formerly of Plainfield, and a brother of Mrs. James Dunn, of this city, died at his home, No. 504 West Nineteenth street, New York city, on Sunday. The funeral services were held this afternoon from the house, and interment will be made in Greenwood cemetery tomorrow. Prior to ten years ago Mr. Baker laid all the pressed brick building fronts in this city and was considered a first-class workman. At that time he resided on East Second street. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Charles Johnson, who lives at Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

GUMBO.

BY WILLIAM P. BROWN.

Squire Mugle was tall and cadaverous. The "boys" in Habersham often called him "Meechin' Mugle", because, though locally prominent, and well to do, he wore an aspect as of one always looking for forebearance and toleration rather than expecting honor and respect.

One felt a sort of pity at sight of his hollow-chested, angular form, which was somewhat neutralized by doubt, however, when one noted certain hard lines of minor expression that seemed to denote the possession of more forbidding attributes.

His wife was dead, and he lived in a large, tumble-down house, two miles from the little Georgia town of Habersham. When the civil war came on he sold his negroes, retaining only Gumbo to assist in looking after his impoverished plantation. His neighbors flouted him as being a unionist, for preferring Yankee gold to good negroes. But slave property was growing uncertain; gold was sure, and secret hiding places plentiful.

Gumbo was short, wheezy and timorous. Why the squire kept him, the least commercially valuable of his slaves, was wondered at; but the squire knew, reasoning shrewdly with himself.

"If I lose Gumbo," he would say, "I lose nothing much but a fat bag of nuisance. The rest of my niggers were worth their price."

Nevertheless, when the squire rose one night and hid his gold anew under a great hearth-stone in the kitchen, he saw a sight that made him, for the moment, repent having retained Gumbo to torment and wait upon him. That sable worthy, barefooted and in shirt and drawers, was staring at his old master from the doorway, while each hair of his kinky head seemed to be slowly straightening.

A devilish transformation convulsed Squire Mugle's face. Dashing down his candle, he sprang forward and seized Gumbo by the throat, as he stood in the pale moonlight streaming down from without.

"Did you see it?" he hissed, fairly choking with passion.

Gumbo gasped, gurgled, and at last managed to say: "Didn't see nuttin', 'ceptin' you, marse."

Squire Mugle slowly loosened his grip, tightened it again, then took his hand away, hesitatingly.

Gumbo knew! Where else could he hide his money? This spot was handy—right under his fingers, so to speak. He desired no distant swamp or hollow with tell-tale tree marks, as a place to be hunted for or forgotten, as the case might be. He loved his gold with a warm, personal affection. Next to the joy of handling it was the feeling that it was near by, unseen, yet felt, as by a sort of delicious sixth sense—dead to most people, yet psychologically alive to misers and lovers.

But Gumbo gazed at his old master with something like moisture in his little eyes. He was wounded to the quick by the nature of the squire's evident suspicion, and he bore the latter's scrutinizing look unflinchingly, though with an aspect of reproach. The squire seized Gumbo by the chin, raised the black face and glanced at it harder than ever. Then he released the negro and sighed.

"I will trust you," he said, at length. "But if you speak, or even think much about what you have seen and heard, you are a dead nigger.

One night a band of bushwhackers descended upon them, for the neighboring mountains were full of these pests then. They were a set of compound rascals, clad indiscriminately in blue and gray, and equally a curse to both confederate and union sympathizers. They served Mammon wherever the aid of rope, bullet or lash could invoke that deity from the curious hiding-places wherein war-stricken families bestowed their valuables.

The squire was routed out, but stood protestingly on his dignity. He had but a few head of poor cattle left, too poor even for army beef.

"Durn yer stock, old man!" said the leader. "We want yer money, so rush aroun' and git it up."

Gumbo stood quaking behind his master. Though not above pilfering the squire's tobacco, or rifling some henroost when fare was hard, he was faithful to that one great trust concerning what lay under the hearth-stone.

"Is dey unyunners er is dey rebs, marse?" he whispered.

"It makes no difference. They are thieves—so hush up. My all is in your keeping, Gumbo. H-s-s-h!"

One of the men, approaching from behind, laid a hand on Gumbo's shoulder.

"I'll bet this nigger knows where it is," he remarked. "We've hearn 'bout you and yer one man, squire. Yer've got money hid away and we're jes' goin' ter hev it—eh, boys?"

An echo of assent from the others followed, and the man continued:

"I also hearn what yer said to this nigger jes' now. So, out with the scads er we'll find a way ter make him talk."

"Boys," exclaimed the leader, "it's cold work palaverin' out here! Tote ther squire inter the kitchen. I see thar's a fire in thar."

Once all were inside, some pine knots were thrown on the embers, then the leader unwound a coil of rope from his waist.

"Zeb," he commanded, "you and Tom go and cut some hick'ries."

Two men left the room. Gumbo's teeth chattered with fear and cold, for he was again clad only in a shirt and drawers.

"I'll give yer two minutes ter tell, squire. After thet we takes other means thet yer won't be apt ter like so well."

"Meechin' Mugle" had planted himself on the hearth-stone, over his idol.

"Gent'lemen," said he, "you are troubling your sleeves for nothing. Don't we look poor enough? There is meal in the corner, a little corn in the cellar and a side or two of bacon. That is all—isn't it, Gumbo?"

"Fo' Gord, yes, marse! We-uns makes coffee ten co'n, an' rubs oak ashes on de me: in placer salt—"

"Shet up, will yer!" roared the leader. "Two minutes are about up. Boys, grab thet cussed nigger."

Gumbo was seized by practiced hands. Before he really realized what was happening to him, he was swinging to a joist by the thumbs, with his toes barely touching the floor. His groans and entreaties were pitiful, yet he would tell nothing. The squire raved helplessly, from his station on the hearth. Finally Gumbo's head fell to one side and his jaws hung loose.

"Lower him down," ordered the leader. "When he comes to we'll put the wood on him if he don't blab."

A pail of cold water was thrown on the negro. He revived, drenched, shivering, and looked round at his master. Then the foolish, faithful creature moaned:

"I hain't tole yit, marse!"

"No—God bless you, boy—you haven't. I will have satisfaction for this outrage, men. I have been a magistrate, and I—"

"Will yer shet up?" shouted the leader. "Now boys, throw thet nigger over a barrel and nachilly warp the hide offen him with these hick'ries."

Soon the kitchen resounded with Gumbo's cries; yet still he would not tell.

"Up with him!" shouted the captain, now furious. "Put ther rope roun' his cussed neck. Take him out ter a tree."

While this was being done, the leader turned to the squire.

"See here," he said, "if yer don't give up thet money yer'll lose a nigger right here. We're in a hurry. Some of Wheeler's cavalry are about and we hain't over anxious ter tell 'em howdy to-night. So speak up lively now, er yer'll be short one more slave—sure as God made little apples."

"Fo' Gord, gen'l'men! don't hang a po' niggah fo' stickin' ter his po' ole marsea—"

Ah! Gumbo was in the air now. He was struggling, while merciless hands tugged at the rope. The squire leaped at the cord, cut it with his knife and stood over his prostrate slave, his eyes blazing like coals.

"Hands off, you heartless dogs!" he cried. "You shall not murder the boy. If you will have money, come with me, and may God curse the last one of you!"

He loosed the rope, raised Gumbo up and led him toward the kitchen, while the astonished bushwhackers followed, talking among themselves. The squire, still grasping his slave's arm, entered and strode to the hearth-stone, where he again faced the guerrillas.

A confused noise was now audible down the public road. Two men entered and whispered hurriedly with the captain. The noise increased to a clattering roar.

"Git outen here, men!" shouted the leader. "Wheeler's men are comin,'" Then to the squire: "We'll be back ag'in, fust yer know. As fer thet blamed nigger—here's fer him!"

A pistol shot bellowed through the room. Gumbo screamed, and the guerrillas rushed out pell-mell, mounted and were gone in a trice. Other troops surrounded the house. A mulatto woman ran in and fell on Gumbo's neck as he sat disconsolate.

"I hearn 'em!" she cried. "We hearn 'em et mother's. I knowed de sojers wuz in town a-furragin', so I up an' run an' let 'em know. One on 'em took me up behin' him, an' year I is—bless Gord! What's de matter wid yer, Gumbo?"

Gumbo rose to the emergency again, for his injuries, though painful, were not serious.

"Why, howdy, Em'line," he responded. "Yer all come jes' in de nick ob time—sho'."

Gray-coated cavalrymen now swarmed in, and shots were fired about the place. Several bushwhackers were captured, and a guard was left, at the squire's request, lest the scoundrels were to suddenly return. Meanwhile Emeline made Gumbo some corn coffee, a soldier gave him a drink of sorghum rum, and he began to feel quite chipper again. His master watched him with kindly eyes.

"I didn't tell, marse," said Gumbo presently.

"No, you did not, but you have placed your old master under a deeper debt than mere money can repay, Gumbo. The New Year is pretty near here, and I am going to set you free—you rascal. You might have run away to the Yankees, but instead you have stood your master's best friend through thick and thin. If that doesn't deserve freedom, I hardly know what does."

"Den yer won't make me leab yer w'en I's free, marse?" Gumbo looked up anxiously, scarcely thinking enough of the boon, apparently, to say "thank you."

"Not if you want to stay—and I hope you do."

"H—how 'bout Em'line? Me an' she wants ter marry pow'ful, don't we, Em'line?"

"G' 'way, niggah! I hain't talkin' now." And yet Emeline looked pleased.

"W—e—e—ll." The squire hesitated. It was easier to give Gumbo freedom than gold. The negroes would probably all be free before long, anyhow. "Times is mighty tight, but you can have the old mare, Gumbo, and—yes—hang me if I don't! Emeline can have $50 for house fixings."

"Fed'rit money, marse?" asked Gumbo, anxiously.

"No—gold!" shouted "Meechin' Mugle," desperately, though he gulped somewhat emotionally afterward. "It's extravagant — it's wasteful; but — you've earned it, boy—that's all!"

The squire hurried off to bed to escape thanks and to reconcile himself to his own liberality. Gumbo threw his arms round Emeline.

"Fifty gole dollahs an' de ole blin' mar'!" he shouted, ecstatically. "Em'line—honey—we's rich!"—New Bohemian.

WOMAN'S SOFT LOCKS.

False Hair Coming Into Fashion—Curls and Waves.

Women are dressing their hair as much as ever in the mode of the figure eight, finished with a Psyche knot. The hair about the face is puffed out over small combs—to which are sometimes attached the fluffy "waddings" which make a puff look thick and rich. For women, it is whispered, are beginning to wear false hair again, and even "rolls," or stuffing, to augment their own locks.

The pompadour aureole is worn, provided it is becoming, and, if the shape of the face forbids it, it is contrived in a modified form, and soft little rings of hair are arranged about the brow and temples. For most women some kind of "bang" is indispensable. It should not be forgotten that it softens the lines so often seen in women past their girlhood. When cut and curled with an artistic sense, the outline of the hair on the brow brings out every feature of the face to the best advantage.

Curls are much in evidence — curls falling over or beneath flat braids and coils at the back of the head; curls peeping out coquettishly behind the left ear or drooping low on one side of the neck; ringlets glossy, smooth, round like a cylinder and capable of "bobbing" in enchanting fashion with each movement of the owner's head.

Whether for street or evening toilet the hair is worn moderately low. In no case does it tower above the forehead as formerly; far back, on the very crown of the head, is the center of the coiffure. And the tresses must be waved and crimped all over the head to give the loose, unstudied yet pleasing effect so much sought. Gloss and smoothness are desirable, and curling irons are denounced for constant use, as the heat dries up the natural oil and renders the hair brittle and liable to premature grayness.

All kinds of contrivances are used for producing the requisite wave and crimp. "Crimpers" have charming little ribbons attached as fastenings, so arranged that madame looks quite as captivating in her crimping pins as when in full regalia. A golden head with bewitching little blue bows dotted all over it, or ebon locks cased in orange or crimson crimpers are really far from unbecoming.

Every woman wears her grandmother's tortoise-shell comb, or one as nearly like it as she can buy. Gold and silver combs or combs with cut steel headings make a pretty circlet or half-moon of brightness against dark or auburn locks.—N. Y. Tribune.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry rates will receive your work.

AMNESTY FOR ARMENIANS.

The Sultan Shows Mercy to More Than 2,000 Prisoners.

London, Dec. 23.—A dispatch from Constantinople says that the sultan has issued a decree granting amnesty to more than 2,000 Armenians who had been convicted either of crimes against the government or against persons or property, or who were awaiting trial on such charges. In addition his majesty commutes the death sentence passed on ninety Armenians to imprisonment in a fortress, and promises that these prisoners will be given their liberty if they behave themselves for three months. This clemency is due to the intervention of Mgr. Ormanian, the Armenian patriarch, who recently requested the sultan to show mercy to the many Armenian prisoners. The sultan then consented to grant a general amnesty on condition that the patriarchal mixed council guarantee the future good behavior of the Armenians affected by his act of clemency.

VICTIM OF AN ACCIDENT.

No Indications Pointing to Suicide in the Case of Miss Powell.

Philadelphia, Dec. 23.—Miss Mary H. Powell of Winona, Somerset county, Md., who was found dead in bed yesterday at a boarding house on Spruce street, having been killed by inhaling illuminating gas which had escaped from an open jet, came to this city Monday to have an operation performed upon her nose at a hospital here, and, as nothing in the case pointed to suicide, it is the supposition that the unfortunate woman was the victim of an accident. Miss Powell was well dressed, had on a gold watch and chain and twenty dollars in money with her. Her friends were notified and they telegraphed the coroner that they would come here and take charge of the remains.

M'AULIFFE LEAVES THE RING.

Retires Before He Meets the Fate of Sullivan and Dempsey.

New York, Dec. 23.—Jack McAuliffe has announced officially that he has retired from the ring. He writes from Portland, Ore., to Arthur F. Lumley, as follows: "I am through. You can tell the boys that I have made up my mind finally to retire from the game. I have been twelve years in the ring and have seen Sullivan and Dempsey go down in the same ring in New Orleans. There is no use of my waiting for the same fate. I have never been defeated, and the public have never lost any money on me. I am going back to 'Frisco and from there I will leave for home, where I expect to get down to business."

Fourth-Class Postmasters.

Washington, Dec. 23.—The following fourth-class postmasters have just been appointed: Maine—G. W. Ray, Corea. New York—E. T. Boyd, Wallington. Pennsylvania—H. A. Bryan, Baden; I. G. Burkett, Stormston. The senate has confirmed the following postmaster nominations: New York — J. E Brennan, Highland Falls; J. C. Brophy, Shortsville; J. E. Cannon, Andover; Marvin D. Fisher, Spencer; John A. Homeyer, Richmond Hill; Willard Peck, Hudson; C. S. Powell, Freeport; E. J. Shanahan, Amsterdam; B. M. Tasker, Fort Edward; Leander Wright, Amityville.

Palmer Awarded 6 1-4 Cents.

Pittsburg, Dec. 23.—Tyndale Palmer, agent, who recently brought suit for damages against about 100 leading newspapers in the United States, charging libel in having published an article alleging dishonest transactions on his part, yesterday received a verdict of six and a quarter cents against the Leader Publishing company. His suit was for $50,000.

An Italian Banker Decamps.

New York, Dec. 23.—Marcello H. Baralati, a well known Italian banker, has mysteriously left the city, leaving several hundred depositors and creditors to mourn his departure. The sheriff is now in charge of Baralati's banking establishments. Altogether it is supposed that Baralati has decamped with between $50,000 to $75,000.

$30,000 Fire at Townsend, Vt.

Brattlebore, Vt., Dec. 23.—The town of Townsend's third disastrous fire in two years broke out yesterday, destroying four buildings, rendering eight families homeless and doing damage in amount of $30,000. The origin is uncertain, but was probably incendiary.

SEVEN SHOT DOWN

Republican Agitators in Spain Attacked by the Gendarmes.

DYNAMITE BOMBS FOUND AND SEIZED

A Number of the Agitators Captured and Placed Under Arrest---Officials Assert That It Was Only a Demonstration of Anarchists.

Madrid, Dec. 23.—A small band of men carrying a republican flag assembled yesterday at Novelda, province of Alicante, and when called upon to disperse by the gendarmes refused to do so. They were again ordered to disperse, and upon their second refusal the gendarmes fired upon them, killing seven of them. The others then fled precipitately, but the gendarmes pursued and captured several of them. A search was made of the lodgings of the prisoners and a number of dynamite bombs were found. The police are at a loss to decide whether the assembling of the men was for the purpose of making a demonstration of sympathy for the anarchists sentenced Saturday at Barcelona, or whether it was a manifestation of republicanism. The finding of the bombs tends to make them believe the men are anarchists, but the public are confident it was a republican demonstration.

SANGUILY'S TRIAL.

Prosecuting Attorney Demands a Sentence of Life Imprisonment.

Havana, Dec. 23.—The trial of Julio Sanguily, on charges of conspiring against the Spanish authority, is being continued to-day. The attendance is smaller than when the trial commenced. The sitting was devoted entirely to the speeches of the prosecuting attorney and council for the defense. The former continued the argument against the prisoner and again insisted that Sanguily's guilt had been proved and that he should be sentenced to life imprisonment. He decried any partiality being shown the prisoner on account of his being a Spaniard by birth or because he was an American citizen, and held that exact justice demanded that severe punishment be meeted out to him. Counsel for the defense followed the prosecutor. In a cool and reasonable speech he refuted the charges made against his client, and demanded that he be set at liberty. Before the speech had been concluded the court adjourned.

Fire at Elmira Reformatory.

Elmira, N. Y., Dec. 23.—The F. H. Mills Manufacturing company of the New York state reformatory was burned out last night. The flames destoryed two large brick buildings belonging to the state. The loss will approximate $90,000, including which nearly one-half is on state property and on which the state has no insurance. The fire for a time threatened the entire reformatory. The convicts were locked in their cells for the night before the fire was discovered. The fire was due to spontaneous combustion. It burned for five hours before it was gotten under control.

Work for New York's Prisoners.

Albany, Dec. 23.—The wardens of the state prisons have been receiving letters from prisoners stating that they understand work will be suspended in the prisons after January 1, and that the prisoners will be locked up in their cells. Gen. Lathrop, the superintendent of state prisons, has instructed the wardens to inform the prisoners that the prison authorities expect to find employment for the prisoners after January 1, but that in any event they will not be locked up in their cells, but will be allowed exercise if they are not kept employed.

Hartford County, Conn., Monetary Affairs.

Hartford, Dec. 23.—The state of the Hartford county treasury is such that there is a probability of a county tax being levied. The county is called upon to pay about $30,000 to towns under the "good roads" law and having recently spent $90,000 for improvements at the jail, cannot spare the money. The revenues of the county are limited and the only way of increasing them is by levying a county tax.

Wants $20,000 Damages.

Barre, Vt., Dec. 23.—Lulu Moulton has sued Mrs. Ella Lamb, both of this city, for the alienation of the affections of her husband. Mrs. Lamb, one of the largest taxpayers of this city, recently secured a divorce from M. D. Lamb, a well-known physician. The case is returnable at the March term of the Washington county court.

Money for Pensions.

Washington, Dec. 23.—The secretary of the interior has drawn upon the treasury for $10,800,000 for the quarterly payment of pensions. This will be distributed at pension agencies as follows: Pittsburg, $1,775,000; Milwaukee, $1,875,000; Des Moines, $2,100,000; Concord, N. H., $700,000; Chicago, $2,750,000; Buffalo, $1,600,000.

Charged with Embezzlement.

Buffalo, Dec. 23.—George M. Mattison of New York city, who was arrested here late yesterday afternoon on a warrant charging him with having embezzled $4,000 from his former employers, the Birge Manufacturing company of Canton, O., will be taken back to New York this afternoon.

The Baltimore No. 6 Mine Accident.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Dec. 23.—All the miners rescued Monday evening from the Baltimore No. 6 mine after an explosion of gas had occurred are in an improving condition this morning, excepting Michael Chumpo, who was badly burned about the body and may die. All the others will recover.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

The bowling team from the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. rolled their first games on their own alleys, last evening, against the team from the Westfield Y. M. C. A. Two games were rolled and the home team won both. Only two of the team that represented the Westfield's last year are bowling this year, and they did not roll as on former occasions. No high scores were made by either side, but this may be accounted for by the fact that the alleys have just been repaired and the bowlers did not have a chance to get used to them.

The individual scores were as follows:

PLAINFIELD Y. M. C. A.

Sutphen, M.	160	151

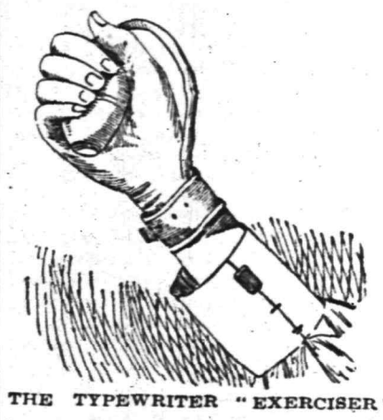
BOON FOR TYPEWRITERS.

Device Intended to Prevent the Hand from Becoming Cramped.

At last a champion has arisen who is to care for the tired fingers of the pretty typewriter. Many people seem to think the typewriter girl takes life easy, without giving a single thought to a sort of paralysis of the fingers which is sure to come if the keys of the machine are hammered long enough. But now Robert Barclay, an inventor of Green Bay, Wis., has contrived a simple little machine which, when used by the typewriter, counteracts the effect of the work on the machine and so prevents that form of paralysis, of which cramped fingers and a numbness of the hands are the first invariable symptoms.

Many a pretty typewriter, otherwise a perfect type of womanhood, bemoans the fact that her daily work over the keyboard of the machine has apparently ruined the shape of her fingers and given to what was originally a long, slender, well-formed hand an unnatural thickness and blunted the fingers, besides ruining the nails.



THE TYPEWRITER "EXERCISER"

The practical value of Mr. Barclay's invention having been demonstrated, the wonder is that it was not thought of before. In appearance this "exerciser," as the inventor calls it, resembles a small, oval-shaped rubber bulb, which just fits into the hand. A short rubber tube extends from one end of the bulb to a rubber band which is fastened about the wrist. This band is double, and the outer band is punctured with numerous small holes which allow the air within the bulb to escape when the hand is closed.

When the hand is opened the air is drawn into the bulb, and the exercise consists in opening and closing the fingers of the hand, the muscular action required to force the air from the bulb giving the necessary exercise.

On the same principle that a person who sits all day finds rest and relief in a walk, so the exercise of one set of muscles in the hand rests and brings relief to another set which may be overworked, and no ill effects are to be

A Woman's Appointment.

A pessimistic German says: "If the dear God should announce from one end of the world to another that on the 1st of January, from twelve to one o'clock, He would open the gates of Paradise to all who made application at that time, the women would arrive late, in spite of the importance of the occasion. They would find it impossible to complete a satisfactory toilet before evening."

WE

Care more about closing out our entire stock of Christmas Goods for the next three days than we do about the profits we make on them.

You have no idea how LOW we have cut our prices down to until you come and see.

We don't want a thing left over, so we will devote the remaining three days before Christmas to clear them out regardless of what they cost us.

Come in just as soon as you can, while the variety is good, and make your selections; there is no trouble at all about the prices, and everything is just as new and pretty as it can be.

We were awfully busy last Saturday, up to 10 o'clock at night, with our two wagons and big truck delivering goods from one end of the town to the other, including the towns all around.

We received today a large lot of 6-piece Toilet Sets, first quality, underglazed, handsomely decorated in poppy designs in brown, blue, green and gray. It's so late we mark them at $1.10. Also in the same lot, as handsome a variety of Jardiniers as you want to see. They are marked low, too.

Our order, too, for Umbrellas from the factory of Folmer, Clogg & Co. is delated, therefore they will have to be marked away down in order to sell them. A Good School Umbrella as low as 39c., and better goods proportionally low. In fact, everything in the Christmas line must go; no matter about the cost.

VISIT OF SANTA CLAUS.

THE OLD FELLOW WELCOMED TO MONROE AVENUE CHAPEL.

Walter McGee Impersonated the Character of Santa and Captured the Hearts of the Little Ones—Other Participants.

The Christmas entertainment at the Monroe Avenue Chapel last evening, was one of delight and pleasure to the large number of people present. The exercises opened with singing by the school under the direction of Superintendent Walter McGee.

The primary department, in charge of Miss Haff, entertained the older folks with recitations and the rendition of several songs. After the school sang "Merry, Merry Bells," an amusing cantata, entitled "The Capture of Santa Claus," was given in an excellent manner.

The platform was artistically decorated with evergreens, while an old-fashioned fire-place was given a prominent place. Overhanging the platform was a large star of evergreens studded with incandescent lights, the work of Henry Apgar.

Walter McGee played the part of Santa Claus in a characteristic manner, while Steven Aldrich took the part of the "Snow Man." The fairies were Irene Aldrich, Clara Scribner, Emma Scribner, Marguerite Phillips, Wenona Dodds, Minnie Guntzman, and those who captured Santa Claus were Etta Randolph, Sophia Saums, Edith Robinson, Vaughn McGee, Albert Cowling, Alice Pugh and Geo. Whitely. The chimney elves were Ephraim Saums, Arthur Robinson, Arthur Dow. Wm. Mattox, Agnue Dodds and Sidney Gilbert.

The young folks thought it would be a good scheme to capture Santa Claus when he arrived and instead of being asleep as he thought, they were wide awake. When he came down the chimney they caught him and fastened him in a chain with a rope.

During all this appropriate songs were rendered by the fairies and elves. An amsing feature happened when Santa called for his pie, which was termed apple and peach. It was brought in a basket and when uncovered proved to be Ina Dodds and Florence Phillips. Before they were taken away they sung a pretty little song. "Jack Frost," and the "Snow Man" also made their appearance and rendered solos. After the departure of Santa Claus, the school sang a Christmas carol. Candy and oranges were then distributed to all present. after which the festivities were brought to a close.

Miss Charlotte Aldrich and Miss Beeedman were in charge and arranged the programme.

MEETING WITH GOOD SUCCESS.

A Bazaar Being Given at the Fillmore Avenue Church.

The bazaar given by the deacons of the Fillmore Avenue Baptist Church, which is being held in Reform Hall from December 22d to 25th inclusive, bids fair to be a great success. Each evening new attractions are offered, and to-night Mr. R. E. Randolph will give a musical entertainment. On Christmas Day the Sunday school will give its annual concert, and the children will be under the direction of Miss Nora Williams and Miss Minnie Dunham, two Sunday School workers.

To assist in the cause of church work, the management has agreed to present a big turkey to the child selling the most tickets, so it is needless to say there is considerable skirmishing among the scholars of the Sunday School.

BILLBOARD AND STORES TO BE BUILT BETWEEN CHURCH AND HOTEL.

Revere House and All Souls Church the Ones Most Interested—Justice Nash the Owner Who Intends to Put Up Structures.

There is something of a surprise in store for the residents on Park avenue, and not a particularly pleasant one either. There is a little strip of land on that thoroughfare, seventy-five feet long, running from the driveway of the Revere House to within six feet of the All Souls' church, and 11 feet deep at the latter end, gradually narrowing up to nothing at the other. Justice Vincent W. Nash has purchased this strip of land and declares his intention of building two little two-story stores on half the property and a bill board on the rest. The work of excavating for the foundations, he told a Press reporter yesterday afternoon, will be started at once.

That strip of ground has quite a history. It happened to be in that shape by the cutting through of Park avenue which did not run parallel with the dividing line between the two farms that were then located there. This strip belonged to the Spencer estate and was owned by the late Mrs. Spencer, of Park avenue. There was an old fence that separated it from the lawn on the side of the Revere House, then the Park House, and it was not a piece of architectual beauty in its way. That was about fifty years ago. The boarders at the Park House did not like its appearance and one evening held a meeting in one of the parlors. Something was decided and the fence disappeared during the night. Job Male purchased the property and, at his death, it went into the possession of John Delaney, of Third place, by will of the former.

The Revere House and the property adjoining belongs jointly to the VanDeventer and Stelle estates, the former owning three-fifths, and the latter two-fifths. They are represented by Augustus J. Bronson, of the borough, who is now in the law offices of Richard V. Lindabury, of Elizabeth. Some time ago Mr. Delaney offered to sell Mr. Bronson the property in question but at what the latter considered an exorbitant price. Mr. Bronson refused to buy it and a high board fence was erected on the property, which suddenly collapsed fifteen minutes after the carpenters left it. Some people said it was the wind that blew it down.

After a time Mr. Delaney offered the property to George B. DeRevere, the lessee of the Revere House, at a much more reasonable price, and the latter considered the matter. Last Saturday Mr. De Revere went to see the owner of the land only to learn that Mr. DeLaney had just sold it to Justice Nash. Mr. DeRevere went to see the latter, but was informed that the property would not be sold even for $20,000.

Justice Nash's plans, as already mentioned, are to build two stores at the larger end of the property, one 18 feet long and the other 20 feet long. They are to be one story frame structures with, of course, only one room, The remaining 37 feet will be devoted to a bill board, ten feet high.

Of course, there will be opposition. The residents of that vicinity will not allow the proposed stores and billboard to be erected without a fight. The stores, which will be close to the side walk, will run to within six feet of the All Souls church, effectually cutting off their view and from them is likely to come lots of opposition. What steps will be taken to prevent, if possible, the carrying out of Justice Nash's plans remains to be seen.

STOLE A RIDE, AND FELL

PETER OLSON JOLTED FROM OFF THE TOP OF A BOX CAR.

The Train Was Passing the North Avenue Station When the Accident Occurred—His Money Gave Out at Bound Brook.

Peter Olson, formerly known in this city, nearly lost his life last evening about 11.30. He had come from Jenkinstown, Pa., to Bound Brook, on a passenger train, and his money having run out, he attempted to steal a ride from the latter place to New York on a freight train. When near Plainfield a sudden jar of the train caused him to lose his balance and he fell off of the top of the car while the train was moving at a rapid rate of speed. Patrolman Totten happened to be near the North Avenue station where the accident occurred, and he ran to the assistance of the unfortunate man. It was soon learned that Olson was suffering from serious injuries. The ambulance was called and Olson was taken to the hospital where he is now under treatment.

His condition is not considered serious, though the extent of his injuries cannot yet be ascertained.

OF THE VIRGIN MOTHER.

A MADDONA SERVICE HELD IN THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

The Interior of the Church Room Appropriately Decorated for the Occasion.—An Interesting Programme Rendered.

The announcement of a "Madonna and Child Service," to be held in the Congregational church last evening, seemed to promise something novel and interesting, and in spite of the wintry evening the lecture room was well filled. The room itself presented a charming appearance. The wall which the audience faced was covered with hangings of soft olive, against which were hung a number of the celebrated pictures of the Virgin Mother and Holy Child. Another large picture was placed on a prettily draped easel, and others were on small tables, and standing on the piano. The Madonnas of Raphael Murillo predominated. A fine copy of the exquisite Sistine Madonna hung directly over the chair in which sat Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich, as leader of the meeting. At his left a handsome banquet lamp shed a homelike glow over the room.

Mr. Goodrich read some prophecies from the Old Testament, concerning the nativity, and Mrs. Goodrich followed, with the magnificat, Mary's song before the birth of Christ. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Mr. Fitch, after which the leader read a short account of the town of Bethlehem. A Christmas poem, Longfellow's "Three Kings," was prettily read by Miss Amy Emmons, after which a quartette, composed of Miss M. G. Morse, Miss Beatrice Miner, Willard M. Miner and R. K. Miner, sang W. E. MacClymont's carol, "Bethlehem's Morning Star." Three other readings were given: Lucy Larcom's "Woman's Christmas," by Mrs. W. B. Wadsworth, and poems of Susan Coolidge and Phœbe Cary, on Christmas, by Miss Katherine Dwight and Miss Elfleda A. Whiting. Bright Christmas hymns were scattered through the service, the singing being led by Mr. Bristol, while Mrs. M. E. Dwight acted as pianist.

Tried to Save Money.

A young man, who gave his name as Antonio Broughton, was arrested at the North Avenue station last evening by Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Totten for stealing a ride on the midnight train. He was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza this morning and fined $2, which he paid. He said that he was trying to save money, but declared that hereafter he would pay his fare. He was a waiter and out of a position.

In the Presidential guessing contest, held by the Grand Union Tea Company of West Front street, the prizes have been awarded. The contest was to guess the total of McKinley's popular vote which is now announced to be 7,109,480. The first prize was won by Charles E. Wood, of North Branch, who guessed 7,108,948. The second prize went to Miss Julia Philpott, of 457 West Front street, whose guess was 7,101,203.

Slape against the Plainfield Street Railway Company, and C. E. Brown & Co., against Thorn, are returnable Dec. 30th.

THIS TALE IS OF A COAT

THE GARMENT, WITH VALUABLE PAPERS, MISSING THIS MORNING.

Nicholas Terhune Left the Coat in a Room in His House Last Night—This Morning Gone Where No One Can Conjecture.

"The man with the iron mask" was not it with the mystery that surrounds the home of Nicholas Terhune, 36 Sandford avenue, and Mr. Terhune is greatly puzzled to know how to account for it.

Sometime during the night a valuable coat containing some exceedingly important papers, and a pair of cuffs, disapeared from a room on the first floor. Mr. Terhune left the coat and cuffs there on retiring, and when he came down stairs this morning they were gone. A long and persistent search did not disclose their identity, and Mr. Terhune is inclined to think that the articles took feet and walked away.

Not another thing was disturbed in the house, and there was not the slightest thing to indicate that anyone had been in the house, except that the articles above mentioned are missing.

When Mr. Terhune returns this evening from New York he will continue the search.

WHITE CHRISTMAS SURE

GOOD SLEIGHING AND BRACING WEATHER NOW PREDOMINATE.

A Wind From the North Piled Up a Few Small Drifts East Night—Straw Rides in Order Among Young People.

Everybody was surprised at the thought of a "White Christmas" and the mercury was so starled that it fell lower than it has been before this season last evening. Yesterday's storm did not end until late in the evening, the snow ceased for a time, but it kept up at intervals until nearly 10 o'clock last night when the clouds broke away and the moon came out in all its glory. A wind from the north sprang up in the afternoon and increased in force as night came on. Where the snow had not been packed, it was drifted about as in the other storm and many sidewalks that had been cleaned off were covered with a layer of the white snow, blown there from the surrounding yards.

The sleighing was delightful, but the night was bitterly cold and warm wraps were needed. There were many sleighs out and a few parties trying to keep warm in a box-sleigh. Shawls were in demand and everyone had to snuggle together to keep out the cold north wind that whistled around the ears of the sleigh-riders.

One party started from the home of Miss Eleanor T. VanDeventer, on Myrtle avenue, and went to Cranford and return. The party consisted of the Misses Florence Serrell, Katherine Nevius, Grace E. Overton, Eleanor T. VanDeventer, Lucie Palmer Davis, and Margaret Swain, and George Proctor Smith, Henry Baldwin Drake, George Augustus Horne, Walter B. Rittenhouse, Carroll L Runyon, and Alvah Davis. The chaperones were Miss Elsie Horne and Miss Madeline Day. After the ride the party returned to Miss VanDeventer's home where refreshments were served.

At 6:30 o'clock this morning on Park avenue, the thermometer registered five degrees above zero. Half an hour later, the mercury had risen one degree. This is the coldest weather of the season.

Didn't Like the Rooms.

Mrs. Laura Kurzhauls and her attorney, Paul Oliver, of Westfield, went yesterday to take possession of the rooms that the Chancellor directed be set apart for her use pending the sui of her husband for divorse. Acting under the advice of her counsel, she refused to accept the rooms offered by Mr. Kurzhals, and gave notice that the matter of alimony would again be urged before the court.

Tip from St. Nick.

"I wonder," said Santy, quite cheerless and numb, "why so many fires are out when I come." Then, seeing the stockings, he added: "I s'pose it's cause at this season they turn on the hose." At last on his journey he visited where the coals were all glowing and warmth filled the air. "Aha!" he exclaimed, "by this showing I know, this man buys his fuel from Stevens & Co.

Fire Horses Changed Around.

The new team of horses on trial at fire headquarters were given a set of sharp shoes this morning. The "Frank" horse has been assigned to No. 2 hose wagon, and the "Phil" horse has been transferred to Alert Hose house. Just what disposition will be made of the latter horse has not as yet been decided upon.

YULETIDE AT ST. MARY'S

THE PAROCHIAL SCHOOL PUPILS PARTICIPATE IN SPECIAL EXERCISES.

The Programme Made up of Musical and Literary Efforts in Which the Participants Acquited Themselves Creditable.

St. Mary's Parochial School Hall was filled with a large and delighted audience yesterday afternoon when the annual Christmas celebration was held. It was undoubtedly the be t entertainment ever given and the whole affair was a great success. The programme opened with a song by the school, entitled "O Holy Night," which was given with precision and excellence. This was followed with a recitation, "The Orphan's Christmas," by Miss Elma Barrie, and she was given loud applause. A vocal solo, "Please Mr. Santa Claus Don't Forget Me," by Thomas Mack, won hearty commendation.

The next number was a doll drill given by twenty-five girls. The drill throughout was excellent and every movement was made with grace and skill. "Christmas Chimes" was heartily sung by the school.

The recitation, "Christmas Night at the Quarters," was given by Miss Josephine Murphy, and she was accorded great applause.

One of the best numbers was a vocal solo and character sketch "I'd Like to be Like Grandma," by Miss Catharine Harding. The young woman took he part in an exceptionally clever manner and her singing was a marked feature.

"A Frolic with the Brownies in the Snow" was the next number, and it was the best one on the programme. The spirit and enthusiasm with which the young folks entered into this part was a pleasure to all. The dancing and various movements were very pretty and outbursts of applause were frequently heard.

The finale furnished an exceedingly pretty scene, as the boys and girls were snowballing each other with balls of cotton, while thousands of bits of paper were flying through the air to represent snow.

This was followed by the annoucement that Thomas Schaefer would entertain those present with selections on his phonograph. The various selections given were very fine, and the able manner in which Mr. Schaefer handled his machine, won for him much praise. Father Smyth was down on the programme for an address, but he omitted it and only made a few congratulatory remarks.

The programme closed with the singing of "Adeste Fidelis," by the school.

Too much cannot be said in praise of Mrs. Bartlett, who has worked earnestly and faithfully in drilling the scholars. Her work certainly reflected great credit for every scholar from the smallest to the largest, went through each movement without a break. Particular mention should also be given Sister Mary Esther and the other Sisters who have with untiring zeal worked for the best results.

Those who took the leading part in the frolic with the brownies were Miss Annie Daly, Miss Josephine Murphy, Miss Katherine Roach, Miss Lizzie Day and Miss Fannie Reed.

During the afternoon Miss Helen Sumbatoff, pianiste, rendered "Barcarole," by Mills, and a selection from Rubinstein.

Father Smyth, of Cranford, was noticed as a guest at the celebration.

AT THE IRVING SCHOOL.

A Santa Claus Cantata Presented by the Scholars.

Yesterday afternoon, at the Irving public school, the scholars gave a Christmas cantata which was very appropriate in closing the school for the holidays. The cantata was prettily arranged by the principal, Miss Petrie. The part of Santa Claus was well taken by Edward Granatt, while the queen of the fairies was impersonated by Stella Anderson.

There were brownies, and fairies, all prettily gowned and the effect was beautiful.

Margaret Philips took the part of "Baby May" and she rendered a pleasing solo.

The Boys Brigade of the school, in military dress, gave a most satisfactory drill, which was loudly applauded. During the cantata, Chas. Lewis, teacher of music in the schools, sang one of his best solos, in his usual acceptable manner, and a vocal duet was also rendered by Miss Fillmer and Miss Watson. The entire event was received with hearty applause and to Miss Petrie is due the credit for the able way in which it was given.

There was an exceedingly large attendance of friends and parents who were thoroughly pleased with the entertainment.

A WRECK-FATED SWITCH

THIRD ONE OCCURRED THIS MORNING AND SIX CARS DERAILED.

One Train Ran Into Another That Was Crossing the Track on Which the Former Was Running—No One Hurt in Collision.

The third freight wreck on the switch from the third to the first track, just east of the Watchung avenue bridge, occurred this morning at five o'clock when an east-bound fast freight on the main track crashed into the side of another east-bound freight train which was crossing from the third, or freight, track to the first, or main, track.

It was bitter cold and the crews of the three fast freight trains on their way from Mauch Chunk to Jersey City had to keep moving to avoid freezing. They were in a hurry, for the next day was Christmas and another train must be taken back to Mauch Chunk before they might go home to their families and spend Christmas. The train drawn by engine 413, with Engineer Charles Keck and Conductor William Seidel, was on the main track. The other two trains, one drawn by engine 406 and manned by Engineer Louis LaBarre and Conductor Will Arndt, and the other with engine 340 attached, were on the third track.

To make time, if possible, Conductor Seidel decided to go on the main track, not knowing that there was another train on that track and not far behind. It was then about five o'clock and still dark so that the train on the main track did not see the other one switching over on to the main track until they reached the North avenue station. The engineer whistled down brakes but it was to late to stop the train before it struck the other one. Conductor Seidel was in the cab at the time and he and Engineer Keck waited until the collison was sure and then both jumped. The train was not going very fast or else the damage would have been much more than it was. As it was five freight cars and an oil car were derailed, while the front and side of engine 413 was bent and broken. The cab was partially wrecked while the steam chest and cyelinder were somewhat damaged but not enough to injure them for use. The derailed cars were thrown from the track from ten to twenty feet but none were upset. They were slightly damaged, the sides of several being broken in places and the door of one torn off. Part of the contents of one car, which was loaded with barrels of oat meal, was scattered over the ground in the vicinity of the wreck. All the cars were loaded.

The wrecking train at Elizabethport was telegraphed for and arrived here soon after seven o'clock. The gang of men on board went to work at once and by 9:30 o'clock everything was cleared away.

The first and third tracks, which are the east bound passenger and freight tracks, were blocked by the wreck and the passenger traffic was somewhat delayed in consequence. As the 7:58 train had to take the west bound passenger track, track 2, the cars were not left in front of the station as usual but were brought down with the rest. That train was several minutes late as were all the regular trains until the tracks were cleared.

A PRESENT FOR MR. LEAL.

Christmas Gifts For All the Instructors in Leal's School.

Prof. John Leal's school closed for the Christmas holidays yesterday and special exercises were held in the morning. There were orations by A. I. Martine, Jr., Henry Leal and Carroll Knox. Remarks were made appropriate to the day by Profs. Leal, Smith and Heiss. Then a committee of three from the school, consisting of Messrs. Bull, White and Miller, presented gifts to all the teachers from the boys of the school. The present to Mr. Leal was the Standard Dictionary and the other gifts were all very handsome. Even Janitor Johnson was not forgotten and came in for his share of the Christmas.

The Junior department held special exercises also. They consisted of recitations by Wickam Corwin, Richard Lovell, Joseph Sherman, Harold Brown and Percy Brown. The programme ended with a tableau entitled "The Courtship of Miles Standish." Hugh G. Baldwin took the part of "Priscilla" and Story Rowland of "John Alden."

Fire Near Oak Tree.

The residence of Mr. Lane, near Oak Tree, caught fire Tuesday night, but was extinguished by Mr. Lane and his hired man before the flames got under full headway. The cause of the fire is unknown, but it is supposed that a match was dropped when the family retired to bed. It was discovered by the smoke which awakened the hired man.

BIG STRIKE AVERTED

Boston Street Car Employes Postpone Action for One Week.

DECISION REACHED AT LAST MOMENT

Orders Were Sent Out for Cessation of Work at Midnight Last Night, But It Was Finally Agreed To Hear from the Company's Directors.

Boston, Dec. 24.—At the last moment the strike of motormen and other employes of the West End railroad, which the men's union had ordered to begin at midnight last night, has been averted, temporarily at least. A committee of the railroad employes met a committee of the West End directors, including President Little, and for four or five hours discussed the situation in all its aspects. President Little stated to the delegation that the sole power to ratify such an agreement as had been submitted to the company was invested in the executive committee of the board of directors; that a majority of said committee is not now in the state, nor has there been a majority in the state since this matter came up. Consequently the signing of the agreement at this time was an utter impossibility. He asked for a week's time in which to obtain an expression of the executive committee's opinion. The union officials were apparently convinced of the truth of President Little's statements, and after some discussion they consented, shortly before midnight, to hold the strike order in abeyance for one week, pending a decisive answer to their demands from the executive committee from the West End directors.

EX-QUEEN LILIUOKALANI.

The Deposed Ruler Due in Washington This Evening.

New Orleans, Dec. 24.—Ex-Queen Liliuokalani passed through here yesterday on the Sunset limited from San Francisco on her way to Washington. She was accompanied by her agent, Joe Melchute, Mrs. Graham, her personal companion, and a maid and two children of Mrs. Graham. The ex-queen traveled as an ordinary passenger and did not occupy a special car. She vigorously repudiated the interview which a reporter professed to have had with her at Houston, Tex. She said: "It is all a mistake. I was never spoken with at Houston. Can you wonder at my diffidence in meeting newspaper men when they insist on putting words into my mouth I never utter. I am sure you will appreciate my position. I am nothing but a deposed queen. I cannot talk about my country or its future for fear that what I might say will be distorted. I have lived since the revolution in absolute retirement and have taken little heed of public matters. What my future movements may be is something that I cannot now declare for I do not know. I am in the hands of my friends. I am going to Boston to meet the relatives of my late husband and do not know whether I shall go to Europe or not. Everything depends upon what my friends decide." The deposed ruler is due in Washington this evening.

Herrmann's Lost Fortune.

New York, Dec. 24.—The fact that Prof. Herrmann, who was known to have often earned $100,000 a year, died insolvent, has caused astonishment among persons who did not know the magician. Herrmann is believed to have earned over $600,000 in the past twelve years. By means of wildly extravagant living, unfortunate theatrical ventures and love for stock dabbling, he not only exhausted this sum, but left a horde of debts.

Fatal Crossing Accident.

Trenton, Dec. 24.—Mrs. Henry Bond and Miss Tyrrell, sisters, living at Woodburne, Pa., were driving across the Reading railroad tracks near their home yesterday when their carriage was struck by an express train and Miss Tyrrell was instantly killed. Mrs. Bond was brought to St. Francis hospital in this city fatally injured. Miss Tyrrell was 18 years of age.

Death of George A. Butler.

MANY MILES ON FOOT

Two Women Accomplish a Plucky Feat of Endurance.

TRAMPED FROM OCEAN TO OCEAN

Mrs. Estby and Daughter Arrive in New York City and Win a $10,000 Wager. Many Hardships Were Endured During the Long Journey.

New York, Dec. 24.—A pedestrian trip from the Pacific to the Atlantic is a big task for men, but when women perform it, it becomes remarkable. A mother and daughter, Mrs. H. Estby and Miss Clara Estby, have just finished such a journey and apparently none the worse for it. They started on May 5 from Spokane, Wash., and reached this city yesterday afternoon. This walk was the result of a wager of $10,000, it is said, that Mrs. Estby and her daughter could not complete the journey with only $5 a piece upon starting and earning their living on the way. Seven months was the limit agreed upon in which the travelers could finish the journey and win the wager. In case of sickness thet ime so lost was to be subtracted. When the money gave out they did housework and sold pictures of themselves. Not until they journeyed 1,000 miles did they meet with rough experiences. Tramps annoyed them and Mrs. Estby had to shoot one in the leg to make him stop following and threatening them. A highwayman tried to rob them while they were in Colorado. The tourists called on Mrs. William Jennings Bryan at Lincoln, Neb., "General" Coxey, at Massillon, O.; Mr. and Mrs. William McKinley at Canton, O., and Gov. Hastings at Harrisburg, Pa. Their largest day's walk was forty miles. On the first day they walked twenty-eight. Sometimes they had to sleep outdoors without shelter. The women wore bicycle skirts. Mrs. Estby used eleven pair of shoes, while the daughter wore out a dozen pair. Mrs. Estby, who is 38 years of age, intends to write a book of her experiences. Her daughter is 19 years of age. Near Philipsburg, N. J., they were misdirected and walked fifty miles out of their way. But for this they would have escaped the snow storm and reached here on Monday. After a short rest they will return home by rail.

RACE WAR AT MAYFIELD.

Only One Man Killed and First Reports Greatly Exaggerated.

Louisville, Dec. 24.—The alleged race war at Mayfield has been greatly exaggerated. There has been no trouble since the killing of Will Suett, colored, yesterday. Suett was only 18 years old. No further outbreak is apprehended, as the better class of people have determined to suppress violence. A mass meeting was held at the court house and resolutions were adopted denouncing the lynching of George Finley and Jim Stone, the killing of Will Suett and the burning of property. At 9 o'clock this morning the town was quiet with a few guards patrolling the streets and not a negro in sight. Only about fifty men came here from neighboring towns and these have returned home.

Olive Sternaman Extradition Case.

Utica, N. Y., Dec. 24.—Judge Coxe has handed down his decision in the Sternaman extradition case. Proceedings were taken under writ of habeas corpus to review the action of Commissioner Fairchild of Buffalo in holding Olive A. Sternaman for extradition to Canada on the charge of poisoning her husband. It is alleged the murder was committed to secure $1,900 insurance. Judge Coxe holds that the officer authorized to conduct the proceedings placed before the commissioner facts sufficient to warrant action on his part.

Reception to Bishop Walker.

Buffalo, Dec. 24.—Bishop William David Walker, the recently elected Protestant Episcopal bishop for the Buffalo diocese, who was enthroned in his official position in St. Paul's cathedral yesterday with appropriate ceremonies, was tendered a formal reception last night at his residence. There were hundreds of congratulatory telegrams received.

Buffalo, Dec. 24.—Edwin J. Smith, the Bank of Commerce embezzling book keeper, was not arraigned in police court yesterday, his relatives having agreed with the bank receivers that a settlement of the shortage should be deferred until this afternoon. If this settlement is made and bonds are given to cover any additional stealings discovered, Smith may not be protecuted.

SHE WAS GOING OUT.

So the Hotel Clerk Told Her Escort and Then She Fainted.

The young lady who was going to the theater was all ready for the carriage. She had enameled her face and grilled her front hair. She had donned her big hat and was slowly drawing on her long gloves, when the bright young man who stands at the desk and yells "Front!" chanced to pass through the hotel hallway and saw the young lady in all her finery.

"Ah! going out for the evening?" he asked, in an intellectual manner. No one would have suspected she was going out, of course.

"Yes, I'm going to a box party," she said, sweetly.

The minutes dragged by heavily and she watched the clock. Eight o'clock came and brought no young man; 8:15 had no signs of an escort, and she began to fidget. She clasped and unclasped her hands nervously, and finally she flounced down to the desk and faced the young man with the intellectual brow.

"Has anyone called for me?" she asked.

"Why, yes," said the young man, brightly. "A gentleman was here with a carriage about half an hour ago and I told him you were going out for the evening. You know you told me—"

But a wild shriek interrupted him and a fair young girl fell prone upon the tessellated floor. Far away in a dark hallway a young man in evening dress slept heavily in a drunken stupor. And the brow of the hotel clerk bulged and bulged.—Chicago Chronicle.

Economy in a New Town.

"This hay fever is a peculiar complaint," said the stout man next to the window as he looked around at his companions on the car seat. "For half a dozen years or more my wife has had a regular dose of it the last week in August. The only help for her has been a hurried journey up to Mackinaw, or somewhere in the Michigan woods. But this year she seems to have skipped it. I don't know why it is, but I scent a faint theory. For the last six weeks I have been talking hard times to her. In fact, it's been my one sweet song. I've croaked so constantly that she couldn't help but become impressed with the serious phase of the thing. Well, a day or two ago I said to her in a half joking way:

"'Isn't the hay fever a little overdue or sidetracked, or something?'

"'My dear,' she solemnly answered, 'after all you've said to me about economy for the past month or so I really didn't feel that I could afford to have it.'

"And, by George, she hasn't even sneezed a sneeze." — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Confidence Game.

Irascible Passenger (to sleeping car porter, six a. m.)—Cleaning my shoes, are you, you black rascal? Now, what are you going to hold me up for that job?

Porter (laughing)—O, anything you like, boss, so's yo's suited.

(Mollified, satisfied porters have been slandered)—"Ah! That's it, then? Here's a dollar for you, my good fellow."

And the porter afterwards explained to his brother confidence man that one must be a most acute judge of human nature to work the traveling public to a profit.—Buffalo Times.

Delicate Dress Goods.
Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

"COLOR BLIND, MORALLY."

Charges Brought Against a Trustee Whose Removal Is Sought.

Buffalo, Dec. 24.—Attorneys Day and Romer have filed with Surrogate Marcus a petition asking for the removal of Jewett M. Richmond as testamentary trustee of the estate of the late Moses M. Richmond. The application for the removal is made by Mrs. Loraine Richmond, widow of the late Moses M. Richmond. The startling part of the petition is the conclusion, as follows: "Your petitioner upon information and belief charges that Jewett M. Richmond, testamentary trusteee, is very wealthy, his riches reaching into the millions and monopolizing most of his time in looking after it and increasing it, giving him little if any time to look after 'trust estates;' that as he grows older his health fails him more and more and he is fast becoming color blind, morally, so as not to be able to distinguish readily between right and wrong, as your petitioner has had the opportunity to judge from various shady transactions." Surrogate Marcus granted an order compelling Jewett M. Richmond to show cause why he should not be removed from the trust and a competent and disinterested person or trust company appointed as trustee in his place.

GOV. BLACK'S INAUGURATION.

Programme of Ceremonies Arranged by Secretary of State Palmer.

Albany, Dec. 24.—The following is the official programme issued by Secretary of State Palmer for the inauguration of Gov. Black on Jan. 1: The military escort will be under the command of Lieut.-Col. Fitch The Tenth battalion and signal corps will receive the governor and staff at the New York Central depot and, with the battalion from Troy arriving at the same time, escort him to the capitol, where he will meet the retiring governor and staff at the executive chamber. Inaugural ceremonies will occur in the assembly chamber, the secretary of state presiding. There will be music, followed by prayer and an address by the retiring executive. Then the constitutional oath will be administered, the new governor will deliver his inaugural address and the governor's staff sworn in. A public reception will be held in the assembly chamber, and later Gov. and Mrs. Black will hold another public reception at the executive mansion.

EARL RUSSELL'S LOSS.

The Fire Which Destroyed His Property of Undoubted Incendiary Origin.

London, Dec. 24.—The fire which yesterday entirely destroyed the residence of Earl Russell at Maidenhead, on the Thames, was undoubtedly of incendiary origin, as Earl Russell has recently received several menacing letters, some of them threatening him with personal injury and others threatening the burning of his property. There is no doubt in the minds of the police and a majority of the public that the fire is one of the results of the action for criminal libel brought by Earl Russell against his mother-in-law, Lady Scott, and others, which is now under adjournment. Efforts will be made to discover the firebugs, who are believed by some to have been in the pay of Lady Scott.

DINGLEY ON THE TARIFF.

No Material Difference of Opinion in the Ways and Means Committee.

Washington, Dec. 24.—The attention of Chairman Dingly of the ways and means committee having been called to a dispatch from Washington stating that "the eastern members of that committee, led by Chairman Dingley, are not disposed to look with favor upon reciprocity" in framing the new tariff, he said: "There is not the slightest foundation for this statement, so far as I know and believe. While the matter has been only slightly discussed, yet I have not observed any material difference of opinion. On the contrary, all the republican members of the committee are in favor of going as far as the McKinley tariff did on this subject, and further, if practicable."

Ex-Consul Waller's Ambition.

Washington, Dec. 24.—John L. Waller of Kansas, who as ex-consul of the United States at Tamatave, Madagascar, and subsequently an inmate of a French prison, becoming a subject of international notoriety some months ago, is a candidate for appointment as recorder of deeds of the District of Columbia, an office which for some years past has been filled by a colored man.

Miss Frances Willard Very Ill.

Castile, N. Y., Dec. 24.—Miss Frances Willard, president of the World's and National Women's Christian Temperance unions, who suffered a relapse at the sanitarium here yesterday, while in no immediate danger of death, is nevertheless very ill, and her physician has canceled all her engagements. She will be compelled to remain here several months.

Gored by a Steer.

Chicago, Dec. 24.—Nelson Morris, the millionaire packer, and J. C. Bohart, who were gored by a steer while passing through a cattle pen here yesterday, are resting easily this morning. Mr. Morris' injuries consist of a few slight bruises and a general shaking up, while Mr. Bohart had his shoulder dislocated.

DIPLOMATS ANXIOUS

Recognition of Central American Republic Disturbs Them.

CLEVELAND'S SIGNIFICANT ADDRESS

Taken as Another Instance of Our Determination To Be the Arbiter of Affairs in the Western Hemisphere. European Cabinets Informed.

Washington, Dec. 24.—There is much talk in diplomatic circles to-day over the significant language used by President Cleveland in recognizing the new Greater Republic of Central America by receiving J. D. Rodriquez, the duly accredited representative from that state. Some of the European diplomats appear to be somewhat anxious and disturbed at what they consider to be another instance of the determination of the United States to become in fact, as well as in name, the arbiter of affairs in the western hemisphere. There is no doubt that by this time many of the cabinets of Europe are officially informed of the gist of the president's reply to Mr. Rodriquez's speech. The cordial manner in which the new minister was received by the president is also significantly commented upon. The reception occurred in the east room of the executive mansion. Mr. Rodriquez, who was accompanied by the secretary of the legation, Luis F. Corea, and his attache, J. D. Rodriquez, jr., all three in evening dress, was presented to the president by Secretary Olney. After presenting his credentials and making the customary speech, Mr. Rodriquez was addressed as follows by President Cleveland:

The President's Reply.

"Mr. Minister—I take pleasure in recognizing, in the name of the United States of America, the Greater Republic of Central America, constituted pursuant to stipulations of the treaty of Amapala of June 20, 1895, between the republics of Honduras, Nicaragua and Salvador and in entering into diplomatic relations therewith. Such recognition is given and such relations entered upon in the distinct understanding that the responsibility of each of these republics to the United States of America remains wholly unaffected. I discern in the articles of association from which the diet derives its powers a step towards a closer union of Central American states in the interest of their common defense and general welfare, and I welcome it as the precursor of other steps to be taken in the same direction and which it is hoped may eventually result in the consolidation of all the states of Central America as one nation for all the purposes of their foreign relations and intercourse. To you individually I extend a cordial greeting, both personal and official, and I trust that your renewed residence at the capital of this country, where you formerly held an important representative mission, will be as agreeable in its personal relations, as I believe it will be useful and profitable for the countries you represent, between each of which and the United States has always existed, and it is hoped will always exist, the closest ties of friendship." The president's expressed hope that the new republic would soon include Costa Rica and Guatemala, the two richest and most progressive of the Isthmian countries, is expected to have considerable weight in expediting their adherence to the new arrangement. The governments of both these countries are favorably disposed towards the union, but are prevented by their constitutions from joining it without the full approval of their legislatures, which will probably be secured in a few months.

Pleaded Guilty to Embezzlement.

Boston, Dec. 24.—Allison Z. Mason, who was president of the Globe Investment company, a defunct concern, pleaded guilty in the superior court yesterday to two counts of a long indictment charging him with embezzlement. The court will be given the history of the defendants part in the affairs of the company by the prosecuting attorney at a later day, when sentence will be asked. Mason is out on $15,000 bail.

Both Duellists Injured.

Stuttgart, Dec. 24.—A duel, resulting in the serious wounding of both combatants, was fought yesterday near this city, between Baron Wagenheim, ex-secretary of the German legation at Copenhagen, and count Uxtull Gyllenband. The wounds of both combatants were so severe as to render necessary their removal to a hospital.

Praise Cleveland and Olney.

Havana, Dec. 24.—The Havana newspapers publish articles expressing approval of the attitude upon the Cuban question taken by President Cleveland and Secretary of State Olney, both of whom are highly praised for their firm stand in the face of the action of the foreign relations committee of the senate.

Bark Abandoned at Sea.

Philadelphia, Dec. 24.—The bark G. De Zaldo, Captain McColl, from Pascagoula for New York, was abandoned on December 16 in latitude 35.58 N., longitude 74.60 W. The crew were rescued by the British bark Carpasian, which arrived at the Delaware breakwater last evening from the Barbadoes.

Sale of a Railroad Ordered.

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 24.—Judge Fouke, in the Sangamon circuit court, has entered an order calling for the sale of the St. Louis, Chicago & St. Paul railroad, commonly known as the "Buff line," at some time to be named by the master in January, 1897.

ABOUT SEWAGE BEDS.

The following from the Evening Post concerning sewage beds at Worcester, which were inspected by Plainfield citizens before the present system of disposal was adopted here, is interesting:

Worcester, Mass., whose expe-iments in the disposal of sewage have had frequent mention in the discussion of the subject of sewerage for inland cities, is to be compelled by a court decision to make some changes in its methods. As is known, much of the sewage of that city of 100,000 inhabitants is treated by the expensive process of chemical precipitation, the theory being that the fluids allowed to flow into the river after this process are innocuous. The overflow is into the Blackstone River, and residents along that stream assert that the river is still prejudicial to their health and comfort because of the sewage. A judicial inquiry discloses that the trouble is due partly to the nature of the treated sewage, which is turned back into the stream, and partly to the fact that some portion of the city sewage still flows into the river without being treated. The city is directed diligently to seek a remedy and to report three months hence what it has done. One important change contemplated is the separation of the surface drainage from the sewage, thus rendering easier the treatment of the latter. Waterbury and other inland cities of Connecticut, which are also facing the sewerage problem, are watching Worcester's efforts to solve it. The Waterbury idea of a State commission to consider the subject is taking shape in the draft of a bill for presentation to the Legislature next month.

PERFECT HOLIDAY WEATHER.

Christmas comes to us this year on the chrystalized particles of Jack Frost, the biting blast of Aeœlus and the immaculate robe of the Storm King—a typical season of winter weather. For years we have had flaunted in our faces the terrible malediction that "a green Christmas makes a fat grave yard," but this season of holidays we gaze out in the world and see the antethesis of this repelling sentiment, and all welcomes its presence.

SULTAN DOING BETTER.

The Sultan is mellowing in his attitude towards the Armenians. He has issued a decree granting amnesty to 2,000 Armenians who had been convicted of crimes against the government or against persons or property, or who were awaiting trial on such charges. He has commuted the death sentences passed on ninety Armenians to imprisonment in a fortress, and promises that the prisoners will be given their liberty if they behave for three months.

A NOTABLE OCCASION.

President elect McKinley has promised to come to New York for the dedication of the Grant monument on April 27th. He will make an address. Many representatives of foreign governments will come from Washington to witness the ceremonies. Li Hung Chang will see that the Flowery Kingdom is represented.

NO REASON IN THIS RHYME.

Because Platt rhymes with flat, there is no reason to suspect that the Hon. Thomas C., of New York, will be found knocked in the latter position by Choate's Senatorial boom.

The Daily Press will not be issued to-morrow.

THEATRICAL.

The management of Music Hall offers as its attraction for Christmas afternoon and evening Woolcott and Jackson's comedians in L. N. Woolcott's new farce-comedy, "A Yellow Kid," a theatrical history or version of the pictorial pranks of "Mickey Dugan," the famous "Yellow Kid" of the New York Sunday Journal. The production is given under direct authority from the New York Journal and the management promise a bright, clean and rollicking entertainment from beginning to end and with special scenery and everything necessary for an elaborate production. Seats may be reserved in advance for either the afternoon or evening performance.

"A Run on the Bank," the farcical make up, which serves to present Ward and Vokes as farce-comedy stars, is announced by Manager Willey, for Stillman Music Hall, Saturday evening, Dec. 26th. In the supporting company, which consists of thirty people, are found some of the very best specialists and musical farce artists before the public. Plainfield theatre-goers are assured of a laughing gem of the first-water, in a "Run on the Bank."

The way to cure catarrh is to purify the blood, and the surest, safest, best way to purify the blood is by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, the One True Blood Purifier.

Electric Bitters

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

Next Star Course Event.

The next entertainment of the Y. M. C. A. Star Course will be given New Year's night by S. M. Spedon, artist entertainer. The illustrated lecture which was to have been given Tuesday, Dec. 29th, by E. R. Ackerman, will be given Monday evening, March 29th.

The cake box is not to blame.

When your cake dries up quickly, look to your baking powder.

Bread and cake made with Cleveland's baking powder keep their natural freshness and flavor.

PASSING COMMENT.

Rev. Mr. Fletcher, pastor of the Baptist Church at New Market, says he enjoys a good cigar and is perhaps the only minister hereabouts who smokes. "But," said he, yesterday, "My friend, Rev. Mr. Martine, had a big smoke on Saturday," meaning the fire in the Presbyterian church.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad has received a novel wreck-car. The machine is a hoisting-crane operated by a steam engine. Both are built on an iron framed car of about twenty feet in length. The car is prevented from tipping when in use by iron beams that spread out on each side.

* * * *

The influx of visitors from the country and surrounding towns has been unusually large for the past day or two. This is accounted for from the fact that many of the merchants have their show windows most artistically arranged in holiday attire, and besides, their prices rival the big stores in New York.

* * * *

There was a lot of disappointed commuters at the depot this morning, on account of the wreck. One man said he had expected to take 7 o'clock train for New York and reach the Grand Central depot in time to take a through train for the West. He had Pullman car tickets, and was very anxious to reach the city in time.

* * * *

The oldest plaintiff who probably ever figured in litigation in this State is Mrs Christiana French, of Moorestown. She is 102 years and one month old, and as bright as a sunbeam. Mrs. French has some means and upon the interest she is enabled to live comfortably on. In April, 1882, she loaned $200 upon a promissory note made by Joseph Benable and Lewis Fowler, and upon which she was to receive annually the legal interest of six per cent. The makers of the note paid $12 regularly each for ten years, renewing the note each year, but have failed to pay the interest since.

* * * *

While we read constantly at this time of the year of shoplifting in the big department stores in New York, it is seldom that our attention is brought to such acts in Plainfield stores. But this does not gainsay the fact that local merchants are not equal sufferers in the kleptomaniac proclivities of some people. As a matter of fact, the local merchants find that their losses from theft amounts to a considerable sum during the holiday season, when it is utterly impossible for the clerks to keep an eye on the innumerable articles which are displayed and permitted to be handled by prospective purchasers.

George Taggart, who formerly resided in this city, where his cleverness in prose and poem of a humorous touch was developed and early recognized, is now a frequent contributor to the humorous pages of New York's gayest journals. Mr. Taggart is a member of the staff of the Dramatic Mirror, the leading publication of its kind in the world, and his column of pithy observations on the frivolities and mannerisms of theatrical people over the non de plume of "The Call Boy," is one of the distinguishing and entertaining features of the paper.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN AND NEW MARKET.

Oscar Runyon enjoyed a pleasant sleighride to Somerville yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. William Coriell, of New Market, is seriously ill at her home, with pneumonia.

Miss Anne D. Lloyd, teacher in the Whittier School, left for her home at Bryn Mawr, Pa., yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Warden were in New York, yesterday, buying Christmas presents for their two little ones.

The public schools here closed yesterday, with appropriate exercises. They will not re-open until January 4.

Principal A. J. Whitney, of the public schools, and his family left yesterday to spend the holidays at Newton, Mass.

Theodore S. Todd, son of Rev. and Mrs. Dr. Todd, is at home from Brooklyn spending the holidays with his parents.

James Y. Wilson left town yesterday for a two weeks' visit with his daughter, Mrs. C. R. Clawson, at Salem, West Virginia.

Fred Nelson and John Creamer were on the road with their fast steppers, yesterday afternoon, and they took the "dust" from none.

Miss C. Davis, teacher of drawing and singing in the public schools, will spend her holiday vacation at her home on Long Island.

Walter Runyon has purchased a handsome new cutter and every pleasant day while the snow lasts he can be seen on the streets with it.

Miss C. Williams, an instructress in the Whittaker School, left today to spend her holiday vacation with her parents at Middlesex, N. Y.

The Christmas exercises in the Presbyterian church will take place on Thursday evening, and in the M. E. church on the following night.

The morning trains from Dunellen in charge of Conductors Dodwell and Rarick will not be run Christmas Day, owing to its being a legal holiday.

Herbet Watson, Adam Dealaman's chief clerk, is reported as slowly improving from his recent indisposition and he may be able to resume his duties the first of next week.

Lawyer Harry B. Cook, of New Brunswick, who lost a $1,000 library by the fire in the Masonic building there Sunday night, was in town yesterday attending to some legal matters.

Members of the Dunellen Checker Club were in Mr. Coles' office until eleven o'clock, Tuesday night and when they left everything was carefully locked up. They met again for friendly games on Friday evening.

This is the night set for ths regular meeting of the Dunellen Building and Loan Association, but on account of its being Christmas Eve, the meeting has been adjourned to Saturday night, when it will take place in Alvah Gray's office.

Fireman John E. Logan, of Engine No. 145, leaving here at 8.25 a. m., was taken suddenly ill, yesterday, and Fireman William A. Dunham was substituted in his place. Wilbur Miller, of Fanwood, took Dunham's charge as fireman on drill engine No. 75.

The trials of G. Lebold of Piscataway and Harry E. Creamer, of Plainfield, in actions in tort, set down for a hearing in Justice Huff's court, yesterday, were both adjourned over for a week, the Justice being unable to attend to them at the time first announced.

Funeral services over the remains of the late Thomas L. Thomas, whose death was recorded in the Press, took place from the house this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. members of the borough clergy, fire department officials and others being in attendance. The remains will be taken o Greenwood for interment Friday morning.

The choir of St. John's R C. church has been busy for a day or two decorating the altar, preparatory for the Christmas Day observances. In the morning at eight o'clock there will be celebrated a High Mass by Rev. V. D. Bogard, of Somerville. In the afternoon at three a Christmas tree will be lighted and shown of its gifts for the children, followed by a general distribution of candy and refreshments for all.

After the Press had exclusively told of the safe robbery in W. H. Coles' office, yesterday, some 200 or more persons came and went at intervals, all anxious to see the work which had been accomplished by the robbers. It seems to be the universal belief that the robbers are part of a gang who have been operating between Somerville and Elizabeth within the past few weeks, and perhaps they are the same ones who blowed open John R. Marsh's safe at Scotch Plains some two weeks ago.

Chief Warden thinks he has a small clue to work upon which may eventually run down the Cole's safe robbers. The night of the robbery, while it was snowing hard, three well dressed, but suspicious looking individuals came into town from the direction of New Market, and they went into the round house to thaw out. After warming themselves thoroughly they left. The same afternoon some well-dressed young man went into Mr. Cole's office and asked if he needed any soap. Mr. Cole thought nothing of the occurrence at the time, but is reasonable to suppose that the fellow simply went there to "size up" the place and the surroundings.

SCOTCH PLAINS

The skating continues fair on the ponds in this vicinity, although the ice is cracked in many places, but for all that, it is thought to be safe for skating purposes.

New Year's Eve is the time set, it is said, for the next cocking main, and in this birds will be entered from Newark, Summit, New Brunswick, Rahway, Plainfield and Elizabeth.

On Christmas Day there will be services at All Saints' church at 11 a. m. with Holy Communion and sermon by the rector, Rev. Edward H. True. On St. Stephen's Day, (Saturday,) at 7:30 p. m. there will be prayer and an address. On Sunday, St. John's Day, there will be full morning services and Holy Communion at 10:45; children's carol service at 9:30 a. m; evening prayer and address at 4:30. On Monday, Holy Innocents Day, full morning service at 10:45, and at 7 o'clock p. m. the Christmas exercises of the Sunday-school will be held in the Fanwood clubhouse.

WASHINGTONVILLE.

Robert Clark has just erected a handsome sixty five foot flag pole from which Old Glory will soon float.

At a recent meeting of the Sunday-school Association the small Mason & Hamlin organ was presented to the day school.

The popularity of this section as a resident portion is growing. A tenant of Winins & Kliner actually refused to move out even for a dispossess warrant.

George Mercier, while hunting rabbits, shot at one but missed it, shooting his dog instead, killing him instantly. George feels the loss of so valuable a dog quite keenly.

Some miscreant stole a bundle of New York Journals out of Mr. Sage's milk wagon Tuesday morning while delivering milk in Plainfield, so his customers had to guess at the fate of Cuba for one day.

Ice on the ponds in this vicinity is about six inches thick. The Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company have forbid skating on their ice as it is of first-class quality, and they don't propose to have it spoiled by those thoughtless youths who throw tobacco and cigarette butts on it.

Mrs. Deborah Brant, a well-known and respected resident of Murray Hill, was laid to rest Tuesday in the family plot in the New Providence cemetery. Mrs. Brant was eighty-two years of age and always lived on the place where she died. She has always been in the best of health until about a week ago. After taking a pleasant carriage ride she complained of feeling tired and went to her room, where gradually a well-spent life went out into the light of a perfect day. Her fat er was John Marshall, a cousin to the Marshalls of Newark and Plainfield. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Nason, with whom she lived.

A New Office.

Benj. R. Western, of 53 Washington avenue, has been delegated by Senate Lodge, No. 3542, K. of H., as press reporter for the lodge. His duties will be to supply the papers with such information as may be necessary for publication.

Stands at the Head.

Aug. J. Bogel, the leading druggist of Shreveport, La., says: "Dr. King's New Discovery is the only thing that cures my cough, and it is the best seller I have." J. F. Campbell, merchant of Safford, Ariz., writes: "Dr. King's New Discovery is all that is claimed for it; it never fails, and is a sure cure for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I cannot say enough for its merits.'

Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds is not an experiment. It has been tried for a quarter of a century, and to-day stands at the head. It never disappoints. Free trial bottles at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

CHRISTMAS EVE.

'Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the house
A query did ail of its inmates arouse,
The stockings at chimney were empty, and came
A question of what should be put in the same;
Discussions were had and an hour was spent
Resultless, till Santy Claus unto them went
And said: "if the hopes of your children you'd bless,
At Collier's your search will be crowned with success."

An Unprejudiced Estimate of Our Jewish Fellow-Citizens — Economical Potato Planting—Landscapes That Hurt the Eye.

[Special Letter.]

Usually the first man I meet when away from home is a Jew. But as I have a great admiration for the Hebrew race these meetings are by no means disagreeable. I admire the Jews because they possess the knack of adapting themselves to conditions and circumstances, and because they know how to live. Several years ago I became a convert to their theory that a man's food influences his mental and moral condition. And observation has strengthened my faith in this doctrine. The Jews eat the choicest food as soon as they have the means to buy it. Note the result. Instead of having remain in bondage and mere workers for wages they have become the prime movers in magnificent enterprises and give employment to tens of thousands of gentiles. While I admit that native shrewdness has had much to do with Jewish success here and abroad, yet I am firm in the belief that good cooking and the wise selection of food products has been quite as important a factor. Still another cause of the phenomenal progress made by the Hebrew race since its emancipation from bondage is its love of travel. A Jew never stagnates, either commercially or socially. When business is dull in one town he moves to another. When the society of his abiding place tires him he takes his family to a summer or winter resort. In short, he is progressive in every phase of life—whether selling goods on the road, or running a store, or dealing in options, or winning a place in the social world, or seeking political preferment. He is not satisfied until he is on top, and when on top he wants to direct the movements of the society in which he moves. What a combination of oriental tact, German tenacity and cosmopolitan genius! No wonder that even the Jewbaiters of Germany and Austria seek to emulate the race they hate so much by exhorting their followers to meet Semitic persistency with an imitation of Semitic aggressiveness.

Too Many Christians by Four.

The oft-repeated statement that half of our pleasure resorts would have to be closed should the Jewish population withhold its patronage received convincing emphasis in my mind during a summer trip through northern Michigan, a section of the country which has developed into a veritable Mecca for recreation seekers. The large hotels at Petoskey, Harbor Springs, Mackinaw and Mackinac island entertained hundreds of representative Hebrew families, hailing from Chicago, Cincinnati, Louisville, New Orleans and other southern points. In some hostelries they formed the majority of guests, notably in one inn at Petoskey where a genuinely American face was hard to discover. Coming down in the train from Charlevoix I overheard a conversation between two clothing manufacturers from Cincinnati, one of whom had been to Petoskey, which, although a trifle ancient, hit the nail exactly on the head. "Vell, Israel," said one, "how's things at the Blank hotel at Pedoskey?" "All right, Ikey," responded the other, "only dere's too many Christians there. I met four of dem in de corridor yesterday morning." The first time I heard this story it was applied to Long Branch, but as it fits the Blank hotel at Petoskey equally well, we will let it go without further comment.

Economical Potato Planting.

Once upon a time I read that Scots and Swedes were exactly alike in one respect—a total lack of the sense of humor. The man who originated this statement must have been a dull observer indeed, for some of the brightest witticisms I have heard were of Scotch origin, and Gus Heege, in his clever Swedish-American plays, has succeeded in proving that Swedish humor is worth at least a smile. Ole Olson has done more than his share to convert Michigan's great wilderness of stumps into a huge potato patch, and one of the family at least has used his wit to great pecuniary advantage this summer. Sven struck Mecosta county some time in April and made arrangements with a land owner to plant a large field of potatoes "on shares." He was to furnish half the seed and all the work. The seed cost him eight cents a bushel, and drew heavily on his savings; but when he looked at the large extent of soil to be worked his heart almost failed him. However, instead of giving up in despair, he studied Mecosta county nature, and then proceeded to invite all of his neighbors to meet him on his "patch" on a certain Monday morning for the purpose of partaking of some liquid refreshments. His guests arrived on time, and so did three kegs of beer and a lot of agricultural implements. Sven asked his neighbors to hitch their horses to the machine and give him a "lift" with his potatoes before indulging in the amber fluid. By five o'clock all his seed had been planted and all the beer had been consumed. "But do you think," said I, when he had told me his story, "it was hospitable to make your guests work like slaves?" "H'm," responded Sven; "if dey ben fool enough to do de work, Ae yust ben fool enough to spend tree dollar for beer." Now I contend that this Swedish peasant has not only lots of humor in his make-up, but enough shrewdness to accumulate a competency, no matter how discouraging conditions and circumstances might be.

Where Nature Is in Mourning.

An artist in search of a landscape depicting "Desolation" could find plenty of material in northern Michigan. After having traveled over the rich prairies of Illinois and Iowa and through the picturesque valleys of New York my heart almost bled when, for the first time, my eyes beheld mile after mile of country covered with nothing but rank grass, sand and stumps. Where a few years ago stately hemlocks and giant pines had invited man to worship his Creator nothing remained but decay-

THE GIANTS OF THE PAST.

ing roots and here and there a leaning trunk scorched by forest fires. Everything else man, in his greed for gold and without a thought for posterity, had destroyed. Towns which once contained hundreds of busy inhabitants, stores and dance houses, were deserted, save by the few who had not the means to get away. The busy sawmills were moved to other points where the work of destruction promised fresh returns to conscienceless capital. Occasionally a small potato patch in the sand, laboriously cultivated around gigantic stumps, bore testimony to the industry of the few remaining inhabitants of these deserted villages, but otherwise all was desolation—a picture of want, a sermon on the thoughtlessness of man and the shortsightedness of greed. Where hundreds could have dwelled in affluence for generations, had the stock of lumber been husbanded, a few now struggle along on the borderland of starvation. The lumberman became a millionaire in a year or two, the paupers are paupers still, and the farmer has to spend years in clearing land which, after all, promises but lean returns for his hard toil.

Stranded in a Deserted Town.

Sven, the Swede whose potato-planting experience testifies most significantly to his thrift, accompanied me to one of these deserted lumber towns, located on the shores of a beautiful lake. The first man we met was a middle-aged native mechanic who, in the palmy days, had had charge of an engine in the woods. His tale of woe was pathetic in a way. He had worked at "lumbering" for many years. "Work was always plenty," said he; "for 12 years I never earned less than $3.75 a day and for a year or more I got $7.50 a day. But lumbering is dead now. I can't get any work and I haven't enough money to get away. Don't you think that's rather hard lines?" I didn't answer his question, but Sven remarked sententiously: "Ef Ae ben earning tree dollar seventy fli' cents a day for ten yare, Ae not have to stay here an' ben catch bullhead to keep from starvin'." Sven took the words out of my mouth. Any workingman who earns as much as this man had earned, and has not enough good American sense to make himself comparatively independent in 12 years, is not a worthy object for sympathy, although we may pity his wife and helpless children.

G. W. WEIPPIERT.

Largest Bet on Record.

The biggest bet on record, according to Mr. G. R. Sims, was made a few years back by a young American who was assistant at "a main" held in the grounds of a notorious young sporting marquis, now deceased. One bird was badly crippled and the other was fighting with terrible force. "Twenty thousand to a pinch of snuff on that one," said the young American millionaire, which was taken. The American won.

PURSE NOT FORTHCOMING.

The McKeever-Lavigne Bout at Long Island City Declared off.

New York, Dec. 24.—In spite of the fact that the Marlborough Athletic club had waded successfully through a labyrinth of efforts by the law and order league to prevent the twenty round battle between Kid Lavigne of Saginaw, Mich., and Charley McKeever of Philadelphia, at the old Puritan here last night, in the end the bout was declared off. The management were unable to put up the $2,500 purse which was insisted on by the principals and the latter refused to go on in consequence. The thousand or so of sports, who had braved the snow storm in their eagerness to see the prominent lightweights, filed out of the building disgusted. It was announced that the bout would be pulled off at the Greater New York Athletic club at Coney Island on New Year's Day. The latter club has not as yet been granted a license by Mayor Wurster for the Maher-O'Donnell fight on Christmas Day and it is understood that the mayor declines to grant the necessary permission which is imperative under the Horton law.

REFORMS IN PORTO RICO.

Spain's Queen Regent Will Sign the Decree on Christmas Day.

Madrid, Dec. 24.—Queen Regent Christina will on Christmas day sign a decree ordering the operation of certain reforms in the island of Porto Rico. Admiral Beranga, minister of marine, denies that the government is purchasing warships. Gen. Azcarraga, minister of war, has rendered an account to the queen regent of the work which has been done by the war ministry, with a view to the arising of possible complications. The Epoca, a semi-official organ, declares that together with the reserves the Spanish army is fully capable of maintaining an international war.

Rebel Defeat Reported.

Havana, Dec. 24.—Col. Pavia reports having had an engagement with a party of rebels encamped at San Radondo, in the vicinity of Holquin, killing twenty-one insurgents and capturing and destroying their camp. The troops lost one lieutenant and four privates killed and a major, a captain and nine privates wounded.

Against the Cameron Resolutions.

Milwaukee, Dec. 24.—The chamber of commerce, while expressing sympathy for struggling Cuba, yesterday adopted resolutions declaring against the Cameron resolutions. Copies will be sent to the senators and representatives in congress from this state.

Against Cuban Recognition.

Toledo, O., Dec. 24.—The Toledo produce exchange has adopted a resolution condemning the resolution introduced in the United States senate recognizing the independence of Cuba.

THE ANNAPOLIS LAUNCHED.

Admiral Porter's Granddaughter Christens the New Gunboat.

Elizabethport, N. J., Dec. 24.—The gunboat Annapolis, which was launched at the Crescent shipyard here yesterday and christened by the late Admiral Porter's granddaughter, is one of the six composite boats designed a year ago by Chief Constructor Hichborn of the United States navy. The launching was in every way successful, not a single hitch occurring. The boilers will be placed in position this afternoon, the trial trip be made in February, and the gunboat turned over to the government in March.

Yaqui Indians Again on the War Path.

City of Mexico, Dec. 24.—The government authorities here are in receipt of telegraphic advices from Hermosillo, state of Conora, that a large body of Yaqui Indians are again on the war path, and that a number of settlers in the Yaqui valley have been murdered and their property destroyed. One of the hostile bands of Yaquis is in the neighborhood of Nogales, Ariz., and a raid on that town is feared.

"Weary Waggles" in Hard Luck.

Saratoga, N. Y., Dec. 24.—By a resolution of the county board of supervisors, all able bodied prisoners in the Saratoga county jail and alms house hereafter will be required to work seven to eight hours daily breaking stone. In this manner it is thought to reduce the large army of vagrants and short-term prisoners which populate the above institutions during the winter months.

SITUATION IMPROVED

Run on Chicago Savings Banks Fast Abating.

ALL CALLS FROM DEPOSITORS MET

The 60-Day Notice Law No Longer Resorted To — Confidently Expected That To-day Will See the End of the Scare.

Chicago, Dec. 24.—The runs on the the Illinois Trust and Savings bank and the Hibernian Banking association, although still in progress this morning, is much diminished, and it is believed that the trouble will be ended to-night; if not, the Christmas day holiday is expected to have the desired effect. About half the number yesterday were at the Illinois Trust bank, all being saving depositors, and they did not appear to be so anxious as the crowd of the previous day. Their withdrawals are not large enough to disturb the equanimity of the bank officers. At the Hibernian bank the crowd is much less than yesterday and the withdrawals do not average $50 each. Considering that the bank has 23,000 savings depositors, a falling off of 2,000 or 3,000 was to be expected. Business is going on as usual at the other banks which have savings departments. The Illinois Trust bank is so confident that the run has almost ceased that it has withdrawn the 60-day restriction and is paying all demands in full. The news that two or three banks in nearby states had closed their doors failed to renew the excitement and affairs are now running along almost as smoothly as if nothing had happened to shake the confidence of the people in the integrity of the banks.

The Arrested Bankers Arraigned.

By arrangement of the police department, counsel for the defendants and justice of the peace W. T. Hall, the accused private bankers, Edward S. Dreyer and Robert Berger, entered Justice Hall's private court room late in the afternoon. Detective Fay, who held the warrants which E. E. Kennedy, a saloonkeeper and depositor at Dreyer & Co.'s bank, had sworn to, announced that the men were under arrest. The charge in each case is that the bankers receiver a deposit of $153 at the close of business last Saturday, knowing at the time that they were insolvent. The defendants were accompanied by Adolf Kraus, their lawyer, and Charles H. Wacker of the Wacker & Birk Brewing company. The latter signed the bond of the bankers in the sum of $500 each for their appearance in Justice Hall's court, January 2. Kennedy says he is acting for himself only, but his action is regarded as premature and ill-advised by those who believe the Dreyer & Co. failure could not be foreseen.

Short Receivership.

The shortest bank receivership on record, forty-eight-hours, was that of John H. Nichols, who was appointed receiver Monday afternoon for Frederick Wiersema, proprietor of the Roseland Savings bank of Roseland, which cleared through the National Bank of Illinois. The receiver appeared before Judge Hancy yesterday afternoon and reported there were assets of $83,000 in cash and real estate and liabilities of $51,600. Sufficient money had been raised to carry on the business and the judge discharged the receiver. The bank opened its doors this morning.

Held on His Brother's Charge.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 24.—Andrew J. Riker of Maplewood has been committed to jail at that place in default of $6,000 bail. He is accused by his brother, William B. Riker, now living at East Portchester, Conn., of embezzling him out of $6,000 in cash and fraudulently securing possession of property worth $150,000, located in New York, held in trust by him for the complainant.

Southern Export Trade.

Baltimore, Dec. 24.—The weekly review of the Manufacturers' Record contains detailed statements showing the value of exports from southern ports during the first ten months of 1896 as compared with the corresponding period of last year. These figures show a gain for the period under review of $63,000,000, while the gain for the entire country was $134,000,000.

Anxious To Row Gaudaur.

London, Dec. 24.—Both Harding and Barry, the oarsmen, are anxious to row Jake Gaudaur for the sculling championship of the world. They prefer, however, to row in England. Barry has already signed preliminary articles and posted money for a race with Gaudaur for £250 a side, allowing Gaudaur £25 for expenses. Barry is now arranging to row Harding also.

Arbuckle's Death.

New York, Dec. 24.—The official analysis of the contents of the stomach of Frank Arbuckle, the Denver politician who was found dead in the streets here a few weeks ago, disclosing no traces of poison, sets at rest all speculation that he came to his death by foul means, but a formal inquest will be held shortly.

Sentenced to Fifteen Years in Prison.

White Plains, N. Y., Dec. 24.—Jas. C. Wickes, colored, charged with the murder of George Bowie in a bar-room fight at New Rochelle on May 30 last, was convicted of manslaughter in the second degree here yesterday. Justice Gaynor sentenced him to fifteen years' imprisonment.

The next game will be played on Monday when the North End Club of Newark will go to Ridgewood to play for the trophy.

SANITARY PLUMBING

A Feminine General.

She was visiting in the city, and she was the prettiest girl in the room. When she stood up to sing, the other girls regarded her enviously. A pretty girl who can sing is doubly dangerous, and they considered that the visitor had already received more than her proper share of masculine attention.

While she was arranging her music and whispering to the accompanist the two girls just behind the piano were exchanging confidences.

"I do think it's a shame," said the first girl vexedly. "She's captured all the men already with her airs and graces, and if she sings well—and I just know she does—we won't have a bit of fun tonight."

"Oh, yes, we will," answered the second girl, smiling happily. "We'll be all right."

But the other was not to be so easily consoled.

"I wonder who asked her to sing?" she fretted. "It must have been some one who knows all about her little tricks, too, for all the girls in the club are talking about it."

"I asked her," said the second girl calmly. "You'll know why in a minute. Just wait a bit."

Two minutes later the first girl leaned over the other and touched her arm.

"Why, she makes awful faces," she whispered delightedly. "She's positively ugly when she opens her mouth that way."

"I know it," responded the second girl, with a satisfied smile. "That's why I asked her to sing."

"You clever darling!" exclaimed the first girl, and only the fact that there were others present kept them from hugging each other as they urged the visitor to sing again.—Chicago Tribune.

Most of It Inside.

She had asked him to bring home two quarts of champagne for a little dinner she intended to give the following night.

He had been obedient to the extent of bringing home an extra quart, and still there was trouble.

"I wanted it brought in bottles," she said with infinite scorn as he put down one little pint bottle. "You have too much inside and too little out."—Chicago Post.

Still In Excellent Training.

"Oh, George, how splendidly you tackle!"

When the elderly dame who had her ear at the keyhole of the parlor door heard this, she went away reassured.

"They are talking of the football game," she said.—Chicago Tribune.

Changed Condition.

"Boxley, why is it that you never associate with the Boberts any more?"

"Gracious, man, Boberts is only a plumber! I'm a bicycle repairer."—Detroit Free Press.

Where the Calamity Falls.

"Does your husband suffer from asthma, Mrs. Widdleby?"

"Well, he has it, but he makes the rest of us do the suffering."—Chicago Record.

WE

Care more about closing out our entire stock of Christmas Goods for the next three days than we do about the profits we make on them.

You have no idea how LOW we have cut our prices down to until you come and see.

We don't want a thing left over, so we will devote the remaining three days before Christmas to clear them out regardless of what they cost us.

Come in just as soon as you can, while the variety is good, and make your selections; there is no trouble at all about the prices, and everything is just as new and pretty as it can be.

We were awfully busy last Saturday, up to 10 o'clock at night, with our two wagons and big truck delivering goods from one end of the town to the other, including the towns all around.

We received today a large lot of 6-piece Toilet Sets, first quality, underglazed, handsomely decorated in poppy designs in brown, blue, green and gray. It's so late we mark them at $1.10. Also in the same lot, as handsome a variety of Jardiniers as you want to see. They are marked low, too.

Our order, too, for Umbrellas from the factory of Folmer, Clogg & Co. is delated, therefore they will have to be marked away down in order to sell them. A Good School Umbrella as low as 39c., and better goods proportionally low. In fact, everything in the Christmas line must go; no matter about the cost.

You will save money if you will come right to

THE OLD TIMERS ENJOY A CHRISTMAS TREE AND ITS ADJUNCTS.

Presents of a Juvenile Nature for Those Who Are the Grandfathers of Plainfield, and Wonderfully Appropriate They Were

There were great times up in the Asbestos Club rooms yesterday afternoon, for it was then that the members of that wonderful organization celebrated Christmas after their fashion and bestowed little gifts on each other in remembrance of the day.

A colored man had been hired to procure a Christmas tree in which the gifts were to be hung, but, after waiting vainly for him to appear, the members decided that he had gone to sleep and the president and the janitor sallied forth to get one of their own account. Their experiences were sufficient to keep the other members talking for a week, but they found one at last. It was smaller than they had wanted but they made up in gifts for what they lacked in tree.

There were far too many gifts to hang on the tree so most of them were piled in a corner in the back room to await the time when they should be distributed. There was a keg of sweet cider in the back room also, so there were lots of visitors there.

A grand display of candy, fruits, and other good things was to be found in the front room and members and their friends, who came up to see the wonderful proceedings of this remarkable club, partook heartily of what was there. The Christmas tree occupied one corner of this same room and was decorated for the occasion in the most elaborate style. Some of the decorations referred to the evolution of the members of this club who "Will not burn," and were consequently all the more enjoyed.

There was the usual gathering of members in the afternoon and dominoes was played in all its glory. One after another the other members dropped in until soon after four o'clock most of them had assembled. The proceedings opened with a zither solo by J. Van Eps and then every body prepared for a speech by F. M. Bacon. His remarks were appropriate to the occasion and were listened to with close attention and lots of laugher by the others. Then the gifts were brought in and the presentation began. Mr. Bacon continued in the office of master of ceremonies and presented the gifts and read the little poetical selections that accompanied most of them. While the selections, most of which was written for the occasion, were remarkable, the gifts were more so. There was a tin sword for one warlike member. A talkative member received a horn which he blew as an accompaniment to the shouts of the rest. A paper-machie jackass and a miniature bail of hay was received by another whose equine had recently departed to a better land. One member, who had expressed a wish for a cat, received two of them made of the same material as the mule. There were lots of other presents too numerous to mention.

The picture of "The Klub inn Seshon" was exhibited and it certainly was a work of art. It was the work of one of the members and is his masterpiece. Some of the likenesses were very striking even to the stranger.

Other good times followed the gifts and all the members returned to their homes very thankful that they had been there.

CHRISTMAS ENDEAVOR SERVICE.

A Helpful Meeting at Trinity Reformed Church Yesterday.

Those who remained away from the Christian Endeavor Christmas service held in Trinity Reformed church, yesterday morning, missed a great blessing for, though the attendance was not large, the service was one of deep spiritual interest.

Henry Crane, president of the First Baptist church Christian Endeavor society, had charge of the meeting, and he gave a helpful talk appropriate to the occasion.

Horace J. Martin led the singing, which was a feature. He also sang a beautiful solo.

The testimonies and prayers offered were a source of strength and encouragement to all present.

The service closed with the Mizpah benediction and a prayer by Rev. Mr. Main, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church.

E. E. Anthony announced that a watch-night service would be held New Year's Eve in the Seventh-Day church, and he urged all to attend and to bring their pastors with him.

A Nice Profit.

The bazaar and fair for the benefit of the Fillmore avenue Baptist church, which has been in progress in Reform hall for several days past, netted the church about $75 clear gain.

AT THE EPISCOPAL CHURCHES.

Yesterday the Occasion of the Rendition of Special Services.

At the church of the Holy Cross there was a finely rendered musical programme. The vestry choir of fifteen boys and eleven men sang with spirit under the direction of George Hosking, choir master. The anthems by Sullivan and Leslie were particularly well sung. A communion service by Eyre was particularly well rendered. Rev. T. Logan Murphy delivered an eloquent and instructive Christmas sermon. There was a large attendance at this service and many remained for communion. The greater part of the Christmas music will be repeated on Sunday afternoon at 4:30.

The regular Christmas services were held at the Grace P. E. church yesterday and the interior of the church looked very pretty in its Christmas garb of green. The decorating was all done overhead and with the evergreen roping. The nave was hung with it for its entire length. The decorating was all done in angles instead of curves and the effect was very pretty. The chairman of the committee in charge of the decorating was N. Pendleton Rogers. The designs for the decorations were furnished by F. R. Stevens.

Miantonomah's New Officers.

The following officers were elected at the meeting of Miantonomah Tribe No. 118, I. O. R. M., held last evening: Prophet, Mr. Lee; Sachem, David Mourning; Senior Sagamore, R. Slorah; Junior Sagamore, J. Cashman; Chief of Records, C. L. Holstein; Collector of Wampum, A. J. Stiglitz; Keeper of Wampum, Wm. A. Westphal. The officers will be installed Friday evening, January 8th., and the exercises will probably be public.

After the Holidays.

Plainfield Business College will run day and night from January 4th to July 1st.

COWS CAUSE A LAWSUIT.

MRS. LYONS SAYS THEY TRESPASSED AND DAMAGED HER PROPERTY.

The Milk Producers Are Owned by Frederick Johansen—The Testimony Heard by a Horde of Mt. Bethel Agriculturists.

Mount Bethel had all the excitement of a suit at law for damages on Thursday afternoon and it brought the people from miles around. The case was tried in the Mt. Bethel hall so as to accommodate the crowd that wanted to see the fun. The case was that of Mrs. Cordelia Lyon vs. Frederick Johansen, in tort, and it was heard before Justice Austin and a jury of twelve men. Mrs. Lyon lives in the neighborhood of Scotch Plains where she owns a farm. Mr. Johansen has a farm near Smalleytown and he also is owner of a number of cattle. One day, so the plaintiff claimed, these same cows wandered over her property and did considerable damage thereto. The suit followed.

The audience was about evenly divided in its opinions and listened to the case with much interest. Winfield S. Angleman, of this city, represented the plaintiff while S. S. Swackhamer acted as lawyer for the owner of the cows. It took nearly all the afternoon to try the case and then the jury retired. They were out of the room about five minutes and then brought in a verdict of no cause for action.

KRIS KRINGLE WAS ON HAND.

A Craig Place Boarding House Welcomed the Old Patriarch.

Christmas at Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Harned, 19 Craig place, will long be remembered by those who participated in the pleasures there, which commenced by the distribution of gifts with which the large and beautiful Christmas tree was loaded.

Santa Claus was most admirably represented by Rev. H. J. Johnson, who was kept busy for an hour or more, with two assistants, in handing out the presents of which there were about 160 exchanged after the distribution of gifts. Several of those who participated were obliged to leave for different scenes, but their places were soon filled by others, there being many callers during the day. Among those present were: Ex-Mayor and Mrs. H. E. Needham, Miss Bertha Needham, Miss Alice Needham, J. H. VanWinkle, Sr., J. H. VanWinkle, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Whitney, the Misses Whitney, Rev. and Mrs. G. W. Smith, the Misses Smith, Rev. and Mrs. H. J. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vail and sons, the Misses Vail, Mrs. Sarah Line, Mr. and Mrs. Will F. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Harned, of Plainfield, Harold Needham, of New York, Rev. and Mrs. Charles Scudder, of Newark.

Married a Quarter of a Century.

Mr. and Mrs. George Kesselring, of Chatham street, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage in a most auspicious manner. There were about fifty guests from Plainfield, Newark and New York. An exceedingly large collection of silver was received by the bride and groom. The supper was complete in every detail and thoroughly enjoyed by all. It was early this morning when the guests left for their homes and they wished the bride and groom many happy returns of the day.

Suing the Railway Company.

About three months ago a trolley car ran into a rig owned by Mr. Slope, of West Front street, with the result of wrecking the wagon. The owner claimed that his horse was injured, as well as himself, and a few days ago Mr. Slape brought action against the street railway company in Justice Newcorn's court. The summons is returnable December 30th. The company will fight the case, which no doubt will be an interesting one.

Wagon Struck by a Trolley Car.

Car No. 6 of the street railway ran into milkman Henry's wagon on Somerset street, near Arnold's meat market, early this morning, and made a wreck of the wagon. Mr. Henry was trying to drive off of the tracks, but his rig did not move fast enough and the car and wagon came together with a crash. The wagon was taken to Homan's carriage shop for repairs. There was no damage to the car and it is quite likely that the company will settle for the damages to the wagon.

To Furnish the Nurses Home.

A meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary Board of the Muhlenberg hospital was held this morning and it was decided that the members would endeavor to furnish the nurses' home. Each member is to raise $2 or more.

From Manager to Proprietor.

Richard Menzel, who has been for some time manager of F. S. Taylor's music store in the Schepflin block on West Front street, has purchased the business and will take possession on January 1st.

LEFT FAMILY DESTITUTE.

CHARLES SNYDER WOULD NOT PROVIDE FOR WIFE AND CHILDREN.

At the Instigation of the Overseer of the Poor He is Arrested—Says He Could Not Get Along With His Wife.

Charles Snyder, the story of the destitute condition of whose wife was exclusively told in the Daily Press some time ago, was arrested yesterday. It was not a particularly merry Christmas for him; neither was it for the family up in their cold bare rooms on West Third street. The charge against Snyder was for non-support of his wife. It was brought through the intervention of Mrs. Snyder's landlord, who would not turn her out in the cold because she did not pay her rent until she had some place to go. He brought the matter to the attention of Overseer of the Poor Marx and wanted the latter to take care of the wife and the two children.

Mr. Marx did not care to burden the city with them when the husband and father was living and so the suit was started in the city court. Mrs. Snyder had declared that she received no aid from her husband and he had told her landlord, James Wilkinson, that he would do nothing more for them. A warrant has been out for the arrest of Charles Snyder for several days, but it was not until yesterday that he came into Plainfield where he could be arrested. Snyder was formerly employed in the street cleaning department of the city, but when the appropriation for that department ran out, he accepted a position on the farm of Mr. Blackford at South Plainfield, where he has been ever since.

He was locked up for over Christmas night and this morning he was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza. He pleaded not guilty and said he could prove by the grocer that he had been paying something for the support of his family. His reason for leaving them is said to be on account of his wife's queer actions. He was released under bonds for trial this afternoon.

THIS WHEEL WOULDN'T TURN.

An Accident to the Chemical Engine on Thursday.

An alarm of fire sent in from Box 23, East Fifth street and Franklin place, by E. C. Mulford, called the department apparatus to Samuel Bolden's house on East Fourth street, Thursday afternoon, about 5 o'clock.

The occupants of the house had started a wood fire in the kitchen stove, and from this the chimney caught fire. The firemen arrived just in time to avert a serious fire.

While the chemical engine was going to the fire, it was noticed by Second Assistant Chief J. W. Murray, who was on the apparatus, that one of the rear wheels refused to go around and when they returned to headquarters the wheel was examined. With a great deal of difficulty the wheel was removed, when it was learned that some foreign substance had caused the wheel to cut the axle. "Ted" Flannery, the department blacksmith, was sent for and he quickly repaired the axle. This accident was similar to one which occurred to the chemical soon after it was received.

A Happy Marriage.

Isaac P. Runyon, of this city, and Miss Addie Henry, of Pluckamin, were united in marriage last Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Henry. A number of the friends of the couple were present, and the ceremony was a very happy one. Several were present from this city. The couple went on a short trip. They will reside in this city after a time.

Presented With a Gold Badge.

The generosity of Borough Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., was shown in an appreciable manner yesterday when he presented Chief Marshal Wm. Wilson with a handsome gold badge bearing the words "Chief Marshal, North Plainfield." It bears also the State Coat of Arms. The gift gives evidence that the officer's services are appriciated.

Union Watch Meeting.

The Christian Endeavor Societies of this city will hold a union watch meeting at the Seventh Day Baptist church on New Year's Eve, next Thursday evening. The social hour will begin at nine o'clock and the meeting at 10:30 o'clock. E. E. Anthony will be the leader.

Nothing Succeeds Like Success.

Miss Lincoln, the Park avenue florist, had the largest holiday trade the past week that she has ever had, the store being thronged with the finest of Plainfield people. The best of stock and courteous attention is always found at her establishment which is appreciated by her patrons.

MERRY CHRISTMAS SURE

NEARLY ALL THE WORLD HAD A HOLIDAY TIME OF IT.

It Was the Most Delightful in a Weather Way for Several Years and Young People Made the Most of It.

It has been many years since Plainfield has seen such a Christmas as yesterday was as far as the weather was concerned. It was simply delightful, the kind you read about. First, there was the snow. It was the first real "white Christmas" that has visited this neighborhood for many years, for the ground was covered with several inches of glistening snow, over which the jingling sleigh bells sounded merrily indeed. Cutters, two-seated and sleighs of all descriptions, were out gliding over the icy surface of the macadamized roads.

The weather itself was of the real Christmas kind, clear and bracing, and it infused new life into the pedestrians as they stepped along with a cheery "Merry Christmas" greeting them on every side. There are some people so soured by their contact with the world that they don't believe in being happy on Christmas Day, but they were few and far between yesterday. The pessimistic old people who love to tell how the green Christmas makes a fat graveyard and then prophesy all sorts of mournful things for the next year, had nothing to say this time and could only comment on the wickedness of the world.

The skating was good, particularly on New Market pond. There was a big crowd there in the morning but in the afternoon it was double. The snow had been swept off and the ice was quite smooth. Everybody in New Market was down at the pond, and Dunellen sent a big delegation over. Every train and trolley car that came from Plainfield to Dunellen brought a big crowd of young people all ready for skating.

The coasting on Broadway and the Rahway hills was not good. There were a few out in the morning to try, but they soon left and the young people who had a pair of skates or could borrow a pair were out on the ice. The other outlying ponds were well filled and skating seemed to divide the honors of the day with the sleighing, which was good on macadamized roads.

TOOK A WIFE CHRISTMAS EVE.

Cupid Makes a Present That Will Last Till Death Does Part.

The marriage of Miss Bertha Mason and George P. Schaefer, both of this city, was celebrated Christmas Eve, at the home of the groom 407 West Second street.

The officiating clergyman was J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren Chapel. The bride was gowned in white silk, trimmed with white lace, while the bridemaid, Miss Susie Schaefer, sister of the groom, wore a gown of blue silk trimmed with white lace.

Thomas Schaefer, brother of the groom, acted as best man. The house was prettily decorated with greens and holly, and the bridal party stood under a bower of flowers during the ceremony.

A reception followed which was attended by guests from Asbury Park, Philadelphia, Trenton and Plainfield. The presents were numerous and useful.

Mr. and Mrs. Schaefer will reside at 407 West Second street. Mr. Schaefer is an employe of C. M. Raybert, the North avenue plumber.

CHRISTMAS TREE CAUGHT FIRE.

Children Tried to Light the Candles With Serious Results.

A serious conflagration was narrowly averted at the home of Samuel T. Hand, 124 Elmwood place, yesterday afternoon. A large Christmas tree had been placed in the parlor for the children's amusement, and contrary to the expressed desire of the parents, the former lighted the candles. While doing this the tree caught fire and in an instant the room was filled with smoke. Mrs. Hand hastily secured some water and threw it on the tree, but this failed to extinguish the flames. Charles Conover, who lives on the opposite side of the street, was attracted by the dense smoke and he rendered valuable assistance by getting the tree out of the house. As a result of the fire the carpet, several rugs and a number of Christmas presents were ruined. The wall paper near the tree was also ruined and several panes of glass were cracked.

It was sometime before the smoke left the house.

Depositions Taken.

Depositions were taken this morning before Attorney Harry C. Runyon, master in chancery, with a view of reopening the appeal case of Dartland vs. Ellis, on contract. Ex-Judge William A. Coddington was present for the plaintiff and S. S. Swackhamer for the other side.

SCHOLARS MADE HAPPY.

SUNDAY-SCHOOLS OF THE GERMAN CHURCHES HAVE THEIR CHRISTMAS.

An Appropriate Programme Opened the Event and This Was Succeeded by Gifts Being Presented to the Children.

St. Peter's German Lutheran church presented an attractive appearance last evening when the Sunday-school scholars enjoyed the Christmas entertainment. The church was prettily decorated with greens, while a handsome tree added greatly to the pleasure of all.

There was singing by the congregation and Sunday school, after which the following scholars gave recitations: George Smith, Jeus Claussen, Herman Glaentzer, Ida Borsum, Martha Hoppenz, Gussie Carmen, Lena Bremmer, Emily Bremmer, Edith Kreutzfield, Gustav Meisner, Carrie Sutterlein, Otto Reppert, Tillie Coddington, Julia Ruppert, Annie Henscheu, Kattie Bremmer, Herman Klinsman, Joseph Stenzenberger, Lillie Stenzenberger, Henry Ruppert, Etta Ebel, Hedvig Grotmann, Eddie Schaller, Pauline Smith, Trude Richter.

The pastor, Rev. Mr. Kionka, then made an excellent address suitable to the occasion.

This was followed by the presentation of oranges, nuts, candy and a silk muffler to every scholar present. Mr. Kionka was handsomely remembered, and in addition to receiving a purse of money, he was the recipient of many useful articles. One elegant present was a valuable collection of butterflies, richly mounted and framed. The celebration this year was the most successful one ever held.

The scholars of the German Reformed Sunday school had a most enjoyable Christmas celebration last evening. The exercises were opened with a Christmas carol by the school, after which Rev. George Hauser, the pastor, offered prayer and made a few appropriate remarks.

A Christmas address by Frank Bach was followed with excellent recitations by the following scholars: Charles Doeringer, Russell Doeringer, Edna Conde, Eva Doeringer, Willie Newmiller, Etta Krausse, Fred Krausse, Charles Hauser, Ida Hauser, Nellie Ballantine, Walter Conde, Carrie Bechtle, Lucy Caspar, Anna Bach, Willie Gaub, Augustus Neher, Anna Richter, Hugh Gray, Rose Sutterlein, Amelia Conde, Amelia Sutterlein, Wm. Bechtle, Carrie Bendes, Ella Hoerster, Henry Bender, Laura Ballantine.

Mrs. Bach, on behalf of the Ladies' Aid Society of the church, surprised the pastor by presenting him with a purse of money, which he accepted with a few well chosen words in response. The committee in charge, consisting of Rev. Mr. Hauser, A. Wolf and Mrs. Stahl, distributed gifts to the scholars. There were books, oranges, toys and candy, and every one was made glad by receiving a present.

The usual Christmas tree, gayly decorated and brilliantly illuminated, was a source of great pleasure to all, especially the younger scholars.

O'ER THE SNOW TO A GOOD TIME.

A Straw Ride and a Dance Make Up an Evening's Pleasure.

Last evening George Voehl and Messrs. Sebring and Kulp, of the borough, tendered the services of their handsome horses and sleighs to their friends, and at 7 o'clock a merry crowd of people left the corner of Craig place and Duer street for Stoney Hill, the home of Frank Haynes. The sound of fog horns and jingling bells made by the merry folks helped to enliven the trip both ways.

When the destination was reached, the crowd took possession of the house, and Prof. Frazee with his violin was in the party, and with catchy airs made those dance who never danced before. "Uncle Jack" Carney was present and he told how potatoes were raised on Stony Hill and he advised all to buy farms there. Refreshments were served in abundance and at an early hour the guests left for home after wishing Mr. and Mrs. Haynes many returns of the day. On the return home the party amused themselves by arousing all the farmers on the road with the singing of popular songs, and thus a very merry Christmas day was passed.

The Milkman Settled.

The trouble between the Plainfield Street railway and the milkman has settled. The case came up in the city court this morning and Judge DeMeza pronounced Paul Henley, the milkman, guilty and fined him $8 for disturbing the peace, quarreling and fighting and blocking the roadway.

John T. Bolsterli, of West End Park, spent Christmas with his parents in Somerset cotnty.

REFORMS FOR CUBA

Senor Castillo Again Announces His Determination To Act.

MUCH BETTER FEELING IN SPAIN

The People Generally Growing Less Refractory to the Idea of Some Understanding with the United States.

Madrid, Dec. 26.—Senor Canovas del Castillo, the prime minister, has again affirmed in the presence of his cabinet that he is determined to introduce reforms in Cuba, dating their application from the conclusion of the negotiations carried on with other powers, which are already tending in a direction favorable to Spain. It is understood that Senor Canovas referred to the attitude of France, Germany, Austria and Great Britain, the governments of which countries, it is stated here, are of the opinion that the United States cannot overstep President Cleveland's message to congress. All rumors of the acceptance of the United States' mediation (in Cuba) are premature yet, but it is undeniable that the Spanish people are growing less refractory to the idea of some understanding with the United States, if only the idea of Cuban independence is dropped and Spain is allowed to execute her own ideas of colonial reform. All rumors pointing to unofficial action by the European powers are unfounded, except that the powers generally have advised Spain to grant to her colonies autonomy, and to make her own terms with the United States if she can so hasten the pacification of Cuba.

Newspaper Story Denied.

The story printed in a London newspaper purporting to give the outline of a plan of campaign against the Cuban insurgents is officially denied here. It was stated that a Spanish advance into the province of Pinar del Rio would be followed, according to the programme decided upon, by a vigorous combined movement of ten columns of government troops, comprising 30,000 men, with a view to compelling the insurgents to either surrender and lay down their arms or to cross the trocha into the Havana province. When this plan shall have been carried out in Pinar del Rio similar tactics will be pursued in the Havana and Matanzas provinces. If these plans are successfully carried out before March next the government will inaugurate reforms in Porto Rico, which will be followed slowly by reforms in Cuba, and the cortes will be convoked to sanction extensive concessions in the administration of the affairs on the island.

DIFFERING ACCOUNTS.

Discrepancies in Government and Cuban Reports of a Battle.

Havana, Dec. 26.—An official announcement is made that the Spanish troops under Col. Rabanal have had an engagement with several rebel parties under Rojas. The scene of the fighting was near Cimarrones, province of Puerto Principe. A rebel camp was captured, and the insurgents were completely dispersed with the loss of thirty-six killed. The Spanish loss was one killed and eight wounded. Advices from a reliable Cuban source show that the so-called engagement was simply a massacre of unarmed non-combatants by the troops. While a train was passing along the railway between Caibarien and Camajuani, province of Santa Clara, a dynamite bomb exploded, wrecking the armored car containing the train's military escort. Two soldiers were killed and two wounded.

Delgado Not To Be Shot.

Washington, Dec. 26.—Enrique Delgado has not been shot by the Spanish authorities in Cuba, and he will be treated with all the leniency that the conditions under which he was arrested warrant. This news is the first result of the inquiry the state department has made into Delgado's case. Although it is probable that he must remain in jail for some time, while his case is being investigated, it is not believed here that he will be severely punished.

Indiana's Fee and Salary Law Valid.

Indianapolis, Dec. 26.—Ninety-one county auditors, an equal number of county treasurers, and the boards of commissioners in the same counties are affected by the decision of the supreme court that the fee and salary law of 1895 is valid. It puts every officer in the state on a salary.

VOLUME OF BUSINESS

Several Causes Combine To Check Expansion.

RETAIL HOLIDAY TRADE ACTIVE

Northwestern Bank Failures Shake Confidence in Banking and Commercial Circles---Prices Are Higher for Hides, Wheat, Corn and Oats.

New York, Dec. 26.—Bradstreet's weekly review of the state of trade for the week just ending will say: The arrival of the holidays, the close the year and the period of annual stock taking have further checked the volume of wholesale business. Only filling-in orders are being received and trade is slow. Retail demand for holiday goods has been active, but it is for cheaper grades than in previous years. In other lines the distribution of merchandise has been smaller at a number of distributing centers. Failures of important banking institutions at northwestern cities tend to unsettle confidence in commercial and banking circles. Few salesmen remain on the road, but most of them are preparing to go out within a fortnight. The shake-up in the iron and steel prices is nearly complete, and quotations for Bessemer pig iron and for steel billets have gotten down to the level of those for other staples. The break last week precipitated speculation in Bessemer pig iron and billets, and large purchases for an advance and for consumption have been made—more than 300,000 tons of billets—some of it as low as $15, a drop of $5 a ton. The billet pool has been patched up, nominally. Bessemer pig, which went off to $10.50 on the break and on the prospect of a readjustment of costs, is firmer, and has sold at $11. Anxiety is felt in the iron and steel trade as to the uncertainty of the price of lake ore under the new combination to control that staple. A Pittsburg concern is shipping 2,000 tons of sheet bars to the United Kingdom, and southern pig iron furnaces report further sales in England. Sheet and tinplate bars have sold down to $16.50. Rails are firm at $25, but that does not show the shrinkage suffered by billets. Freer receipts of cotton tend to encourage high crop views and account for the reaction in price. Lard and petroleum are also lower. Unchanged quotations are reported for wheat flour, sugar, pork and coffee, as well as for print cloths, although heavy stocks of the latter are having a depressing effect on the market, and are likely to cause a restriction of output in the near future. Prices for hides are higher, as are those for wheat, corn and oats.

New York Stock Market.

A recovery of the New York speculative stock market from the depression caused by the Cuban resolutions at Washington was natural, in view of the subsequent developments in that connection. The slight effect on prices of the western bank failures and the somewhat stronger tone that has since appeared seem due to the ease of money and the failure of the events in question to produce anything beyond local liquidation in Chicago. The New York market at the end of the week is firm, with an inactive holiday spirit manifest. Foreign exchange is steady. Manufacturers of wool have not opened heavyweight samples yet, and are not inclined to buy raw materials except to complete orders in hand. Some Massachusetts mills have booked fair spring orders, but the industry in Rhode Island does not appear to be so well situated, and two large mills expect to shut down soon. There are 327 business failures reported throughout the United States this week, 32 less than last week and 11 more than the corresponding week a year ago.

Mikado's Views on Japan.

Yokohama, Dec. 26.—The speech from the throne at the opening of parliament declares that Japan's relations with foreign states are increasing in cordiality, and announces that the work of revising treaties is nearly completed. The speech says that the national defenses require perfecting in proportion with the financial resources of the empire, and concludes with recommendations that the questions of education, the Formosan situation and the general welfare of the Japanese people should receive the attention of parliament.

Sudden Death of a Hotel Proprietor.

New York, Dec. 26.—John Chatfield, proprietor of the Hotel Jefferson, died suddenly of appoplexy yesterday. A few hours before he was apparently as well as usual. Mr. Chatfield had been connected as proprietor and manager in many hotels, notably Fenwick hall, at Saybrook, Conn.; the Manhansett house, Shelburne island; the Brighton Beach hotel, and the Pequot house at New London. He leaves a wife and son.

Victim of the Mafia.

New York, Dec. 26.—Antonio Zanone, the barber who is dying at St. Vincent's hospital with two stab wounds in his left breast which he received Thursday night while drinking with Julius Naelone, Salvator Galine and Simeone Calagofre in a saloon on Elizabeth street, the police believe, was a victim of the Mafia.

Millions in Nitro-Glycerine.

London, Dec. 26.—A Paris dispatch to the Times says that M. Nobel, the inventor of nitro-glycerine, bequeathed a fortune estimated at $10,000,000 to the Stockholm university.

Uruguay Gives Liberty to the Press.

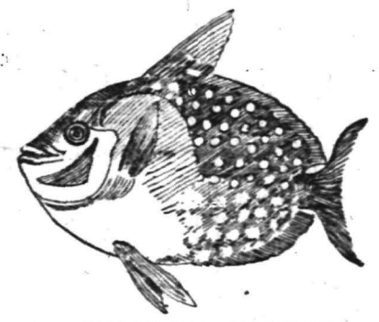
PUGET SOUND FISH.

Deep-Sea Fellow of Brilliant Hue, Not Known by Scientists.

Scientists are startled when they find a new fish weighing 20 pounds. Here on Puget sound, says the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, where all the natural history is so new and attractive to scientists, it has been quite common to find from five to ten new species of fish during a summer's dredging, but it has been many years since so rare a fish was caught as the one calling forth this article.

On September 18, 1896, while fishing on the banks some 28 miles south-southwest of Cape Flattery in the schooner Wenoma, Capt. Jacobson caught a strange and uncommonly beautiful fish in 85 fathoms of water. The fish is 26½ inches long, 17 inches deep, and about four inches thick. It weighs 20 pounds, and in high coloring surpasses nearly every other fish of the ocean.



A PISCATORIAL NOVELTY.

The top of the head is a brick red, the back is a metallic blue, shading to an aluminium color on the belly. The mesian line is strongly arched and marked by a series of large scales. The whole fish is covered with pure white round spots. The fins are strong-spined and extend nearly the whole length of the fish. The long spine of the dorsal is ten inches in length. The tail is lunate. The color of the fins is bright vermillion, edged with sulphur yellow. The mouth is small and toothless, the lower lip protruding and of a vermillion color. The eyes are large and round.

None of the books on fishes in the libraries of the University of Washington or the Young Naturalists' society give any description of this new visitor of the finny tribes. The nearest description found in the books are of two celebrated fishes of the Atlantic ocean. One of these Atlantic forms is the Opah King fish, which is described as a great delicacy, but is so rare that not many have had an opportunity of trying it. But one of the nearest relatives of this new fish is the Zeus faber or the "John Dory" of the Atlantic. This is a highly-prized food fish, but it is never taken in quantity.

This specimen was brought to Seattle and found its way into the museum of the Young Naturalists' society, where it was photographed, its colors carefully noted, and then preserved in formalin, the new and valuable preservative. Further examination of the fish has led some of the local scientists to believe that the new fish belongs to the genus Lampris, and is therefore a true Opah, but it is undoubtedly a new species, very different from the Atlantic Opahs.

Christmas Day in New York.

New York, Dec. 26.—Christmas was celebrated here in merry fashion. The weather was ideal for the great mid-winter holiday, and it was just the sort the old folks describe as "good old-fashioned Christmas weather." On every hand there were evidences of the Christmas spirit, and in charitable and public institutions in all parts of the city the day was fittingly observed and religious services of exceptional order were held in most of the churches. In St. Patrick's cathedral a pontifical mass was celebrated. In most of the other churches of the city special services were held during the day. In Brooklyn the day was celebrated in much the same fashion as here.

Yale Football Eleven at Nashville.

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 26.—The Yale consolidated football eleven met the Nashville Athletic club team at the latter's gridiron here yesterday afternoon. The game was interesting and stubbornly fought from the start, but the collegians showed the result of skillful training and long practice and won by a score of 20 to 6. The affair was a social event, the elite of the city turning out in force.

out in the rain

A good drenching in a cold rain is often the beginning of consumption. Yet no one claims that the germs of this disease exist in the rainwater. Then how was this brought about? The exposure was followed by a cold; the vitality was lowered; the cough continued for some weeks; the throat and lungs became congested; and thus all the conditions were favorable for the consumption germs.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, does not directly attack these germs and kill them. But it does tone up the whole system and restores the body to health before serious harm is done. The germs of consumption thrive best when the system is weakened and the throat and lungs congested. Do not delay until it is too late, but treat your cough early. Cod-liver oil and the hypophosphites, in the form of Scott's Emulsion, are the very best remedies.

"JUST AS GOOD" IS NOT SCOTT'S EMULSION.

TROLLEY CAR ACCIDENT.

Motorman Killed and Four Passengers Injured Near Allentown, Pa.

Allentown, Pa., Dec. 26.—A trolley car coming to this city from Bethlehem yesterday afternoon was struck by a Jersey Central passenger train on a grade crossing in East Allentown The trolley car conductor had ran ahead and signalled to the motorman to proceed. He changed the signal upon seeing an approaching train, but it was too late. Motorman Lawrence J. Ware stopped the car with the front platform on the track. The train was running at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour and when the locomotive struck the car it broke the platform off, carrying it 150 feet. The motorman was dragged almost as far and killed almost instantly. The car was broken to splinters. Conductor George Gresser had his face slightly bruised and four passengers from Bethlehem were injured. John Brink, face cut; Mrs. John Brink, back bruised; Ed Werg, thigh and spine hurt, and P. Gehman forehead and cheek cut and legs bruised. None of their injuries, however, are serious. Motorman Ware was 49 years old and leaves a widow and eight children.

Three Homicides at Savannah.

Savannah, Ga., Dec. 26.—Three homicides are the result of Christmas day in Savannah. One negro boy shot another through the heart, killing him instantly; William Titcomb, a white man, was stabbed in a quarrel and died in a few hours, and Levi Rutledge, colored, was shot and killed by a policeman last night.

Killed by a Train.

Albany, Dec. 26.—James Corbett, aged 22, was killed while crossing the New York Central tracks at Van Woert street in this city on his way to attend Christmas services at St. Joseph's church. Corbett had attended and received holy communion at an earlier service. He was unmarried.

Another Wilkesbarre Church Burned.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Dec. 26.—The Polish Synagogue on Wells street was gutted by fire last night. The loss is estimated at $10,000; partially insured.

Wife Murderer Pardoned.

Topeka, Kan., Dec. 26.—Hugh O'Neil, the Marion county wife murderer, who is serving a twenty-five year sentence in the penitentiary, has received his liberty as a Christmas present. It is the practice of the governors of the state to grant one pardon each Christmas, and this year O'Neil is the lucky one. There is one condition attached to his pardon, and that is if O'Neil again indulges in the liquor habit, which got him into trouble in the first place, he will be sent back to prison to serve out his unexpired term.

Football at Washington.

Washington, Dec. 26.—Despite the bitter cold and high wind, Washington enjoyed its annual football game yesterday between the elevens of Columbia university and All-Washington, the latter comprising the players of the Columbia Athletic team. The latter also included Joe De Silver of the University of Pennsylvania, while Sam Senior and Don Fugitt of the Lehigh team played with their old associates on the university eleven. The latter were the winners—12 to 0—making a touch-down and goal in each half.

Maj. McKinley Spends a Quiet Christmas.

Canton, O., Dec. 26.—Major McKinley's Christmas was a very quiet one. He took advantage of the continued good sleighing weather to enjoy two sleigh rides. Mrs. McKinley accompanied him during one ride, and a party of the Major's nieces were with him on the other. The Major and Mrs. McKinley dined with Mother McKinley, and during the afternoon he read the papers and chatted with personal friends who called. There were no callers of political importance, and none is expected to-day.

Death of Chester R. Faulkner.

Washington, Dec. 26.—Chester R. Faulkner, for some years a prominent politician of Indiana and of recent years private secretary of Senator Voorhees, died at Providence hospital late yesterday afternoon of injuries received Thursday night by being run over by a street car. He fell under the car, which ran over and crushed his right leg above the knee. Amputation was resorted to, but the victim slowly sank under the shock of the operation.

Germans Expect Reprisals.

London, Dec. 26.—The Standard's Berlin correspondent remarks upon the apprehension of German merchants that the irritation in America at Germany's prohibition of American meats, etc., will result in further reprisals, for example the compulsory examination of all German wines and the placing of serious obstacles in the way of the import of German sugar.

WAR ON STRIKERS

Boston Railway Officials Making Wholesale Discharges.

BREAKING IN MANY NEW MEN

The Former Employes Greatly Discouraged Over the Action of the Company When They Applied for Reinstatement.

Boston, Dec. 26.—There is much dissatisfaction openly expressed among the old employes of the West End Street Railway company at the outcome of the strike, especially over the order issued by the company to the effect that the strikers who desired to return to work must run their chances of being again employed upon personal application, and must take their places in turn and below whatever new men had been put on in the strikers places. Mutterings against the alleged injustice of this order have been loudest on the Charlestown and Cambridge divisions, it being stated that in the former fully one-third of the old employes, who applied for reinstatement were rejected by the division superintendent. Many of these men were prominently identified with the strike as leaders and had been in the service of the company for years. It is claimed that the starters and inspectors who ran cars were told that if they were insulted by any striker to report the matter to the superintendent and when that person applied for employment when the strike was over he would be told that he was not wanted in the employ of the company. So far as known but one man has been discharged for this reason. The old employes are aware of the fact that the company is hiring a number of new men, who are being broken in, in some instances a new man being seen on both ends of the same car. All the new men have been provided with new caps and numbers, and the strikers regard this as an indication that all the men who struck and have been rehired will be discharged one by one until all their places are filled, within a short period by these new men. The men on the Charlestown division are anxious to precipitate another strike, unless the discharged men are taken back before the new men have been broken in. They declare that the pitmen and firemen in the power station are ready to join them whenever they are asked and believe that if a strike should be again ordered it would be far more successful than the one just declared off. Over in Cambridge the men are chafing a good deal under the collar, and are very outspoken against what they term the treachery of one chief officer of their district union. They claim that he was really responsible for the break in the ranks of the strikers. It cannot be learned just how the company stands in regard to the number of men it has to run its cars. Judging from late reports a large number of new faces will be seen upon the electrics within a few days, for the company is said to be making wholesale discharges of old employes this morning, some 300 or 400 being already reported.

MAY LEAD TO BLOODSHED.

Colorado Cattlemen and Sheepmen Quarrel over Ranges.

Denver, Dec. 26.—Advices from Routt county indicate that war between the cattlemen and the sheepmen may break out any day. For the past few days cattlemen, ranchmen and others interested in maintaing the ranges of Routt county for the benefit of cattle have been congregating in the northwestern part of the county at a point on lower Snake river. The men came in by twos and threes and in companies numbering as many as thirty-five. Every man is well armed and thoroughly mounted. Mess wagons accompanied many of the larger outfits, and every preparation appears to have been made for a lengthy campaign. There are fully 250 men in two camps on Snake river. Military rule has been established, and the men are divided into companies, each company having a captain, with a commander-in-chief in charge of the entire force. No one is allowed to come or go without being satisfactorily accounted for. This precaution is due to a report to the effect that Griff and Edwards, the principal sheep owners, have secured the services of a large force of men to meet the stockmen.

Accused of Heavy Forgery.

Baltimore, Dec. 26.—George O. Demuth, a prominent piano dealer of this city, is under arrest, charged with heavy forgery. The warrant of arrest charges him with forging the name of Herman T. Gernhardt to notes amounting to $10,000, but it is said that the total amount involved will reach more than $20,000. In addition to the Gernhardt forgeries, Henry Spamar and his son, George O. H. Spamar, claim that they have been fleeced out of $11,700, up to last accounts.

Death of Mrs. Ellen Terry Johnson.

Hartford, Dec. 26.—Mrs. Ellen Terry Johnson, the wife of Prof. Charles F. Johnson of Trinity college, died suddenly of heart disease last evening. She was the daughter of the late Dr. Chas. Terry of Cleveland, and was descended from Gen. Nathaniel Terry and Gen. Jeremiah Wadsworth of Revolutionary fame. She was a cousin of the late Maj.-Gen. Alfred Terry, U. S. A. Her sister is the wife of Col. Henry W. Closson, U. S. A., retired, of Washington.

WE WEEP NOT.

Even in philosophic New Jersey you will find newspaper proprietors who fly into rage when one of their rivals say something unkind or unfair about them. To such persons is commending the attitude of A. L. Force, of the Plainfield Press. Mr. Force has been the object of many severe attacks by the Plainfield News, but he does not tear his hair or sit down and weep. Instead he merely asks that Brother Runyon shall substitute the scalping-knife for the tomahawk. Hearken to his appeal:

If Editor Runyon is perverse in his intention to make us a daily feature of his personal remarks, we ask, (and it is not often that we ask favors of him, and if he has one whit of magnanimity in his character he will grant it,) that he will write with more elegance and more humor about our faults and errors, which are to be but human. We don't mind the roasting, but we do hate this butchery.

After that we shall expect that Mr. Runyon will never refer to Mr. Force in anything less elegant than blank verse. If he must needs say hard things once in a while, let him use quotations from Emerson, Oliver Wendell Holmes and Ruskin.—New York Tribune.

ABOUT SENSATIONS.

It is eminently proper that the season preceding Christmas should wear an air of mystery, since the family circle has so many secrets to be opened in the presentation of gifts on Christmas morning, but over in New Brunswick one "mystery" is no sooner cleared up than another delves itself upon a wondering public. Great is old Dutch town on things sensational! A few days ago a bundle of bloody rags was found in an isolated spot near that city and forthwith visions of a villian of the Holmes stripe ran across the eyeballs and in the finger-tips of the newspaper fraternity, who worked the police into a terrific state of activity and the populace into a frenzied fear that the demon might be in their very midst. But now an old colored "gemmen'" comes along with the common-place statement that the rags were those that a hemorrhage-afflicted man laid on, and he threw them there to get them out of the way. We await New Brunswick's next sensation with curiosity.

WORTHY LITTLE FELLOWS.

The little fellows who struggle through sunshine or storm, heat or cold, carrying the white sheets of paper on which are printed the current events of Plainfield life each day, albeit The Daily Press, presented their annual holiday offering Thursday night in the shape of a beautiful calendar. It was artistic and appropriate in design, representing as it does the frank, honest faces of a trio of the clan to which the Press carrier boys lend lustre and honor. They are faithful little fellows, these carrier boys, boyish in their ways, of course, but nevertheless filled with the stamina that may some day make them important figures in the affairs of the world. Such of the Press patrons as made these juvenile hearts happy with a little silver coin after the salutation of "A Merry Christmas" and the presentation of the calendar, may feel assured that it fell into hands who appreciated not only its worth but also the good will of its donor.

ALL VERY FINE.

To give proper credit to all the handsome Christmas exchanges that Uncle Sam's postal service has brought to the desks of these editorial rooms would exhaust pretty near all the adjectives that the English language possesses and take up many lines of reading space. The best that can be said, however, is that they were all fine examples of typographical art.

PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT.

Better commence practicing 1897 now. Then you wont't write it 1896 so many times a week from today.

Electric Bitters

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. DANCED CHRISTMAS IN.

A HAPPY AFFAIR HELD AT THE PARK CLUB THURSDAY NIGHT.

Their Event Conducted by the Junior Member of the Club Whose Dash in Completeness and Sociability Are Well Known.

Everybody was home from college and boarding school but there was no junior dance arranged at the Park Club. The young people of the club mourned over the fact until two of the young ladies suggested a subscription dance, and, with characteristic Park Club energy, successfully carried out their plans. The dance was held in the hall of the club on Christmas Eve, Thursday night, and a more enjoyable affair has not been held at the Park Club. Of course there was to be the regular Senior dance on New Year's Eve but the Juniors felt that they could not let this opportunity pass.

The patronesses were Mrs. Frank Sergeant Grant and Mrs. F. O. Ball. The dance was arranged by Miss Edith Clapp, Miss Adelaide Ball and the Junior committee, who joined hands in their efforts to make the affair a success. The club house never looked prettier than in its dress of evergreen and holly, arranged specially for the occasion by the practiced hand of Janitor Israel Jones.

Among those present were the Misses May Waring, Florence Waring, Emma Schoonmaker, Gertrude Andrews, Nancy Lawson, Maud Middledith, Ada Smock, Alice Barlow, Edith Clapp, Adelaide Ball, Katheryn Ball, Sarah Ball, Genevieve Daniel, Halla Van Deventer, Eleanor T. Van Deventer, Helen Clark, Bertha Clark, and the Misses Shreve, the Messrs. Case, Tyler, Van Buren, Goddard, Place, Schoonmaker, Lowe, Runyon, Rushmore, Middledith, Kirkner, McGee, Peck, Taylor, Fish, Hall, Laing, Long, Wilson, Dupee, Cook, Faber, Brown, Wells and Frost.

PASSING COMMENT.

These are the days when the coal dealer and the liveryman wear broad smiles.

* * * *

The return of Christmas visitors from this city was so great this morning that most of the New York trains were obliged to carry extra cars in order to accommodate the rush.

* * * *

George Stevens has an eye to business even when he grows epigrammatical. He says that since a green Christmas makes a fat grave yard a white one ought to make a full coal bin. And we all agree 'tis so.

* * * *

Last Tuesday City Treasurer Titsworth made out one of the largest cheques ever drawn in this city. It was for $58,561 and was made in favor of E. M. Wood, County Collector, in payment of Plainfield's share of the State, county, and State school taxes. The State and county taxes were $38,752, and the State school tax $19,809.

* * * *

All the villages and towns in Hunterdon county came near not having any weather today. The weather prognosticator from this city, who furnishes old Hunderton with anything from thundershowers to blizzards, nearly missed the mail train this morning and it was only by a 50-yard dash that the train was caught.

The soprano solo, "The Star," which will be sung at the Christmas service in the First Presbyterian church tomorrow evening, was written by Mr. W. E. MacClymont, organist of the church, and the words by Miss Lillian Torrey Glen, of this city, and will be rendered by her sister, Miss Catharine D. Glen, soprano soloist of the above church.

John Daly is meeting with not a little success in the theatrical world which has cast many an adventurer upon the shoals of failure and bankruptcy. Jack is the road manager for one of Rich & Maeder's melo-dramatic productions, and that the company is doing well in a time when it is a case of "the survival of the fittest" speaks volumes for his ability and capacity in his recently adopted profession.

* * * *

Yesterday was a bright and glorious day and the sleighing, particularly on East Front street, near the John Taylor Johnson property was par excellence. The roadbed was almost as smooth as a race track and in fact it was converted into one during the whole afternoon. There were many skirmishes during the whole afternoon, in which horses from this city, New Brunswick, Rahway and other places were entered. It was not, of course, racing for money. Since the racing was stopped on Park avenue a year or two ago, East Front street seems to be the place now.

The way to cure catarrh is to purify the blood, and the surest, safest, best way to purify the blood is by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, the One True Blood Purifier.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN AND NEW MARKET.

Mrs. W. J. Hamilton, of Newark, is visiting Mrs. T. C. Bodine of this place.

Miss Ruth Gaskill has returned from a several week's visit with relatives and friends in Rahway.

Brakeman William Wyckoff entertained three of his relatives from Mt. Vernon over Christmas.

Most of the stores in town were closed all day, yesterday, and the clerks were given a day in which to enjoy themselves.

Miss Mildred Titsworth is at home from the Normal school spending the holidays with her father, L. T. Titsworth, of Prospect avenue.

The New Market pond was alive with skaters, yesterday, over 200 being on it at one time, many of them coming from Plainfield and Dunellen.

The Emerydale station was wide open yesterday and last evening, but the part where sandwiches and coffee is usually dispensed was closed up tight as a drum.

The body of the late Thomas L. Thomas was taken to Greenwood, yesterday, for interment. Friends of the deceased accompanied the remains to their final resting place.

Individual shooting was participated in on the grounds of the Dunellen Gun Club, yesterday afternoon. The shooting was fair, but no remarkable scores were made.

The street car traffic between Plainfield and Dunellen on Christmas eve was perhaps as heavy as it has been at any time during the fall and winter months. During the day and evening the cars were many of them crowded with shoppers and sightseers.

Merchant A. A. Parker, who captured several prizes at the recent poultry show in the Cycle Academy, has received an order for one of his thoroughbred game roosters from a chicken fancier in SanFrancisco for breeding purposes. The bird will be carefully boxed and shipped by express.

The robbery in W. H. Coles' office Tuesday night, as told of exclusively in the Press the following day, still remains a mystery, and the guilty ones may never be apprehended. Mr. Coles admits that he has his eye on a certain party in the vicinity and the fellow is being closely watched.

The Christmas exercises in St John's church, yesterday, passed off without a hitch. The singing and recitation by the children were most enthusiasticaly received, and the address by Rev. Father Bogard, the pastor, was pertinent and up to date. Presents were distributed among the younger pupils in the Sunday-school.

Percey Sandford, of Washington Park, North Plainfield, was sleigh riding behind a spirited stepper on Main street, Thursday afternoon, when the animal suddenly took fright and ran away. Mr. Sandford was thrown out by the sudden overturning of the sleigh, which subsequenty righted itself, but fortunately he was not injured. Car No. 14 of the street railway service going west, was in the direct route of the runaway, but the motorman applied the brakes and stopping the car, jumped off and heroically captured the runaway before any further damage was done. The robes and blankets were gathered up and Mr. Sandford drove on to Plainfield.

It is stated upon most excellent authority that at the next regular meeting of the borough Council, the name of a competent night watchman will be submitted for approval, whose duty it will be to patrol the street and intercept safe robbers and other obnoxious persons. The borough now has a lockup which yawns for some one to inhabit it—for a time at least. The older residents of Dunellen readily call to mind some ten or twelve years ago, when the Township Committee, as it was then, paid a man to patrol the streets at night. But in his eagerness to please the people, one night the watchman saw a burglar escape from a second story window with his booty and as the robber run down the street, the officer shot at him and accidentally killed a merchant's cow. There has been no regular night watchman since.

Stands at the Head.

Aug. J. Bogel, the leading druggist of Shreveport, La., says: "Dr. King's New Discovery is the only thing that cures my cough, and it is the best seller I have." J. F. Campbell, merchant of Safford, Ariz., writes: "Dr. King's New Discovery is all that is claimed for it; it never fails, and is a sure cure for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I cannot say enough for its merits.'

Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds is not an experiment. It has been tried for a quarter of a century, and to-day stands at the head. It never disappoints. Free trial bottles at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

SCOTCH PLAINS.

John Collins returned Thursday night from a trip to Tarrytown, Yonkers and Poughkeepsie.

The Misses Annie and Jennie Collins, formerly of Plainfield, but now of New York, are guests of the sister, Mrs. John H. Blimm over the holidays.

C. E. Grant and Mrs. Grant, of Plainfield, participated in the disintegration of a fourteen pound turkey at the home of Mrs. Grant's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Paff, yesterday.

A beautiful and most artistically arranged Christmas tree was lighted at J. H. Blimm's Hotel last evening, in the presence of many relative and friends. There were many gifts bestowed upon the smaller members of the household, and the older ones were not forgotten by big odds.

The people of this village, or rather the ones having control of the fire department, must be awfully slow or else derelict in their duties, as the hook and ladder truck and the old fire engine have been "housed" in the street most of the time for the past few weeks. The winter elements will not help the apparatus one bit, and the sooner they are housed the better it will be at least for the taxpayers.

WESTFIELD.

Town Committeeman Charles G. Endicott, of Westfield, met with a painful accident on Wednesday night last. While going from his residence on Prospect street to his barn in the heavy snow storm Mr. Endicott slipped and in falling struck his face against the edge of a wooden box that happened to be near. His jaw was dislocated. Dr. Endicott, of Plainfield, a brother of the injured man, and Dr. Harrison, of Westfield, were summoned and reset the bone. The injury is a painful one and will keep Mr. Eudicott indoors for a week or more; but it is not at all dangerous.

THEATRICAL.

Toronto is a queer theatre town. It is a hard place for some shows to get into because of the custom duties, and harder for them to get out of for other reasons. Some stars known all over this country have not even been heard of, and the ignorance of some of the critics in "the most English city of America" is often amusing to managers on this side of the river. For instance, when Frank Connelly, a wide awake New York man, took hold of the Princess Theatre in Toronto he booked Frederick Warde, the tragedian, to open the house. He made the rounds of the newspaper offices, to inform the drama editors of the fact. To the Mail and Empire man he said: "Well, Mr. X——, I've got Frederick Warde for my first attraction." "Ward?" queried the editor, "Ward? H'm—yes—but where is Vokes?"

Faust as given by the Morrison Company will be the attraction at Music Hall, Monday evening, Dec. 28th. While the world endures, Goethe's tragic story of Faust and Marguerite will continue to live. The story has been celebrated in song and in its operatic form has been elaborately staged for many years, but it remained for this company to present it in worthy dramatic form with all effects and accessories necessary to give it that weirdness intended by the author. In this version the role of Mephisto is made a jolly, jovial devil, one well calculated to enchain the souls of men in the glamor of forbidden pleasures. The scenic effects are strongly brought out and serve to accentuate the dramatic situation in a vivid manner. One of the most notable effects is at the end of the first act, where Mephisto exults over the capture of the soul of Faust, when "midst dardness and thunder bursts" the blazing cross appears over the cathedral doors.

Herrmann.

The death of Herrmann has removed from the world its most ingenious magician. But the magic of man's creative genius is still revealed to us in many ways, and in no channel is it more apparent than in the new designs in bon bon spoons, glove buttoners, souvenir spoons, belt pins, paper cutters, hat markers, etc., especially designed for the Christmas trade, and obtainable in all the latest varieties at Collier's 103 Park avenue.

NOVEL BICYCLE BOAT.

Unique Mechanical Combination Devised by a Californian.

The Strange Craft Goes Eight Miles an Hour—It Has Weathered Rough Water and Can Turn Around In Its Own Length.

A bicycle that really goes to sea just like a boat, that carries its rider safely through storm or calm, that floats like a duck and turns in its own length, is the invention of a San Francisco man. Many inventors claim to have made water bicycles, but they are usually useful only as sources of amusement to the readers of journals of a humorous nature. The aquacycle which Capt. Colin Thompson has built, however, is, according to the New York Herald, not one of this kind, for it exists and has already carried its maker out to sea, and, what is still better, has brought him safely back.

This "bicycle," or aquatic wheel, combines features of the racing yacht, the bicycle and the steam launch. It has the propeller, rudder and machinery of the launch; the lines, hull and build of the yacht, and the complete workings of the bicycle, all combined. Capt. Thompson is a well-known character in San Francisco, and what he does not know about cogs, shafts and wheel fixtures in general could be written in a very small space.

He has succeeded in applying the motive power of the bicycle to the frame of a boat, and the combination makes the aquacycle. On the outside this craft, or vehicle, looks as much like a naphtha launch as anything else. The lines of the hull follow very nearly those of the most modern racing yachts, notably the Defender. At either end of the hull is an air-tight compartment, which gives additional buoyancy to the affair. In place of a rear wheel Capt. Thompson has a three-blade, six-inch propeller, and above that a rudder.

Above the gunwale is an ordinary saddle such as is common to all land cycles. A handle bar serves as tiller and the propeller is worked by the pedals. As the pedals are moved around they start a set of cog wheels, which in turn revolve the propeller shaft, and the three-blade six-inch propeller at the stern is sent revolving at the rate of 40 revolutions per minute. At this rate the craft will go eight and a half miles an hour, and the inventor claims that with a few alterations the speed can be brought up to 12 miles an hour. The hull of the boat is 12 feet 6 inches in length and 3 feet 3 inches in breadth. Her greatest draught is 14 inches. All of the machinery runs on ball bearings, and there is the least possible amount of friction.

As the rider sits on the machine about one-half of the body is above the gunwale. The pedals, acting on the cog wheel, which in turn operates the propeller, are down within what in a larger boat would be termed the fin. There is no sprocket and chain, but instead a series of beveled wheels connecting with the propeller shaft.

It has been demonstrated by practical tests that his combination craft can be used in almost any sort of weather. The air tanks at either end give it a buoyancy which reduces the danger of sinking almost to a minimum, and at the same time materially aids the rider in maintaining his position. This craft can turn in its own length, and while it can be used, as has been demonstrated, in almost any kind of weather, it is particularly adapted for use on inland water.

It can be loaded as heavily as any ordinary canoe, and the method of propulsion is much less fatiguing than either paddle or oars. There is no complicated machinery to get out of order, no gasoline or naphtha engine to care for and supply, and it is for this reason as much as any other that Capt. Thompson claims to have evolved a craft of material value to inland hunters and sportsmen as well as to those who have occasion to put off shore in all sorts of weather.

In addition to its many other unique features the entire machinery of the boat can be taken out and so compactly folded that it may be carried under one's arm, while the hull itself is so compactly folded that it may be carried around like any portage ordinarily used by trappers or hunters.

Capt. Thompson is now at work trying to simplify some of the machinery of the craft, and he claims that when he accomplishes this he will have a craft which can, without undue exertion, be pedaled through the water at the rate of 15 miles an hour, with very little exertion to the rider.

Where Women Do the Wooing.

Between the mountains of India and Persia is a powerful tribe among whom an extraordinary custom prevails. Women's rights apparently have received full recognition, for the ladies of the tribe can choose their own husbands. All a single woman has to do when she wishes to change her state is to send a servant to pin a handkerchief to the hat of the man on whom her fancy lights, and he is obliged to marry her, unless he can show he is too poor to purchase her at the price her father requires.

NOVEL FLOOR TREATMENT.

Inexpensive Floor Finishings in Paper Enamels and Paint.

The last thing in floor covering is paper. That is, the floor is laid with a paper imitating or representing grained oak, parquetry, tiles, mosaic pavement or what not. The process is as follows: The floor is first smoothed, then two or three layers of newspapers, saturated with flour paste, are applied, made smooth and allowed to dry. Then the wall paper—that which represents grained oak being preferred—is glued down on the substratum of newspapers, and, after being sized, is varnished. The chief recommendation of paper flooring is its cheapness; for a room not used for much traffic it will answer a purpose. It will not do if there is any dampness about the floor.

Enameling is another novel process for treating floors, but it differs from papering in that it is rather expensive, requiring, as it does, several coats of paint with vigorous intermediate rubbings down with fine glass paper. The ordinary enamels sold in the shops are not recommended for this purpose as, from the nature of their composition, they are apt to crack and chip.

Ebonizing for floors can be easily done by boiling logwood chips in water—one pound of chips to one pound of water—till the liquid is well colored. Apply this to the floor evenly and carefully, giving a second application, if the boards are close textured. When this is quite dry, apply in a similar way, a strong solution of suphate of iron in water. A good chemical ink-like black will be the result, which, after sizing, may be varnished like any other stain, or if preferable it may be polished with beeswax and turpentine. The duller surface so given is better, artistically speaking, than the glaring, shining surface given by a varnish, at any rate where a black stain is used. Apropos to a floor stain, any which pretends to be a floor varnish as well, and in which the varnish is a spirit as opposed to oil varnish, is a mistake in so far as floors are concerned. It may answer for some articles of furniture, but is not durable enough for floors. To an oil varnish, suitably colored, there is no objection; but a stain, subsequently sized and varnished, is best. It is a mistake to size the floor before staining it, although some people prefer so doing. It may save a little stain, but there is the certainty of the stain and the varnish peeling off eventually in flakes where there is much wear.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

WHAT SHOCKED HIM.

A Victim of Heart Disease Suffers a Trying Ordeal.

The waiter accidentally jogged the elbow of the man eating breakfast in the restaurant.

The morsel that he was about to consume fell to the ground.

The next moment he gave a startled cry and turned deathly pale.

All was confusion.

The proprietor and the occupants of the other tables jumped up and rushed to his assistance.

His face had assumed a bluish hue, which was quickly followed by a greenish color, and then by a purplish tinge.

The case looked serious, for he was evidently apoplectic.

Finally, to the relief of all, he was resuscitated.

All demanded an explanation.

"I am subject to heart disease," he at length exclaimed, "and any severe shock is likely to kill me. It's a wonder I'm alive to tell the tale."

"What tale?" they asked, eagerly.

"Heavens, gentlemen!" he replied, as his cheeks blanched at the recollection, "you'll hardly believe me, but I swear on my oath that when the waiter knocked that piece of bread and butter out of my hand it fell to the ground with the butter side up!"

The others surveyed him pityingly.

"Something has affected his brain," they whispered one to another. "Such a thing is unheard of. It could never have happened."

One by one they drew away and left him alone.—N. Y. World.

Savory Rice.

This makes a most appetizing dish. Well wash six ounces of rice. Put it in a saucepan of boiling water, and boil it for five minutes; this is to "blanch" it. Pour away the water, and leave the rice on a sieve to dry and cool. Take six ounces of raw, streaky bacon, remove the rind and cut into large dice. Put these into a clean pan and fry them a very pale brown; now add the rice and 1½ pints of any broth or stock you may have. Season carefully with pepper and salt. Simmer very gently for about 25 minutes, till the rice has absorbed the stock. Stir it very frequently or it will stick and burn. Also, keep on the lid, or the stock will waste away in steam. While it is cooking, rub about three or four fresh or tinned tomatoes through a sieve, so as to get about half a pint of the juice and pulp; mix well; make very hot. Turn out on to a hot dish. Arrange round the rice sippets of fried bread, or little rolls of bacon, or fried sausages cut into slices about a quarter of an inch thick.—Albany Journal.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

A Red-Letter Year for 1897.

THE ENTIRE NOVELTY of many of the plans for 1894 is noticeable. For instance, the series devoted to

"LONDON AS SEEN BY CHARLES DANA GIBSON." Mr. Gibson has not before appeared as a writer. He visited London last summer for SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE, for the purpose of depicting with pen and pencil those scenes and types which the huge metropolis presents in endless variety.

Of like novelty is the first considerable

NOVEL BY RICHARD HARDING DAVIS, "Soldiers of Fortune." The hero is one of the most vigorous men that Mr. Davis has drawn. Illustrated by C. D. Gibson.

"THE CONDUCT OF GREAT BUSINESSES." A beautifully illustrated series of articles of which the following are already completed:
"The Great Department Store."
"The Management of a Great Hotel."
"The Working of the Bank."
"A Great Manufactory."

"UNDERGRADUATE LIFE IN AMERICAN COLLEGES." A series of articles touching upon the life of our older universities as represented by the doings of the students themselves.
Judge Henry E. Howland writes on "Undergraduate Life at Yale."
Mr. James Alexander on "Princeton," and Robert Grant and Edward S. Martin on "Harvard."

"JAPAN AND CHINA SINCE THE WAR" will be a most interesting group of articles richly illustrated.

"THE UNQUIET SEX." Under the title of "The Unquiet Sex," Mrs. Helen Watterson Moody will write a series of articles:—"Woman and Reforms," "The College-Bred Woman," "Woman's Clubs," and "The Case of Maria" (a paper on domestic service).

W. D. HOWELLS'S "Story of a Play." In this Mr. Howells gives us the best novel he has ever produced in his delightful vein of light comedy.

GEORGE W. CABLE. In addition to the fiction enumerated there will be a series of four short stories by George W. Cable, the only ones he has written for many years.

HOW TO TRAVEL WISELY with a minimum of wear and tear must be regarded as an art little understood. MR. LEWIS MORRIS IDDINGS, in two articles, will offer a variety of useful suggestions and data on "OCEAN AND LAND TRAVEL." This will be happily rounded out by an article from MR. RICHARD HARDING DAVIS on "TRAVELERS ONE MEETS: Their Ways and Methods." The illustrations by American and foreign artists will be highly pertinent.

 It is impossible in a small space to even mention the many attractive features for 1897. A beautiful illustrated booklet has been prepared, which will be sent, postage paid, on request.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Harper's Weekly
IN 1897

With the end of 1896 HARPER'S WEEKLY will have lived forty years. In that time it has participated with all the zeal and power at its command in the great political events of the most interesting and important period in the history of the country and it has spread before its readers the accomplishment of science, arts, and letters for the instruction of the human mind and the amelioration of human conditions and of manners.

What the WEEKLY has been in its spirit and purpose, as these have been manifested principally in its editorial pages, it will continue to be.

It is impossible to announce with precision all that the WEEKLY will contain during the year 1897. It were as easy to announce what is about to happen in the world, what trimps for good government are to be won, what advances of the people are to be made, what is to be the outcome of the continuous struggle between the spirits of war and peace what is to happen in the far East, what is to be state of Europe twelve months hence, what new marvels of science are to be revealed, or what are to be the achievements of art and letters, for the WEEKLY is to be a pictorial record of all this.

Cartoons will continue to be a feature.

Serial Stories. A New England story by Miss MARY E. WILKINS, will begin in January. A tale of a Greek uprising against the Turks, by Mr. E. F. BENSON, the author of "Dodo," will follow. A sequel to "The House-Boat on the Styx," by Mr. JOHN KENDRICK BANGS, illustrated by Mr. PETER NEWELL.

More Short Stories will appear in the WEEKLY than it has been possible to publish during 1896.

Departments: Mr. W. D. HOWELLS's "Life and Letters" have been among the most charming features of periodical literature: Mr. E. S. MARTIN, and others will contribute observations on what is going on in "This Busy World:" "Amateur Sport" will remain the most important department of its kind in the country.

THE WEEKLY will continue to present to its readers the world's news most interesting to Americans, to make important advances in both the literary and artistic features, and to retain for itself the leading place in the illustrated journalism of the world.

SUNK OFF CAPE COD.

Schooner Carrie Walter Run Down by the Steamer Scandinavian.

Boston, Dec. 26.—The overdue Allan line steamer Scandinavian, from Glasgow, arrived last night, six days late, owing to bad weather, poor coal and green firemen. On Christmas eve she collided off Cape Cod with the lumber-laden schooner Carrie Walter, which vessel became a total wreck as the result of the collision, her crew of six men being brought here on the steamer. The accident was due to the steamship captain mistaking the schooner for the pilot boat on the Cape Cod station, as she burned flare-up lights used aboard the pilot fleet as a signal. Chief Mate Aitken answered what he thought to be a pilot boat's signal by burning a blue light to notify those on board that the steamer wanted a pilot. The wind was blowing from the northeast, which being a fair wind for sailing craft, the latter commenced to draw nearer the steamer and the steamer kept her course at a moderate rate of speed, naturally thinking that the supposed pilot boat would come about and launch a canoe, instead of which the schooner crashed into the steamer with terrific force, striking her on the starboard bow and doing considerable damage. An examination showed that the steamer was all right and a life boat was sent to the assistance of the schooner, but before it had gone far the schooner's yawl boat was seen approaching and both boats returned to the steamer on which the crew of six men were brought to this city. The Scandinavian has two holes in her starboard bow, one about two feet square just above the load line, while the other is on the bluff of the bow where a large piece of the schooner's jib-boom and a portion of her jib had lodged. When the collision occured the schooner's bows opened and filled with water and she must have capsized, as she was nowhere to be seen shortly afterwarde.

CECIL RHODES' SPEECH.

His Sarcastic Reference to the Jameson Investigation Arouses Comment.

Cape Town, Dec. 26.—At a reception given at Port Elizabeth to Cecil Rhodes, formerly prime minister of Cape Colony and manager of the British South Africa company, who is enroute to England to testify before the commission that will examine into the raid by Dr. Jameson into the Transvaal, Mr. Rhodes made a speech, certain parts of which have excited considerable comment here. He treated lengthily upon South African affairs, touching somewhat fully upon affairs in Rhodesia, whence he arrived a few days ago after taking part in the suppression of the Matabele revolt, and then said that he was going home to be examined regarding the Jameson expedition by his fellow-countrymen, whose unctuous rectitude he well knew. This sarcastic reference to the investigating commission is taken to indicate that Mr. Rhodes' testimony will be far more interesting than has been anticipated.

Washington's Christmas Holiday.

Washington, Dec. 26.—Christmas day was clear, dry and cold. The day was celebrated in the usual manner, all government business being entirely suspended and a majority of the business concerns and stores closed. There were services in all the churches. President and Mrs. Cleveland had a Christmas tree for the children and spent the day at home, receiving no guests. Most of the members of the cabinet had family reunions at their homes. To-day is almost as quiet as yesterday, many of the firms doing no business.

SEVERAL BIG FIRES

Christmas Day Also Fraught with Numerous Fatal Casualties.

MILLION DOLLAR BLAZE IN NEW YORK

Many Narrow Escapes and a Hundred People Rendered Homeless---Church Destroyed at Wilkesbarre---Firemen Injured at Trenton.

New York, Dec. 26.—The early Christmas morning fire on East Thirty-third street destroyed property valued at nearly a million dollars and rendered 100 people homeless. Four buildings, including Schomer's piano warehouse and the New York Polyclinic hospital, were destroyed. The destroyed buildings also include a large five-story brick factory building. The piano warehouse occupied a fourth of the block and the Polyclinic was a four-story building with a front of fifty feet on East Thirty-third street. The fire started on the second floor of Pinare's snuff factory at 211 East Thirty-fourth street. When the first engines arrived on the scene the fire had already communicated with the piano factory adjoining on the east. The police aroused the sleeping tenants of the building on the west of the burning factory. There was a panic when the tenants found smoke pouring in their rooms, and in the excitement and demoralization which followed the cry of "Fire!" several of the tenants escaped narrowly with their lives. With the aid of the police eighteen families, consisting of seventy-five people, were dragged and carried from the building. Sturdy police with small children in their arms were cheered by the large crowd as they brought them down stairs and out on the street. The conflagration gained such enormous proportions that the hospital in the rear of the warehouse, and fronting on Thirty-fourth street, was in imminent danger. There were fifty-eight patients in the building, and when they were aroused there was another panic. Patients whose condition had been very serious leaped from their beds and ran towards the stairs. The flames communicated with the roof of the hospital at 8:30, and in several minutes the upper floor was belching forth huge waves of smoke and fire. The huge flagstaff on the hospital fell at 9:15 and struck the elevated structure. It then fell to the sidewalk, narrowly missing a fireman. The fire in the factory, warehouse and tenement were under control at 10 o'clock, but only after everything in them had been destroyed. Nothing remained of the three buildings except parts of the outer walls and a blazing mass of lumber and woodwork in the interiors.

HOME-MADE CANNON EXPLODES

Fearful Result of an Accident at Atlanta, Ga., Yesterday.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 26.—In Ackworth young men improvised a cannon by stopping up one end of a three-inch cast-iron water-pipe yesterday. They were tamping a charge of powder with a crowbar when a terrific explosion occurred. The head of Alonzo Hansworth, colored, was blown off, the legs of Lowrey Boger and John Russell, also colored, were blown off, and the eyes of Charlie Stegall, a prominent young white man, were blown out. There were also many minor injuries.

Frozen To Death on Christmas Day.

Baltimore, Dec. 26.—Harry Ruff, 19 years old, celebrated Christmas eve with a party of friends, and in the course of the night drank too much. He separated from his youthful companions at a late hour and started for his home, Merriman's lane, near the Falls road, a quarter of a mile from the city limits. His dead body was found during the morning lying in the roadway. He either fell or lay down in the road and was frozen to death.

Two Firemen Injured.

Trenton, Dec. 26—The burning of a Christmas tree last night at the home of William Lever, on Lamberton street, caused an alarm of fire. Truck No. 2, in hastening to the scene, was overturned, and tillerman Albert Snyder and truckman August Monde were badly injured. The former was taken to St. Francis' hospital, and it is feared he will die. He leaves a wife and four little children.

Burned to Death.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 26.—Miss Eva Jones, 27 years of age, of 20 Essex avenue, this city, died yesterday in St. Michael's hospital from injuries received at her home Thursday night. She went too near the stove and her dress caught fire. Before the flames were extinguished she received frightful injuries. Raymond Shoverling ran into the house and tried to put out the flames, and in attempting to do so had his hands badly burned.

Shot and Instantly Killed.

Baltimore, Dec. 26.—Conrad Sommers, aged 41, a saloonkeeper at Gough and Third streets, Highlandtown, a suburb of this city, was shot and instantly killed yesterday by Nicholas White, 49 years of age. Sommers playfully butted White with his head, whereupon the larter drew a revolver and sent a bullet through his heart. White is in jail. Both men have large families.

Livery Stable Burned at Willimantic.

Willimantic, Conn., Dec. 26.—The livery stable of Mulligan Bros., a two-story frame affair on Jackson street, was destroyed by fire last evening. Loss, about $1,200.

WHAT HE MISSED.

The Rattlesnake, the Possum and the Angry Georgia Negro.

An old Georgia darky, after a weary tramp of four hours, treed a fat possum.

The night was late, and he was tired out, so, having secured the prize, he killed it and resolved to spend the remainder of the night in the woods.

He hollowed a deep place in a pile of leaves, placed the possum therein for safe keeping, pillowed his head thereon and gave himself to slumber.

He had not slept long before he was vaguely aware of the fact that his head was bobbing up and down, impelled by some power beneath.

He seemed to think he was at home in his own bed, and as he felt his head bumped here and there he murmured drowsily:

"Oh, stop dat! Go furder! Stop dat, I tell you!"

But suddenly there was a cold, clammy feeling on the back of his neck, and, wide awake now, he sprung to his feet.

There, in full coil, was a huge rattlesnake, on whose body he had been peacefully reposing.

But his possum was safe. He made sure of that, and then he addressed himself to the rattler:

"You slick tongue devil!" he cried. "You done wake me up, is you? All right. I gwine ter take this stick heah en beat you ter a jelly. But ef you'd er swallered dat possum I'd er cut yo' head clean off."—Atlanta Constitution.

Teutonic Calm on a State Occasion.

Governor Thomas T. Crittenden, who succeeded Phelps in the executive chair, was inaugurated in January, 1881, with more ceremony and frills than any governor since the war. There were military and bands galore, and special trainloads of people came from Kansas City and St. Louis to witness the pageant. The military features were in charge of Captain Hawley of St. Louis, who was grand marshal of the day.

Brockmeyer, who, as lieutenant governor, was presiding over the senate, was lolling back in his chair, on the president's stand, smoking a cob pipe and awaiting notice of the time for the senate to proceed to the hall of the house of representatives, where the two bodies, in joint session, were to receive the new governor and the inauguration would be consummated. The senate lobby was crowded, and the senators were in their seats, on the tiptoe of expectancy, for martial strains could be heard on the outside.

At this juncture a figure in a glittering and brilliant uniform pushed through the crowd and marched half way up the aisle. It was the marshal of the day, Hawley. Drawing his sword, he made a military salute and pompously announced:

"Mr. President, the governor of Missouri and his staff now approach."

Without removing his pipe from his mouth, Brockmeyer replied:

"Vell, let him coom. Dot is what we are here for."

When the laugh had subsided, the senate proceeded to the house, and the inauguration was completed.—Kansas City Times.

WE

Care more about closing out our entire stock of Christmas Goods for the next three days than we do about the profits we make on them.

You have no idea how LOW we have cut our prices down to until you come and see.

We don't want a thing left over, so we will devote the remaining three days before Christmas to clear them out regardless of what they cost us.

Come in just as soon as you can, while the variety is good, and make your selections; there is no trouble at all about the prices, and everything is just as new and pretty as it can be.

We were awfully busy last Saturday, up to 10 o'clock at night, with our two wagons and big truck delivering goods from one end of the town to the other, including the towns all around.

We received today a large lot of 6-piece Toilet Sets, first quality, underglazed, handsomely decorated in poppy designs in brown, blue, green and gray. It's so late we mark them at $1.10. Also in the same lot, as handsome a variety of Jardiniers as you want to see. They are marked low, too.

Our order, too, for Umbrellas from the factory of Folmer, Clogg & Co. is delated, therefore they will have to be marked away down in order to sell them. A Good School Umbrella as low as 39c., and better goods proportionally low. In fact, everything in the Christmas line must go; no matter about the cost.

MARRIED MEN WIN AGAIN

THE BENEDICTS DOWN THE BACHELORS OF THE PARK CLUB.

Single Fellows Cannot Down the Pins With the Constancy and Precision That Characterizes Their Opponents.

"Needles and pins,
Needles and pins.
When a man marries
His troubles begin."

So sang, or rather shouted, the Bachelors of the Park Club Saturday evening when their second bowling match with the Benedicts of that club was in progress. It did not do any good, however, for the second game resulted the same as the first, an overwhelming victory for the married men. Their very effective mascot, the "Yellow Kid," occupied his old position over the score-board and smiled at the Bachelors.

At first it seemed as if the single men were going to win, for they started off at a lively pace and began to increase their lead steadily up to the fourth frame, when they led by 87 pins. Some of the faces of the married men were very long, but the spritely Mayor of the borough and his Senatorial friend and neighbor did not lose courage and trusted in the still smiling "Yellow Kid." The ladies smiled on the "kids," as the married men called them, and all seemed well. Then in an unlucky moment one of the Bachelors thought of that old nursery rhyme given above, and the bowlers repeated it in mighty tones. That turned the tide and the ladies cast their smiles in another direction, while the pins seemed only too glad to tumble down for the Benedicts. The fifth frame was a wonderful one for the Benedicts, and they made strikes and spares in reckless profusion. The game grew more and more exciting. The married men were decreasing their opponents' lead rapidly and at the seventh frame were 46 pins in the lead.

The last three frames were remarkable for the poor bowling of the Bachelors and the phenomenal game that their opponents put up. The windup was rather exciting on account of the last expiring effort of the Bachelors to overcome their opponents' lead. The effort was a brave one, but victory was not theirs. The Benedicts shouted and squealed in a most remarkable manner and wound up with giving three cheers for the "disconsolate Bachelors."

The teams lined up somewhat differently than they did the week before. The Benedicts were plus a Senator, while the Bachelors had lost their solitary public official, Councilman-elect Wm. N. Runyon. Matthews was out again in his famous white sweater and carried a rabbit's foot for good luck, but he threw it away before the game was over. McCutchen, the "Freshman from Yale," as they called him, rolled in his old-time form, and made the high score of the evening.

The individual scores were as follows:

Taken to Jamesburg.

Saturday morning Charles Milligan and Louis Wilson, the lads who recently committed the robbery in this city, and who were committed to the Reform School were taken to that institution by Sheriff Kirk and Warden Blore. The boys were neatly attired in fine clothing and wore russet shoes and fedora hats. One of the boys received a package of Christmas gifts from his mother, but seemed to manifest no particular interest in its reception.

Death of Mrs. Horton.

The death of Mrs. Horton, of Somerset street, widow of the late S. O. Horton, occurred last night, after a long illness. She was in her eighty-fifth years, and had been growing feeble for sometime. A few months ago her son, Lester Horton, died. Mrs. Horton leaves two daughters, Mrs. Henry Clay Randolph and Mrs. Cory. AMUSEMENTS OF WINTER

SKATING, SLEIGHING AND COASTING MUCH IN VOGUE NOW.

Young People Take Advantage of the Opportunities for Exhilirating Sport That the Cold Snap Affords—Some Straw Rides.

With the cold weather and the snow come the winter amusements, skating, sleighing and coasting. Where the snow has been brushed off the ice, the skating is good. The ice is thick and quite smooth and the young people, and some of the older ones too, have been spending their afternoons and evenings on the ice. Christmas day there were many out and Saturday also. New Market pond is in first rate condition and several parties of young people went from this city to that pond on Saturday afternoon and evening.

Straw rides have been frequent during the last week. The Misses Langdon, Wyckoff and Duffy, of this city, arranged a straw ride for Christmas night. There were thirteen in the party but it didn't seem to spoil the fun, for the ride was a very pleasant one. Then the party went to the home of the Misses Duffy, of Central avenue, where refreshments were served and a little dance held.

A gay party started from the home of Augustus VanDeventer on Willow avenue, on Saturday evening, and enjoyed a pleasant ride on the county road.

There were two straw rides that started from Dunellen on Saturday evening. One was gotten up by John Fisher and Charles Mattis and went out for a pleasurable ride on the county road. The other was a "stag" racket and was enjoyed by a number of the young men of that borough.

The coasting was fair on Broadway hill but the superior attractions of the skating kept many away. There were only a few of the young people on the hill on Satutday afternoon. They found the hill smooth and to bobs went down as far as the first street.

NIPPED NOSES AND EARS

JACK FROST LETS ALL KNOW THAT HE IS HEREABOUTS.

The Coldest Night of the Season, the Mercury in Thermometers Dropping to Zero—Ice is Making Very Fast Just Now.

What a jolly time it was for Jack Frost last night. The evening was clear and he looked out that it was clear enough. He nipped the noses and ears of the good people as they were coming home from church and played all his usual pranks. Then he chased the mercury around until it hid away under the zero mark and stayed there until Old Sol came out to drive away Jack Frost.

It was the coldest weather of the winter. Nobody doubted that when they woke up this morning. Even the visitors here from a colder climate have a wholesome respect for the Jack Frost of Plainfield. According to the self-registering thermometers in Weather Observer Naegle's yard and in front of Armstrong's pharmacy, the mercury fell just to the zero mark during the night. In other thermometers the mercury fell below that point, in some as low as five degrees below. There was no wind and the air was nipping cold, and those that were out last evening had to keep moving to keep warm.

Of course, the skating was improved by the cold as was, too, the sleighing and it gave the people of Plainfield a taste of real winter.

AN INCIPIENT BLAZE.

Stove Set Fire to the Floor of Michael Watson's Place.

An alarm of fire from Box 45, corner of Muhlenberg place and South Second street, today noon, called the department to Michael Watson's place, corner of South Second street and Grant avenue, where a stove had set fire to the wainscoting and floor in the store. The alarm was sent in by Frank Fine with a key from Potter's Press Works. The boarders living over the store came to the rescue and extinguished the flames by the time the department arrived. Chief Doane was at the Pond Tool Works at the time and he rendered valuable assistance. The damage by fire was slight.

More Smoke Than Anything Else.

Saturday evening, about 5:30, Councilman Fisk telephoned to fire headquarters and told those in charge that there was a chimney on fire at the home of Rev. C. L. Goodrich, at the corner of Seventh street and Madison avenue. Chief Doane and No. 2 hose wagon responded at once and learned that a wood fire had been started in an open fire-place, and for some reason it was thought that the chimney was on fire. A hand extinguisher was used and very quickly all d nger was removed.

SWEET CAROLS MAKE MELODY FOR HIS BIRTHDAY.

THE DAY OF THE SAVIOR'S BIRTH COMMEMORATED IN CHURCHES WITH SPECIAL SERVICES.

Edifices Made Beautiful With Holiday Decorations, Vocalists Filled the Air With Joyous Songs and Ministers Told the Simple Story of a Life Which Ended on the Cross That All Might be Saved—Programmes in the Various Churches.

TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

Services in commemoration of the birth of the Saviour of the world were held in the Trinity Reformed church yesterday at both the morning and evening sessions. As you entered the church a beautiful star was noticeable hanging over the pulpit, while from that star, the emblem of the one that guided the wise men "from afar," radiated ropes of evergreen were run to the various pillars at the side, typical of the great joy that spread throughout all the world at the dawning of that star. Spanning the pulpit was an arch of evergreens, from which was suspended five Christmas bells. Each bell was represented by a letter, which together formed the word "Peace." Evergreens were also profusely banked around the organ and pulpit, with festoons of the green roping from pillar to pillar. H. C. VanEmburgh, who designed and executed these artistic decorations, received many warm congratulations on the efforts of his labors.

At the morning service there was special music by the regular church choir, Arthur L. Titsworth, organist, all of which was very acceptably rendered. Rev. J. F. Riggs, D. D., of New Brunswick, delivered a most able Christmas sermon, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

In the evening "Love's Token," an original service for Christmas, was rendered by the Sunday-school and a large chorus choir, composed of members of the Sunday-school and as at the morning service, the edifice was filled. Superintendent E. E. Anthony presided, and H. J. Martin was precentor. A beautiful organ voluntary and the opening chorus, "Awake! Awake!" was followed by the invocation and the responsive reading. Miss Elsie Tier, only three years old, gave a little recitation and then followed a most acceptably rendered and highly appreciated programme of singing and recitations. "Christmas Bells" was most creditably rendered by the following young ladies, in costume: Eva Dunavan, Martie Anthony, Emma Line, Carrie Fritz, Lizzie Laing and Bessie Martin, representing in their recitations and costumes, England, Scotland, Germany, Norway and America.

Horace J. Martin, Jr., sang a tenor solo very acceptably during the evening.

The primary department which rendered such glorious assistance, was in charge of Mrs. J. M. Tier, superintendent, Miss Minnie Arnold, assistant, Miss Nettie Kreitling, accompanist. The following programme was most acceptably rendered.

Recitation—"A Little Girl's Story." Bessie Randall.
Song—"Ring Out The Glad Tidings," School.
Recitation—"The Christmas Tree." Anna Randall.
Recitation—"The True Christmas Spirit." Katie Bodine.
Song—"Ringing For Jesus."
Recitation—"If," Ruth Berg.
Recitation—"The First Christmas." Hattie Randall.

Rev. Dr. Riggs, in his address, congratulated the school for its superior singing, and the teachers for the good work they have accomplished. He compared a pin and needle, the former having a head and the latter an eye. Boys and girls should have a head, and the Sunday-school teachers the relations of life and light. Only from the Christmas tree is taken that which hangs on it. The same applies to the Sunday-school; good Christian work must be put into practice before anything can be got out of it; the Bible, hymns and teachers are of no practical value, unless there is a greater power behind it.

Here the speaker said that when a boy he lived in the Turkish Empire, where today the people, many of them, have nothing to eat and are in a most wretched condition. The true Christian spirit is to get right down in your souls and much good will go out into the world.

Three foremost thoughts, said the preacher, are: Impatience; Jesus waited 30 years, yet he was patient all this time. Boys once out of school are anxious for business, and girls lose their parental control. Jealousy is foolish and wicked, it is unlovely and shows an unamiable spirit, Jesus was not jealous, but loved all. Life is worth living, not from the fact of what we have, but what we are. Never talk about yourself. Self bragadocio is poor business. In this respect Jesus was ever cautious."

In conclusion Dr. Riggs said "Don't put all your steam in your whistle. Trust your efforts to Christ and he will reward you with his presence."

CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH.

Beautiful music was a feature of the Christmas services at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church yesterday. Special musical services were held there in the morning and evening while the Sunday-school of that church and all its chapels met together in the afternoon for their Christmas service.

The interior of the church was handsomely decorated for the occasion. Evergreen roping was festooned about the front of the church while wreaths and stars, made of the same, were hung over the pulpit in a tasteful manner. Palms, potted plants and hot-house flowers were banked in front of the platform and around the sides of it, half hiding the pulpit. The desks and the tables at either end of the platform were also covered with the floral decorations.

The programme of the music for the morning, printed in Saturday's Daily Press, attracted many to the church and every seat was filled soon after the service commenced. The programme was followed out as published and was greatly enjoyed. The choir consisted of the following: Mrs. Elizabeth Hamlin Fassett, soprano; Miss Annie P. Hardenbergh, contralto; Elmer E. Runyon, tenor; Charles L. Lewis, bass; Frank J. Smith, organist; assisted by Mrs. J. K. Myers, Mrs. W. H. Manning, Mrs. Otto Arens, Miss Emma Schoonmaker, Mrs. F. T. Clawson, F. E. Walz, G.B. Schoonmaker, J. Machado and Miss Nellie Udelle, violinist.

The offering was for the benefit of the Muhlenburg Hospital and consisted of $152 in cash and $76 in subscriptions.

The Christmas services of the Sunday-schools of the church and chapels were held in the afternoon in the main body of the church. Besides the home Sunday-school, there were the children from the Sunday-schools of the Bethel Chapel, Hope Chapel and Warren Chapel, and together they nearly filled the church, leaving little room for the friends of the children who wished to attend the services. The instrumental music was furnished by the organ and an orchestral, composed of a number of the young men of the church. There were prayers by Rev. J. O. McKelvey and Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, pastors of the chapels, several carols by the schools and an address by Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D., pastor of the Crescent Avenue church. He made a few remarks of cheer to the children, welcoming them to the main church and then spoke of the significance of the day in honor of which the services were being held. There were two selections by the organ and orchestra.

The evening service was even more largely attended than the morning service and the seating capacity of the church was utterly unequal to the demands. Every seat was filled before the service began and many were standing in the back of the church during the exercises. The special feature of the services was the Christmas cantata, "The Holy Child," which was given by the regular quartette, assisted by those already mentioned. The music was grand and it was given in a splendid manner. The cantata came first and then followed the regular evening service, somewhat shortened on account of the musical part of the programme. The choir rendered several carols during this part of the services.

The sermon was by the pastor, Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D. His text was from Luke, 2nd chapter, 11th verse: "Behold I bring you tidings of great joy." The sermon was appropriate to the occasion and told of the first Christmas Day.

The Christmas sermon was preached by Rev. Harris E. Adriance, of New York, who took as his text the 11th verse of the 2nd chapter of St. Luke: "There is born to you this day in the city of David a Savior which is Christ the Lord." The sermon was filled with good thoughts for the Christmas season and was a very helpful discourse.

FIRST M. E. CHURCH.

Christmas was duly celebrated at the First M. E. church yesterday. There was a special Christmas service in the morning by Rev. C. R. Barnes, D. D., and the Sunday-school held its special exercises in the afternoon. There were no evening services. The church looked very pretty in its Christmas trimmings. Long strings of evergreen roping were festooned about the front of the church and over the organ loft.

WORK FOR SANTA CLAUS

FESTIVALS OF YULETIDE TO BE HELD IN CHURCHES TODAY AND TOMORROW

The Children Will be Made Happy by the Gifts That Kris Kringle Will Bring to Them—Elaborate Programmes Arranged.

The Christmas services were held in the churches yesterday, but this evening and tomorrow evening the different Sunday-schools will hold their Christmas festivals. It is of this that the children have been dreaming for the last month, this annual visit of Santa Claus to the church and the accompanying boxes of candy and other gifts. As just before the time of the church excursions, the Sunday-schools have began to swell in numbers and there is renewed interest in the Christmas season. Most of the Sunday-schools try to have the festival come on the same night and this year they are about evenly divided between tonight and tomorrow night. There are all sorts of wonderful plans and surprises for the great minds in all the churches who have been at work trying to think of something novel and something new. How they succeeded will be seen at the different entertainments.

The Sunday-school of the Crescent Avenue church will hold its entertainment this evening in the chapel. The primary department will hold its own festival in the afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and the main school will meet at 8:30 o'clock in the evening. Santa Claus has promised to come and bring his choicest gifts. The congregation are invited to attend both entertainments.

A wonderful programme has been prepared for the Congregational church this evening. It begins at 8 o'clock.

The Grace P. E. church will hold its festival this evening in the parish house. A great time is being arranged which will excell any previous efforts.

The Sunday-school of St. Stephen's church will hold its celebration this evening to which the congregation is invited.

The Church of the Redeemer will also hold its festival this evening in the church on Grove street.

Elaborate preparations have been made for the entertainment at the Seventh-Day Baptist church tomorrow evening. It is sure to be something nice and the congregation has been invited to come.

A Christmas entertainment of unusual merit has been provided for the scholars of the First Baptist Church, to-morrow evening. The primary department will enjoy their festivities in the afternoon.

At Warren Chapel, to-morrow afternoon and evening, the Christmas festivals will be held. The young people will be entertained in the afternoon and the older ones in the evening.

The Sunday school scholars of Holy Cross church will be entertained tomorrow evening with Christmas festivities of unusual attractions.

Stands at the Head.

Aug. J. Bogel, the leading druggist of Shreveport, La., says: "Dr. King's New Discovery is the only thing that cures my cough, and it is the best seller I have." J. F. Campbell, merchant of Safford, Ariz., writes: "Dr. King's New Discovery is all that is claimed for it; it never fails, and is a sure cure for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I cannot say enough for its merits.'

Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds is not an experiment. It has been tried for a quarter of a century, and to-day stands at the head. It never disappoints. Free trial bottles at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

A Preparatory Service.

The preparatory service of the Crescent Avenue church will be held at eight o'clock, to be followed by a meeting of the session. Those wishing to come into the communion of the church may meet the Session either on Wednesday or Saturday evening.

LAST CHAPEL SERVICE.

BUT A FEW DAYS REMAIN OF MONROE AVENUE CHAPEL.

James McGee, the Father of the Chapel, Reviews the Work in Retrospect—To Become a Church on New Year's.

A service of more than usual interest was held at Monroe Avenue chapel last evening, and the attendance was large. There was not special music but James McGee gave a retrospect, which was very appropriate in connection with the last days of the chapel.

Mr. McGee has for several years been closely identified with the work at the chapel and is well fitted to give a sketch of the chapel's history. It was about seventeen years ago that a mission was started at the corner of West Front street and Clinton avenue, by Mrs. Haff, Mrs. Crane, Mr. Coriell and several others. Owing to certain conditions it was with difficulty that work was continued. However, good work was accomplished. About five years ago, when those in charge were about to give up the mission, the sympathies of Mr. McGee and other members of the First M. E. church were enlisted and the work was taken up with renewed vigor and earnestness.

Very soon afterward property was purchased on Monroe avenue and a chapel was erected. It was then that the work progressed. Rev. Mr. Munson, a student, was called to look after the work temporarily and later Rev. W. C. O'Donnell was called. The latter was really the first pastor. As time went on the membership increased and it was found necessary to erect the building, which now adjoins the chapel, which is known as Epworth House. At present the chapel membership is about 100 and the Sunday-school membership is over 200. All branches of the work are well organized and when the chapel becomes a church next Thursday night it will start out with great promise.

Following Mr. McGee's remarks, Rev. W. C. O'Donnell made a few remarks, which were a fitting close to the service.

PARK CLUB LOST BY ONE TRICK.

Failed to Wrest the Whist Championship From the Bostons.

The eleventh match of the season for the American Whist League trophy was played at Boston on Saturday between the American Whist Club, of Boston, holders, and the Park Club, of this city, challengers. The contest was won by the Bostonians by the score of eighteen tricks to seventeen. It was the closest match of the season. The teams were:

American Whist Club—L. M. Bouve, C. L. Becker, W. S. Fenollosa and H. H. Ward.

Park Club—G. F. Rogers, S. St. J. McCutchen, J. B. Howell and Samuel Townsend.

The Park Club has twice held the trophy, defeating the Hamiltons and the Philadelphia Whist Club in two matches in March, 1895. Then the Parks lost to Albany. Last November the Jerseymen challenged the Hamiltons, but were defeated by sixteen tricks.

Draws and Talks.

The fourth entertainment of the Y. M. C. A. star course will be given New Year's night by S. M. Spedon, artist entertainer and caricaturist, of New York. Mr. Spedon is said to be unequaled in his particular line of work. Nothing else quite like it has ever been seen. One of the most novel, best and varied entertainments before the public. Something you ought to hear and see.

The Sleigh Overturned.

While one of Captain Hand's sleighs was conveying a party from Hope Chapel to the Crescent Avenue church, yesterday afternoon, the vehicle turned too short at the corner of Central avenue and West Seventh street and the occupants were dumped in a promiscuous manner into a snow bank. The accident caused a good deal of excitement but no one was seriously hurt.

Major Anderson Post Inspected.

The annual inspection of Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., was held Saturday evening, at which time Assistant Department Inspector Hudson, of Kilpatrick Post, Elizabethport, officiated. The work was performed by Post 109 in a creditable manner and they were commended by the inspector.

The following are the Plainfielders who will go on the Old Point Comfort tour of A. V. D. Honeyman that leaves today: The Misses Helen A. Coward, Lucia N. and Louise Wood.

A Large Collection.

The Christmas collection at St. Mary's church amounted to $690, the largest ever contributed on that day in the history of the church.

THE WORK OF FIENDS

Train Wreckers Cause an Awful Disaster in Alabama.

NEARLY THIRTY LIVES WERE LOST

A Passenger Train Crashes Through a Bridge 110 Feet to the River Below --- Victims Mangled and Cremated in the Coaches.

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 28.—The most horrible train wreck in the south since the famous one at Statesville, S. C., in 1891, occurred at an early hour Sunday morning near this city, when a passenger train crashed through a trestle to a river 110 feet below. Twenty-seven bodies have been taken from the wreck, and a more complete search of the charred train may reveal more. It is also most certain that the wreck was caused by fiends for the purpose of robbery. Of those on the train nine escaped death and several of these will die from their injuries. None of them can give a correct account of how the accident occurred. Of the dead many were so badly mangled or charred by fire, which completed the destruction of the battered cars, that identification is impossible. The train left Birmingham to make the daily circuit of the mining towns in that section of the country, and most of the persons on board were miners and their families taking advantage of the excursion tickets on sale for the holidays. In crossing the Cahaba river there is an iron trestle, surmounted by woodwork, 110 feet above the water, which at this stage is only four feet deep. The engine fell at right angles to the line of the bridge with the cars piled no top of it and around it. Engineer White was found with his charred hand still grasping the throttle. To add fury to the event, the flames from the stoves in the coaches ignited the wreckage and the entire mass was burned to the edge of the water. The only one of the train crew that escaped with his life from the wreck was the colored fireman, Sam Spencer. He jumped from the engine while it was in mid air and falling into the river escaped almost by a miracle with only a broken arm. Wild with fright, he fled for the nearest station to give the alarm, but ere he reached this a farmer passing saw the condition of affairs and went to a telegraph station with his horse at full speed. Telegrams were sent to Birmingham, and a relief train went to the scene, but before it reached there the flames had done all of their work, and the destruction was complete.

HER SIXTH MARRIAGE.

Four of Mrs. Linter's ex-Husbands To Officiate at Her Coming Wedding.

Providence, Dec. 28.—The marriage of Mrs. Eleanor B. Linter to her sixth husband will occur to-morrow at the Church of Emanuel, and four of her ex-husbands will act as ushers. The entire five would have been present, but the fifth man met with an accident last week and is confined to his bed. Contrary to the ordinary run of such affairs, the lady and all her former husbands are on excellent terms. They are also great friends of Augustus Thistlewood, who is to be her sixth husband. The future Mrs. Thistlewood was Miss Eleanor Riblet when she was first married. Her husband was a Cleveland man. He is the one who is hurt, but he has sent her a wedding present and invited her and Mr. Thistlewood to spend their honeymoon at his place, an invitation which has been accepted. In every instance the lady has obtained a divorce without opposition and without losing the friendship of any of her spouses. She convinced them all that they were not well mated, and every one of them accepted the situation gracefully and retired respectfully with proffers of assistance at any time when called on. Husband No. 2 is a Mansfield man, Arthur K. Singleton; No. 3 is Hiram E. Kramp of Rochester, N. Y. The fourth man is Albert Edward Derbey, an Englishman, and the fifth is Walter E. Devenish Linter of New Castle, Pa. It will be the turn of the latter to take office as president of the Eleanor B. Riblet club, which was organized a few years ago by the first three ex-husbands, each of whom has served a term as presiding officer. None but men who have been husbands of the lady are eligible for membership. They dine once a year, and their ex-wife is never absent from the annual dinner in her honor. The dinner for 1896 will take place this evening. None of the ex-husbands has married again.

Mark Hanna's Plans.

Cleveland, Dec. 28.—The rumor that Mark Hanna is ill and will go to Thomasville, Ga., to recruit is untrue. Mr. Hanna usually spends some time every winter at Thomasville, but has made no plans thus far this winter to go south. He will leave Cleveland for Chicago on the evening of Jan. 10 to be present at the banquet of the Hamilton club on Jan. 11. He will return to Cleveland and some time during the month will probably make another trip to Washington. He has no definite plans for going south.

Minister McKinney Enroute to Washington

Galveston, Tex., Dec. 28.—Hon. I. F. McKinney, United States minister at Bogata, accompanied by his niece, arrived here yesterday on the British ship Capella. Mr. McKinney declined to be interviewed and left last evening for Washington.

Illinois Striking Miners Give In.

St. Louis, Dec. 28.—The miners of the Belleville, Ill., district who have been on strike for eight days for an increase from 35 cents to 40 cents have decided to return to work at the old wages.

DEATH OF J. M. READ

The Well-Known American Diplomatist Passes Away in Paris.

STRICKEN DOWN WITH PNEUMONIA

Educated at a Military School, Practiced Law in Philadelphia and Represented This Country in Greece ---His Career Abroad.

Paris, Dec. 28.—Gen. John Meredith Read, the well known American diplomatist, who died here yesterday of pneumonia, was born in Philadelphia Feb. 21, 1837, he being the son of a former solicitor-general of the United States. He received his education at a military school and at Brown university, where he received the degree of A. M. in 1856. He was graduated at the Albany Law school in 1859, studied international law in Europe, was admitted to the bar in Philadelphia, and afterward removed to Albany. He was adjutant-general of New York 1860-'6, and in 1861 he received the thanks of the war department for his ability and zeal in organizing, equipping and forwarding troops. He was first United States consul-general for France and Algeria in 1869-'73 and in 1870-'72 acting consul-general for Germany during the Franco-German war. After the war he was appointed by Gen. de Cissey, French minister of war, to form and preside over a commission to examine into the desirability of teaching the English language to the French troops. In November, 1873, he was appointed United States minister-resident in Greece. One of his first acts was to secure the release of the American ship Armenia and to obtain from the Greek government a revocation of the order that prohibited the sale of the Bible in Greece. During the Russo-Turkish war he discovered that only one port in Russia was still open, and he pointed out to Secretary Evarts the advantages that would accrue to the commerce of the United States were a grain fleet dispatched from New York to that port. The event justified his judgment, since the exports of cereals from the United States showed an increase within a year of $73,000,000. While minister to Greece, he received the thanks of his government for his effectual protection of American persons and interests in the dangerous crisis of 1878. Soon afterward congress, from motives of economy, refused the appropriation for the legation at Athens, and Gen. Read, believing that the time was too critical to withdraw the mission, carried it on at his individual expense until his resignation, Sept. 23, 1879. King George created him a Knight Grand Cross of the Order of the Redeemer, the highest dignity in the gift of the Greek government. Gen. Read was president of the Social Science congress at Albany in 1868 and vice-president of the one at Plymouth, England, in 1872. He was the author of an "Historical Enquiry Concerning Henry Hudson," which first threw light upon his origin and the sources of the ideas that guided that navigator, and contributions to current literature.

KIEL CANAL OPERATION.

No Vessel Flying the Stars and Stripes Passed Through the Channel in a Year.

Washington, Dec. 28.—From July 1, 1895, to June 30, 1896, there passed through the new Kiel canal 16,834 ships that had to pay toll. Their tonnage was 1,505,983. Of these 7,531 were steamships, aggregating 1,140,578 tons. Their flags were as follows; German, 13,957; Belgian, 3; British, 184; Danish, 812; French, 81; Dutch, 381; Norwegian, 60; Russian, 84; Swedish, 336, and all other countries, 9, and if any carried the stars and stripes it was not deemed worthy of mention. The year's expenses were about $200,000, and the receipts a trifle above that amount. These figuers are reported to the state department by Consul Monaghan.

ANOTHER BANK CLOSED.

The Atlas National in Chicago Decides To Retire from Business.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—The Atlas National bank of Chicago has decided to retire from business, and the clearing house committee at a special meeting last night decided that the associated banks of the city would advance the amount needed to pay its depositors in full. The amount required is in the neighborhood of $600,000.

John Brown's Daughter in Distress.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 28.—Letters from California reveal the fact that Mrs. Annie Brown Adams, daughter of John Brown, who led the raid on Harper's Ferry, is in need. Horatio N. Rust of Pasadena, Cal., writes that Mrs. Adams is living in the northern part of California, struggling with adversity, trying to bring up her family of eight children. Recently the house took fire and, with its contents, was burned. The family was struggling to pay off a small mortgage and now have nothing except what friends supply.

Advice to Spain.

London, Dec. 28.—The Statist publishes a comment on the Spanish-American situation in which it says that the Spanish government and people, unless they are utterly blind to their own welfare, will accept the recommendations concerning Cuba contained in President Cleveland's message to the American congress. The paper adds that in the opinion of the governments of Great Britain, France and Germany these recommendations onght to be accepted.

St. Johnsbury, Vt., Dec. 28.—The thermometer here registered twenty-five degrees below zero at 1 o'clock this morning.

FASHIONS IN FURS.

Garments and Trimming for Cold Weather Costumes.

Exceedingly smart are the short fur jackets for wear when winter sets in. The fronts are loose, the back tight-fitting, with just a little fullness in the skirts, sleeves medium size, and turned-back revers faced with the fur, and so arranged that the collar at the back can be pulled up as high as the ears if necessary. Of course short fancy jackets in the Eton and bolero style are to be seen in fur, but these are more like the trimming of the street gowns. They are extremely becoming, for they have broad pointed revers which turn back to show full vests and fronts of white satin covered with lace ruffles and jabots.

Revers of fur are much used in trimming handsome gowns, and a plaited piece of fur sewed into the shoulder seam and hanging over the front of the waist is one of the newest fancies. Chinchilla on dark blue or green, beaver, otter, and sable on all colors, are in style; and the pieces of fur certainly give a touch of smartness and oddity that is very desirable. The band of fur around the hem of the gown is again in favor even on evening gowns, while on the latter it is also used to outline the seams on either side of the embroidered front breadth; and around the shoulders or across the front of the waist of low cut gowns it is considered most effective. For this purpose sable, mink, beaver are used in preference to other furs. When these fur bands are put on it is best to have them an inch and a half or two inches wide, and then double them so that a round edge shows, and they look particularly well put just under a fold of cloth or passementerie.

Mouffion, the fur that came into favor last season, is to be greatly in fashion this year. It is of such an exquisite shade of gray that it is more becoming than chinchilla, although the latter is much handsomer. Capes, collars and boas, with muffs to match, are made of this fur, but it is not yet used as a trimming. With a gray cloth costume with touches of yellow, and a muff and cape of Mouffon lined with yellow, a most artistic effect can be obtained, while with the new greens, reds and purples of this season's colors it is extremely smart.

Just an edge of fur showing around the cloth coats, making them look as though lined throughout, is again fashionable, and some of the new evening wraps, which are most regal in construction, have the edging of one kind of fur and the lining of another.—Harper's Bazar.

Noah and Money.

"The financial question has caused considerable research on the subject," remarked the cheerful idiot to his pastor the other day. "I suppose," he continued, "that you have made a study of the moneys of the Bible?"

"Oh, yes," replied the minister, blandly. "I am familiar, to be sure, with the Biblical coins."

"I infer that paper money was used at the time of the flood?" continued the idiot, sparring for a chance to make a home thrust.

"What has led you to this conclusion?" asked the pastor.

"Well, we read of where the dove brought the green back to Noah."—Washington Times.

In combination, proportion and process Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiar to itself, and unequalled in true merit.

No other medicine ever possessed so much curative power, or reached such enormous sales, or made such wonderful cures, as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

It is undoubtedly the best medicine ever made to purify, vitalize and enrich the blood.

That is the secret of its success.

Read this statement:

"When my son was 7 years of age, he had rheumatic fever and acute rheumatism, which settled in his left hip. He was so sick that no one thought there was any help for him. Five sores broke out on his thigh, which the doctor said were sores. We had three different doctors. Pieces of bone came out of the sores. The last doctor said the leg would have to be cut open and the bone scraped, before he could get well. Howard became so low that he would eat nothing, and one doctor said there was no chance for him.

"One day, a newspaper recommending Hood's Sarsaparilla was left at our door. We decided to try this medicine. Howard commenced taking it the last of February, after having been sick for a year and a half. He hadn't taken it a week before I saw that his appetite began to improve, and then he gained rapidly. I gave him five bottles, when the sores were all healed and they never broke out again. The crutches he had used for four years were laid aside, as he had no further use for them. I give all the credit to Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. ADA L. MOODY, Fay Street, Lynn, Mass.

RECOGNITION OF CUBA.

Senator Chandler Takes Issue with the President Regarding His Power.

Washington, Dec. 28.—Senator Chandler of New Hampshire takes issue with President Cleveland as to the power vested in the president of the United States to alone recognize or not recognize the belligerency or independence of a foreign country or a dependency of that country. He lines up on the side of Cuba, and in an interview, made public to-day, he takes strong grounds in favor of the rights of congress. Discussing the subject he says: "The new immigration law if it passes will require foreigners coming to live in this country to read and write as a test five lines of the United States constitution. There are certain five lines which eminent Spanish-American lawyers ought to read. Section 8, after enumerating in 17 clauses the powers of congress, adds another as follows: '18. To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this constitution in the government of the United States or in any department or officer thereof.' A study of the above clause may lead some of the defiant advocates of an arrogant personal government at the executive mansion to revise their assertions.

Powers Expressly Given the President.

"It is not contended that the above clause 18 gives congress power by law passed over a veto by a two-thirds vote to interfere with any power made exclusive in the president by express words or necessary implication. What are the powers expressly given to the president? 1—To command the army and navy. 2—To grant pardons. 3—To make treaties (with the consent of the senate). 4—To appoint officers of the United States. 5—To convene congress and to adjourn it when the two houses disagree. 6—To receive ambassadors and other public ministers. 7—To take care that the laws be faithfully executed. 8—To commission officers of the United States. The above are all the powers granted. Compare them with the long list of powers given to congress, including that to declare war and to provide for the common defense and general welfare and ending with the power given in the above clause 18 to make all laws necessary and proper to carry into execution all the powers invested in the government 'or in any department or office thereof.'

His Acts Regulated by Congress.

"The president may command the army and navy. Yes; but congress by law may give him specific directions what to do with them, to use them in any particular direction, or not to use them at all. He may grant pardons. Yes; this is an exclusive and uncontrollable power, but congress may by law open all prison doors and let the criminals go free. He may make treaties, with the consent of the senate, and they become law. Here is the only power to make law not vested in congress. He may appoint officers. Yes; but congress may create and abolish the offices, and regulate the power of appointment by civil service rules; he is to commission all officers, but he can commission only those who are appointed in pursuance of law. He is to receive the foreign ministers. Yes; but only ministers from countries which congress chooses to have recognized. If two governments are striving for control of a country, congress may by law decide which government the United States will recognize, and the president is bound to obey the law and receive a minister from one government and refuse to receive a minister from another.

Veto the Remedy.

"The idea that the president has the sole prerogative of deciding what government shall be recognized by the United States, has no foundation whatever in any words to be seen in the constitution. The fact that the president has recognized new governments without congressional expression, when congress and the people have approved his action, is no proof whatever that when they disagree with him they cannot control him by law. He is their agent, and when he does what they want him to do no law is needed. When he threatens to conduct himself otherwise, whether by action or non-action, the whole subject may be controlled by a law passed over a veto, under the ample powers in congress, granted by section eight of article one of the constitution, which are not restricted nor limited in this respect by any other clauses in the constitution. There is no escape for the advocates of monarchical government in Washington from the provision of clause eighteen, section eight, article one."

Germany Joined to South America.

Berlin, Dec. 28.—A submarine cable has been completed from Emden, Prussia, to Vigo, Spain, which links the German telegraphic system with the South American and other systems. Capital has been furnished by an Anglo-German syndicate for the construction of the first section of the submarine cable between Germany and the United States via the Azores.

House of Commons Women Waiters.

London, Dec. 28.—The presence of women waiters in the terrace of the house of commons has been made a renewed matter of protest by a number of the older members. The "kitchen committee" has been strongly urged to go back to the old system of male waiters. The committee is divided; the younger members desire to retain the women waiters.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS

Major McKinley To Begin Work on It Soon After New Year's.

ALREADY WELL MAPPED OUT

The President-elect After Organizing His Administration Likely To Go South for a Few Weeks' Rest---Latest Cabinet Rumors.

Canton, O., Dec. 28.—Within a week the president-elect will probably commence work on his inaugural address, and it will not take him many days to finish it, for he has well fived in his mind lines of thought he wishes to develop and the suggestions he wishes to make. After Major McKinley has finished his address he will devote all of his time to the work of organizing his administration, and he may go south for a few weeks in order to enjoy a short period of rest and comparative solitude before setting out for Washington. Major McKinley has, according to the belief of those who have watched the matter closest, invited no one save Mr. Hanna to become a member of his cabinet. It is understood, however, that Nelson A. Dingley of Maine will probably be made secretary of the treasury. Owing to the uncommon importance of our foreign relations at this time a great deal of interest centers about the position of secretary of state, and there is much speculation here about the choice Major McKinley will make for this place. The conviction grows that a United States senator, who has had long experience in public life, and who is held in high esteem by his colleagues, is desired for this post by Major McKinley. Mr. Dingley, who is very popular in the house, and who has great influence there, will, as a cabinet officer, be able to bring much important support to the administration. If a senator of equal influence were to enter the cabinet the administration would be equally strong with the upper branch of congress. Senator Sherman or Senator Allison would meet this requirement, and the indications to-day are that one or the other of them will be asked within ten days if he can accept the portfolio of state, if it is offered him. It is Mr. Sherman's intention at present to be a candidate for re-election to the senate next year, but, as his friends say, there may be a good deal of pressure brought to bear to induce him to become secretary of state, if the position shall be offered him. There is too grave doubt about the course which Mr. Allison would pursue if he is invited to become a member of the cabinet, though his friends are pretty generally of the opinion that he could close his public career more brilliantly as a successful secretary of state than a senator from Iowa. The Pacific slope will be recognized in the formation of the cabinet, and the choice is likely to fall on a California man if the republicans of that state can unite on some one. The California member of the cabinet will be judge Joseph McKenna, judge J. J. De Haven or judge James Waymire. The two former have had congressional experience, and Judge McKenna was appointed to the United States bench by President Harrison. Major McKinley personally knows all these men. It is the wish of the California and other republicans from the far west that the secretaryship of the interior be given to one of their number. Ex-Gov. Merriam of Minnesota, Gen. Alger of Michigan and Henry Payne of Wisconsin are strong cabinet possibilities, but geographical considerations, if nothing else, make it impossible that all should be selected. It is obvious that if Senator Sherman should be secretary of state, Gen. Alger would not be in the cabinet; nor is it likely that both Mr. Merriam and Mr. Payne will be selected, particularly if Illinois should have a member in the person of Charles G. Dawes. Cornelius N. Bliss of New York is reasonably certain of a cabinet position unless Andrew D. White should happen to be chosen for secretary of state, which does not seem probable at present. The chances are that Major McKinley's cabinet will contain as many as seven of the names mentioned in this dispatch. Notwithstanding the fact that the cabinet has not been selected, candidates for less important places are sending in their applications in large numbers by mail or presenting them in person. Several thousand applications for office have been received by Major McKinley's secretaries and 20 per cent. of them will be referred in due time to the heads of the various departments or to the proper congressmen. There is nothing to be gained by rushing to Canton with applications for office. The appointments will not be made on the "first come, first served," plan.

German Beet Sugar Industry.

Washington, Dec. 28.—The extent of the German beet sugar industry is shown by Consul Monaghan at Chemnitz, who, in a report to the state department, says 958,128 tons were exported in the past fiscal year, and the home consumption was estimated at 668,860 tons, the latter being an increase over the previous year of 116,165 tons. The consul thinks, particularly in Ohio and Nebraska, beet planting should take the place in part of the raising of meat and grain where competition is sharper, and that the United States ought to supply its own sugar.

TURNING OVER A NEW LEAF.

What would a New Year be without the turning over of new leafs by erring humanity? It might lose some of its picturesqueness and traditional manners, but still we think the world would be just as well off. The new year pledges are, in most cases, made only to be broken at the slightest temptation—poor, weak souls that we are. Still there are some who are stern in their purposes not to indulge in this or that excess, after the mind has been made up that no good comes from much indulgences, and we may congratulate these few that the unwritten law of New Year's time inours in them the yearning to eliminate the damaging things from their being.

VICISSITUDES OF LECTURING.

It has been demonstrated time and again that men who gain great personal renown in public life cannot succeed on the lecture platform at high salaries, and the failure of William J. Bryan is not any more marked than would be a like career of any other man in a similar position. Even the best lecturers on the public platform value their services hundreds of dollars less per lecture than the offer made Mr. Bryan by a syndicate on the spur of the moment. Where some men make signal successes in some lines of life the lyceum proves a missing link to an otherwise chain of success.

COUNCILMANIC COMMITTEES.

It has been settled that Councilman Dumont will be President of the Common Council for the coming year. Councilman-elect Baker, of the Third ward, is slated for the chairmanship of the finance committee, and Councilman Barrows for re-appointment as the chairman of the police committee. It has been suggested, and with a probability that it may follow, that the streets and sewerage committees be combined, and Councilman Frost, who is now chairman of the latter committee, be put in charge of the new department.

A JUST LAW

Under the present postal law a fee is charged for registered mail mail matter, but when packages are lost Uncle Sam does not make good the loss. This is certainly unjust and the House of Representatives has just passed a bill providing that in case of loss damages shall be paid not to exceed $10, unless the value of the package is less in which case only the value shall be paid.

THE FINALE.

The last meeting of the Common Council for this year and as now constitued will be held this evening. Councilman Ginna will not only preside for the last time, but will also retire from public service, much to his own honor and regret of taxpayers.

The indications are that Senator John P. Jones, who left the Republican ranks and became a Populist recently, will have to fight for his return to the United State Senate from Nevada.

Electric Bitters

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

SHOT HIMSELF IN THE FOOT.

A Bound Brook Young Man Suffers a Serious Termination to a Hunt.

William Westerman, aged 19 years, a resident of Bound Brook, lies at the hospital in a condition that may compel him to lose his foot. Last Saturday afternoon Westerman went on the mountains back of Bound Brook, duck shooting. Accidentally his gun was discharged and the whole charge entered his foot. His cries attracted the attention of a friend not far off and the latter ran to his assistance. The injured young man was finally brought to the Bound Brook station, and from there he came by train to the hospital where he is now under treatment.

As yet it is impossible to tell how serious his injuries are, as is always the case with a gun shot wound.

THEATRICAL.

Morrison's superb production of Faust will be seen here at Music Hall to-night. Faust, in both operatic and dramatic form, has always drawn large houses in this city, and it goes without saying that Morrison's production will meet with the high favor accorded it in former appearances. The present engagement will have new interest to its patrons from the fact that every bit of scenery, all the costumes, properties and effects of the the Brocken scene, which were thought wonderful at the time, have been much elaborated. This is especially the case in the new and startling electrical effects.

A Loss to Trinity Church.

The members and congregation of Trinity Reformed church were saddened yesterday by the announcement of the resignation on January 1st, of Mrs. H. E. Rider, the soprano singer in the choir. Mrs. Rider has sang very acceptably during her engagement, and her position will not easily be filled by the music committee.

While the speeding of horses on the public highways in Plainfield has been stopped by the police and the city ordinances, trotting is still in vogue at Dunellen. Of course they are only friendly skirmishes and furnish much amusement for the drivers and onlookers. Saturday afternoon Fred Nelson and Peter Osborn had a few trial trips and the horses seemed to be about evenly matched.

Scotch Plains, Bound Brook and New Brunswick are to come together in a cocking main on New Year's Eve. The location has thus far been kept a secret, but it is known that it will take place within the quiet precincts of Plainfield.

Judge Clark entertained at a Christmas dinner, his children and grandchildren, thirteen in all. In the evening friends from Plainfield and New Market called and by their presence the day was made one to be long remembered.

Two sleighing parties, of ten and twelve people, respectively, constituted a party which came from Plainfield and South Plainfield, to the West Side house Saturday evening. Mrs. Reilly, the well-known and accomplished organist, was present and furnished the music for dancing. Supper was served at a late hour, and the guests departed for home early Sunday morning.

PASSING COMMENT.

The complimentary dinner to be given to Mayor Gilbert tomorrow night in the Casino is to be a distinguished affair, and not the least notable feature will be the fact that the dinner is to commence at promptly 7 o'clock. This will give the guests plenty of time to enjoy all the tid bits of edibles and dashes of repartee and oratory of the toasts and arrive home at a seasonable hour. Covers will be laid for 150 guests.

No where will Kris Kringle be welcomed with greater fervor than at the Children's Home, where a score and more of little beings dwell on the noble charity of Plainfield. These little hearts and minds are to be made unusually happy next Wednesday afternoon, when all the glories of a Christmas tree, resplendent with tinsled and gilded ornaments, bags of confections and nuts, and lots of practical gifts, is to be opened up to their eyes. The time set for the occasion is 4 o'clock.

United Consul James A. Demarest at Brockville, Can., formerly connected with The Daily Press, has done a good turn for an old veteran who, through a drunken escapade, has become involved in the meshes of Canadian law. John Tucker, who went through the late unpleasantness and came out with a taste for John Barleycorn, indulged too freely and not wisely at Brockville. Not wisely, because he stole a turkey; though, of course, if to steal at all, a very appropriate thing it was about Yuletide. But Tucker was unlucky in his modus operandi, and he fell into the hands of the law and was doomed to spend a term in prison as a result. He is paying dearly for his indiscretion because it happens that Tucker—who is seriously crippled with rheumatism—is about to receive an increase in pension, and an United States pension agent is expected daily to finally confirm the increase. Should the agent arrive and find his pensioner at Toronto spending a few months in prison, Tucker's chances for an increase would be jeopardized, and as he has a daughter often or twelve years old to support, he can in his rheumatic condition, ill afford the loss. When Consul Demarest drew the attention of the local authorities to the unlucky predicament of Tucker, they wrote to the governor of the prison explaining the case, and the latter consented to allow Tucker to remain at Brockville until the pension agent arrives and the matter is fully explained to him.

At last there comes an instance of where a man really did know it was loaded—the gun. And a sad case, indeed, it was when a life light of a clever fellow was snuffed by the accidental discharge of a revolver in the hands of his best friend. William Showels, Jr., the famous bareback rider who appeared with Barnum & Bailey's circus in this city last May, a personal friend of Bob Whitaker and well known to many other Plainfielders, was the unintentional cause of the fatality. Last Friday night Showles visited the Union hotel at Red Bank to pass the evening with Ansel Croft, one of his closest friends. Just before he departed for his home in Long Branch, Showels was exhibiting a revolver to Croft, the firearm having a patent arrangement which was intended to prevent its discharge unless operated in a peculiar manner. With an idea of showing what a wonderful invention it was, Showles slammed the revolver on the bar once or twice. But like many patented mechanisms this one failed to work at the right time and the revolver was discharged, the bullet entering the abdomen of Croft. He died a few hours after. From the gay and jolly to the grave and crushed was the quick transition that Showels' disposition underwent. The performer who has had heard the plaudits of ten thousand voices and hands sound in his ears after the sensational and daring riding in the sawdust areana was completely crushed. He went home with such feelings as only he could describe, if such were possible, and it wasn't. Later in the night he was arrested. He was released on $5,000 bail on the charge of manslaughter, but will undoubtedless be discharged when the circumstances of the fatality are told in court. It is one of the saddest cases of accidental death that has ever been enacted in New Jersey.

ONE OLD MAID'S WAY.

BY WILL ALLEN DROMGOOLE.

Now, things had turned out curiously. For the second time in her life, Miss Elizabeth declared, she "couldn't see her way clear."

"The musk roses and the moonlight," she told herself. "I mustn't forget the moonlight."

As if she ever had forgotten or ever could forget, for one single moment, unless it should be the moment when she would be lying in her coffin, the scent of the old roses that night in a far-away June, when she stood within the shadow of the burdened branches and told him good-by. And how the moonlight looked on the pale blossoms, and upon the glistening white street outside, and upon his face as he said good-by.

Miss Elizabeth sighed and pinched a corner of the yellow envelope with her small, work-hardened hand. She forgot that her hands were hard, the scent of the musk roses was in her nostrils.

"He told me," she was repeating the words softly to the moonlight, "that he must have a wife who had money. He must; his business demanded it and his tastes, all his life had been one of luxury; he would be a torture to me without money. 'It is for your sake, Elizabeth' "—she was repeating his very words, poor little old maid!—" 'You, too, would grow unhappy with nothing but love to live upon.' "

It was just one month after her father died, and the estate was found to be insolvent; gone to pieces. He had been considered a very rich man, and she was his only child. She had not known an hour since that had not been a hand-to-hand fight with poverty. Yet, she told herself, it was not death that had robbed her, but Dives. Dives, who had entered her life in the form of Abigail Stone and her money.

She remembered how poor she felt that night when she walked back to the empty house without him. How poor, and how—alone! Not how lonely—how alone. There is a difference between being lonely and being alone. One can bear the loneliness, because one knows that it will end. But the aloneness, ah! "no man has come back" to tell how that ends.

Then her cousin, with whose people she made a temporary home, had moved to California, and so, to some extent, out of her life, too.

He had begged her to go with him, but she had clung to the old altars whereon her idols had crumbled. She was a very weak old maid, you see, not to wish to leave. So weak that she staid right on there through the marriage, witnessed the ceremony, and saw the couple settle down into their home which Abigail's money had bought; and then, when Abigail's father had got him into the bank, and was fitting his own shoes to the feet of his son-in-law, and people had forgotten to talk about her disappointment in talking of Abigail's triumph, Miss Elizabeth gathered up the broken threads of her girlhood and began her life. Her life as she knew it must be always; she wasn't going to compromise with sorrow; not at all. She was as much an old maid the night her lover abandoned her for Abigail's money as she was 20 years after, when her own money came. Oh, yes, it came; she had it in her hand at the moment, in the yellow envelope. Fifty thousand dollars, or its equivalent—a notice which told her that it was in the express office for her. And the same note begged her, as the writer had begged for years, that she would come west.

"I am all alone in the world now, Lizzie," the note said, "unless you come to me. John wished you to have a part of his money, and you must know, dear, that I wished it too. Your cousin loved you to the last, child. He told me that he had always loved you; my husband told me that on his deathbed. And he asked that you might have a bit of his property to make you comfortable in old age. Gladly, gladly; for I love you scarcely less than he did, Lizzie. You knew I loved him, and you refused to give him a heartless body when another woman's heart was all his. God bless you, Lizzie, and send you to me, that we may spend the little remnant of life that is left us together. Write me when to meet you. And don't throw away your money on the unworthy; you always would, you know."

Miss Elizabeth had pressed her cousin's wife's letter to her lips, and had taken off her glasses more than once to get the tears away, before she could finish the reading. Yes, she had given Clare her happiness in refusing to marry her cousin, who had afterward married Clare. She had made him a good wife, yet he said he had always loved her; he had said it on his deathbed. What a queer thing is love, Miss Elizabeth was thinking—that is, real love; it never, never dies. She believed that, and that is why she believed that he, Abigail's husband, had not forgotten. She knew that love could not die. That had been her revenge; he would not forget her. Though she did not tell herself so that night, nor, indeed, all those years; all she had told herself was: "I shall be even with him yet."

She closed and bolted the doors, and looked under the bed like old maids always do, and began to brush out her thin, snowflecked hair. She smiled as she brushed; she was thinking of her revenge. She always knew it would come to her. He would have to meet her now. They might move in the same circle now, who could tell? He would not be obliged to cross the street now to keep from seeing that her dress was shabby, or pretend not to see the hand extended him when they did "meet by circle now, who could tell? He would be compelled to show that he saw the darned ends of the gloves' fingers. It would hurt him, her poverty; she felt that it hurt him, and she had despised him at times for it. But now—well, that was all changed; she would go to the bank in the morning, to his bank—he had long ago stepped into the old cashier's shoes—and she would deposit her fifty thousand with him, until she could look about for a lawyer and adjust herself to the change of her circumstances. But she would enjoy handing that money over to the cashier; she smiled into the little withered face that peeped at her from the old-fashioned mirror over her old-fashioned bureau. She had been living in a very old-fashioned world for 20 years, but she would brush up a little bit now. When one is not able to keep in line with the procession, one cares very little the direction the procession takes.

She went to bed at last, and to sleep, with the fifty thousand running through her brain like water through the mill race at the end of the town. She went to sleep and woke up with the nightmare and screaming; she had dreamed there was a man under the bed.

"I really don't know whatever I shall do with it," she told herself the next morning, when eating her solitary breakfast. "If it is to disturb my rest in this way I shall wish Cousin John had left his money in California."

But she forgot her worry when once she had donned her old-fashioned gray bonnet, had draped her lace mantilla about her shoulders and hidden her little fire-browned face behind an old beregе veil of a bright-green hue. Her dress was gray, too, and rather short for the fashion; the trim, little old maidy-looking feet tripped down the main street and into the handsome bank building at the corner of the public square, as clear of her skirts as a ship of its sails after a storm off the Florida reefs.

Miss Elizabeth passed the teller's window and went around to the cashier's desk.

He looked up from a heap of papers that lay upon his desk, and saw the little gray figure of the old maid standing there, looking at him through the brass bars of the railing. There was a queer something about the little withered face that carried him back to the night in June when he had broken faith with her in the musk-rose summerhouse. She did not see the old youth in his face, however; there was a pallidness about it that extended to the very lips, as though with his teeth he had pinched the lifeblood out of them. He rose, half clinging to the desk to steady himself. A clerk passing at the moment wondered what the old maid had said that had upset him so. The cashier stood at the opening in the rail waiting for her to speak.

"I came to make a little—deposit," she began, and stopped. "Are you sick, Oscar?"

"No," said he, "I am not sick, only tired; very, very tired. I did not sleep last night. What is it you want, Elizabeth?"

She blushed, ashamed that she had planned such a meanly contemptible trick.

"My cousin, out in California, died some months ago, and left me a little money. I have it to-day by the express, and would like to leave it until I arrange my plans. I am going west to make my home with his wife."

She handed the express package through the window—bonds, certificates, stocks, all. He did not touch it; only looked at her in a wondering way, and said:

"How much is it, Elizabeth? How much did your cousin leave you?"

"In all, he left me fifty thousand dollars," she replied, in a low, uneven voice.

"Come with me a moment," he said, when the first surprise was over; "come in here."

He threw open the door of his private office, and held it wide for her to enter, closing it behind them again.

Then he placed the package on the desk between them, and stood off, with his arms folded upon his breast, and looked upon her in silence. The little old figure in rusty gray, the silvered hair, the small, ridiculous-looking shoes, the gloves with their darned fingers, the green veil, the faded face with the time-marks about the eyes that had once been girlish blue. Circumstances, circumstances, how it rusts out life for us, dragging the wheels down into the creases itself has made. The circumstances that had put him into the cashier's shoes had put her into the darned fingers.

"Elizabeth," said he, looking down at her, "you must not put your money into this bank. To-morrow it will be closed, suspended!" She gave a queer little cry and voluntarily put out her hand for the package. He stooped, and picking it up from the desk, handed it to her. "I did you a wrong once," he continued, "and I will not do you another. This bank will not open to-morrow."

She must say something; her throat was dry and hard; she felt her revenge stifling her.

"Will you—lose? Will you suffer by the—" she could not speak the hard word "failure."

"Everything I possess on earth," he replied, with slow distinctness.

She gathered her wealth in her hands more closely and looked toward the door. What was it that turned her to stone? She had pitied him in his prosperity; in his shame was she rejoicing?

"It is quite sad," she said, in a voice not her own. "You have all my sympathy; I know what it costs to be poor."

She bowed, and he held the door again while she passed out. He felt the presence of her long after she had gone; it was as though she had turned her heel upon him just once, in that short, meaning sentence: "I know what it costs to be poor."

She sat down after dinner and wrote her cousin's wife that she would not come. She was "wedded to the old place" was what she wrote. Had she honestly questioned her own heart it would have said: "I'll wait and see the end; the end of revenge; the end of life's love."

When the letter had been finished she Served Him Right.

Minnie—Did you sing for Mr. Goodcatch last night, dear?

Winnie—Yes, love, for nearly an hour.

Minnie—Oh, I'm so glad, darling! I always detested that man.—Detroit Free Press.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry offices will receive your work.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRES.

Two Handsome Residences and Other Property Wiped Out by Flames.

New York, Dec. 28.—The handsome residence of Duncan Elliot in the grounds of the Country club on Long Island sound, about two miles east of West Chester village, was totally destroyed by a fire yesterday that started in the cellar near a large heater. Loss, about $50,000. The servants managed to save some of the silver service and paintings.

Ware Mansion at Clifton, Mass., Burned.

Marblehead, Mass., Dec. 28.—The biggest and most stubborn fire that the local firemen have had to deal with this year occurred yesterday, when the elegant mansion of B. F. Ware at Clifton was burned. The fire started in the basement and was caused by a defective flue in the furnace. The house was two stories with a French roof of modern design and was used in part as a boarding house. The interior was lavishly furnished. Among the furnishings were valuable statuary and paintings owned by Mr. Ware and Mrs. Rose, and rare works of art which filled the rooms.

$100,000 Fire at Brooklyn.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Dec. 28.—A fire which caused a damage of $100,000 started yesterday afternoon in the repair shops of the Brooklyn Heights Railroad company on Myrtle avenue. The building was quickly destroyed, together with thirteen cars. The flames spread to Welz's brewery on the opposite side of the street, which was partially destroyed.

Fire Loss at Amesbury.

Amesbury, Mass., Dec. 28.—One of the worst fires in the history of Amesbury occurred yesterday in the post-office block, causing a loss of $60,000. The block, which was the finest in town, was occupied by the postoffice, stores, offices and Hibernian hall. In the midst of blinding smoke the postmaster managed to get the stamps and letters into the safe.

Big Blaze at Pottsdam, N. Y.

Watertown, N. Y., Dec. 28.—A fire which involved the loss of $50,000 occurred at Pottsdam Saturday night. Half a block in the business section, including the Windsor hotel, was destroyed. The fire originated in a meat market.

SENATOR SMITH'S VIEWS.

Peace, a Business Revival and Greater Economy the Needs of the Government.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 28.—"What this country needs," said United States Senator Smith in an interview last evening, "is peace and a business revival. I would not demand more revenue. I would urge greater economy. I think the Cuban question has spent its force. The people who wanted war with Spain thought it would help the Cubans, and the jingoists are, I think, convinced that the right to act in an emergency of this kind is alone reserved to the president, and it must of necessity be so. There is little doubt but that we are to have an extra session of congress soon after McKinley's inauguration for the purpose of securing tariff legislation. It is hardly likely that action can be secured under five or six month. It is evidently the intention of the incoming administration to re-enact the McKinley law. There is no disputing the fact that the Wilson bill is a deficiency bill, but it became so because they wiped out the income tax section. There is no doubt but that the income tax would have given the government $20,000,000 to $25,000,000 a year. The situation is just this: I think that the incoming president will reassemble congress as early as March 15. There will be a long-drawn-out discussion of the tariff. Then we will have the McKinley law again. Duties will be higher, taxes will be higher, prices will be higher. Perhaps prosperity will follow."

Kate Field's Remains Cremated.

San Francisco, Dec. 28.—The body of Kate Field, the well-known writer, was cremated in Odd Fellows' cemetery yesterday. The funeral services took place in Trinity Episcopal church. The interior of the church was beautifully decorated with potted plants and ferns and floral offerings, contributed by Miss Fields' many friends throughout the country. President and Mrs. Cleveland sent a beautiful wreath of roses and ferns. The ashes were placed in an urn and will be shipped east for interment.

Wasmansdorff Kills Himself.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—Otto Wasmansdorff of the banking firm of Wasmansdorff & Heinemann, which failed here last Monday, committed suicide at his home on Cleveland avenue yesterday by shooting himself. The constant worry and mental anxiety for the past week consequent upon the failure is believed to have been the cause. He had scarcely slept during that time, and was probably temporarily insane.

Another Body from the Orcutt.

Chatham, Mass., Dec. 28.—One more body from the wrecked schooner Calvin B. Orcutt has been recovered. It is probably that of a sailor, with light complexion and sanday hair, weighing about 150 pounds. It was examined by Coroner Munsell and is in the hands of the undertakers.

Queen Victoria's Biography.

London, Dec. 28.—It is stated on good authority that the queen is now engaged in personally dictating and revising a biography of herself, which will appear in 1897. The work will tell the story of the longest reign in the history of England as the queen regards it.

Powder Company Incorporated.

Albany, Dec. 28.—The Nitro Powder company, to manufacture powder and dynamite and other mining supplies in Esopus, Ulster county, capital $25,000, has been incorporated.

THE UNSPEAKABLE TURK

Punishments Inflicted by Him on Armenian Prisoners.

A Few of the Tortures Which Are Not Quite So Horrible in Their Extreme Barbarity as to Be Unprintable.

The following is an account taken from the British consular reports of the various tortures and punishments inflicted on the Armenians by the sultan of Turkey. Some of them are so horrible in their extreme barbarity that they are unprintable:

The twitch is made of two pieces of wood with a cord passed through one end and forming a loop. This used to be employed in England to hold a refractory horse if it was necessary to administer medicine. When an Armenian is safely in prison and will not speak out the twitch is applied in exactly the same way until the cord cuts into the flesh and the blood spurts.

Two pieces of flat board, with a couple of notches on each side of the board, are fastened together just like a pair of nut crackers and then used to compress certain parts of the body.

Eggs are boiled hard, and while intensely hot are inserted under the armpits and between the legs of the obstinate Armenian. His arms and legs are bound tightly and the eggs changed when they begin to cool.

Mashers are the little tongs used to lift pieces of charcoal from open fires in mangols. These tongs are made red-hot and applpied to the body in the same way that Edward II. was done to death in Berkeley castle.

At the Turkish prisons in Constantinople the chair torture is in daily force as applied to recalcitrant Armenians who will not speak out regarding the whereabouts of their fellow countrymen who are "wanted" by the officials.

There is a cell in every prison, in which is a pit capable of holding water. An armchair is placed in the pit and the back of this chair is made to lean forward by means of screws. An Armenian is put into the chair, and a band of iron, the ends of which go through the holes of the chair, is fastened across his abdomen. The water is then let in and the chair screwed forward until the man's head and shoulders are forced together. When the man's head is under water he must either speak or drown.

I have seen in Constantinople an unfortunate Armenian bound and thrust into a cesspool in the yard of the prison. The ordinary procedure of the Turkish officials is to leave the victim until he sinks and is suffocated or else makes a sham confession.

Iron bands are made with a screw at the back to go round the forehead, trunk and limbs; then the ends are screwed together and the unhappy Armenian forced to speak. The man is kept for a few days, until the marks have worn off, and it is impossible to say that he has been tortured.

Another method of torture is to sever the skin of the scalp and insert living vermin beneath it. Men have been known to go mad under this frightful torture.

This form of torture is one of the most prominent in the whole list, and is probably used oftener than any of the others: It consists of lashing the bare soles of the feet of the prisoner, who has been previously fastened to the ground, so that he cannot move a muscle. The whip is laid on until the flesh is cut and bleeding, and the victim seldom goes through the ordeal without losing consciousness.

The alleged father of the present sultan was put to death by this method: A large V-shaped wedge with sharpened edge is raised ten feet from the ground. The victim is held suspended in the air, straddling the wedge. Huge weights are tied on each foot and at the word of command the rope holding him is cut. The weights pull him down and he is split in two halves.

It is a common occurrence when a prisoner refuses to tell what is wanted of him to cut off a limb, and with the stump bleeding and sore thrust him into prison to reflect, and if he decides whether or not he prefers to change his mind or suffer another amputation. The mutilated prisoners often die under this treatment from blood poisoning, caused by lack of attendance and care.

The favorite death for women of the harem who have incurred the displeasure of their master is for the guards to sew them up in a canvas sack. While the poor woman is begging for mercy two or three fierce Turkish cats are thrust into the bag and it is then taken to a bridge near the palace and thrown into the Bosphorus. The cats in their terror fight fiercely and the wretched woman gets the worst of it until death by drowning supervenes. Many such ghastly relics of the sultan's despotism have been picked up by sailors of vessels cruising in the vicinity.

SWEET CAROLS, ETC.

Wreathes of the same material were also used in the decoration of the church.

The morning sermon was an appropriate one to the day. Dr. Barnes' text was from Luke, 2nd chapter, 51st verse: "And his mother kept all these sayings in her heart." Two Christmas anthems were sung by the chorus choir, which was composed of the following: the Misses Edna Harris, Alice Jenkins, Eva Jenkins, Margaretta Van H. Barnes. C. Florence Barnes, Cora Shepard and Etta Raybert, and J. Frank McDonald, Alvah Davis, William Symons, Robert Douglass, and Robert Davis.

The Christmas exercises of the Sunday-school were held in the church in the afternoon. The school marched in from the Sunday-school room and was seated in the front pews while the friends and relatives of the scholars were seated in the back of the room. Superintendent J. W. Jackson led the services, assisted by the assistant superintendents, Geo. M. Rittenhouse and George R. Cornwell. An order of exercises for a Christmas service, entitled "Boundless Love," was followed out and included several carols by the school and choir. There was a prayer by the pastor and several responsive readings. Recitations were given by George Rittenhouse, Miss Mabel Jenkins, Arthur Humble, Miss Henrietta Welch, Miss Jennie Whitney, and Miss Rita Pond. Miss Etta Raybert read a portion of Scripture. The address was made by Dr. Barnes and he told the children something of the customs of the people of the Holy Land at the time of Christ's birth. He described the inn at Bethlehem and told the story in simple language of the shepherds and the wise men.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Christmas services at the First Baptist church yesterday were unusually fine, and both morning and afternoon this large auditorium was filled to overflowing with worshippers. A pleasing arrangement of evergreens with a centre-piece representing a large star, suspended in front of the organ, was attractive. The morning service opened with an organ prelude, "Noel," Dudley Buck, by Howard Case.

An anthem, "O Joyful Light," was rendered by the full chorus choir in a highly creditable manner, as was also another anthem, "Calm on the Listn'ing Ear of Night," composed by E. J. Fitzhugh.

A soprano solo, "There Were Shepherds," by Miss Harris, was beautifully rendered. The choir then sang, "O Sing to God," an anthem, with part songs, and the rendition was noteworthy.

"Sing, O Heavens," an anthem by Gaul, was given by the choir with equal merit and praise. Following this Rev. Dr. Yerkes, pastor, preached a short sermon appropriate to the occasion. His remarks were interesting and a source of much help to all.

After the sermon, Miss Harris sang a solo, "O'er the Hills of Bethlehem," in her usual excellent manner.

As an offertory, Mrs. Ward, contralto, sang "The Angel's Christmas," with violin accompaniment by P. Ludwig Conde. The organ postlude, "The Hallelujah Chorus," concluded the morning service.

At three o'clock in the afternoon the Sunday-school service was held and it was a beautiful one throughout. The prelude "Romanza" (G major) was rendered faultlessly by Howard Case, organist; Miss Harris, piano, and P. Ludwig Conde, violinist. This was followed with the singing of a carol, "Merry Christmas," by the scholars. The choir sang an anthem, "Cantique de Noel," in a pleasing manner.

The singing of a carol, "All Glory to God in the Highest," by the scholars, preceded another carol, "There's a song in the air," by the primary class. A feature of this service was a recital, "Blessed Babe of Bethlehem," by Miss Addie Parker Jackson, whose exceedingly fine work is well known. "All My Heart This Night Rejoices" was the title of another carol which was rendered by the scholars. A contralto solo, "The Virgin's Lullaby," by Mrs. Ward, won admiration and praise.

The carol "On the Birthday of the Lord," by the scholars, preceded an excellent address by Rev. Arthur Crane, the evangelist. Another feature was the singing of the carol "In the Fields With Their Flocks Abiding." The first part was rendered by Miss Harris, and the scholars sang the chorus.

As an offertory, "The Prize Song" from "Die Meistersinger" was rendered impressively by the organ, violin and piano, and as a postlude "Melodie," by Popp, was given by the above trio.

Unbounded praise is due to Miss Harris, Mrs. Ward, the choir, Mr. Case, Mr. Conde, and Miss Harris, the pianist, for their fine work through out the services. And to Mr. McCutchen, the director of the choir, for his untiring efforts to present a choice and finished programme of Christmas music. The music rendered yesterday morning will be repeated next Sunday evening.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Never has the Congregational church presented a more charming appearance at the Christmas-tide than this year. The services, held in the church yesterday, were appropriate to the occasion and pleased the large congregation present.

The church was decorated with the customary evergreen roping, draped about the sides of the room with evergreen trees and holly wreaths at each post. Seven holly wreaths surmounted the organ loft. The effect was very artistic.

The Christmas service of the church was held in the morning and was largely attended. There was a double quartette composed of the Misses Elfleda A. Whiting and Margaret Meredith, sopranos; Julia Belknap and Mrs. A. C. La Boyteaux, altos; Herbert Schutt and Edward O. Clark, tenors; Stacy Reynolds and Wyatt Barnes, bassos. Mrs. B. T. Barnes occupied her usual position at the organ. The choir sang three selections: "Let Us Now Go Even Unto Bethlehem," by Marchant; "It Is the Blessed Christmas Morn," by Bartlett, with violin obligato by Miss Nella B. Whiton; and "Sound Over the Waters," by Sudds.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich, the pastor, preached a Christmas sermon on the text from Matthew 2:13—"And when they were departed, behold, the angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph in a dream saying: Arise and take the young child and his mother and flee into Egypt, and be thou there until I bring thee word; for Herod will seek the young child to destroy him."

He spoke of the two occasions where it appeared as if the decendants of David were to be swept out of existance and how wonderfully God kept his promises although, at the time, it seemed as if it would be impossible.

There were quite a number of the friends of the Sunday-school present at its exercises in the afternoon. After the opening, "Glad Tidings," a violin solo "Intermezzo," Cavallera Rusticana, was rendered by Miss Nella Whiton. Then came the Scripture reading by the Superintendent, J. A. Robinson, a prayer by A. C. La Boyteaux and another carol by the school. The song, "Little Pilgrims," was given by the following little children from the Primary Department: Ray Fuller, John Harper, Clarence Steiner, Vreeland VanAlstyne, Ganse voort VanAlstyne, Laura Baker, Edna Force, Edith Glaentzer, Lizzie Harper, Ethel Van Zandt, Marguerite Van Zandt, Maude Emmons, Myra Emmons.

The lesson was read by the school, and then taught by Rev. C. L. Goodrich with map and blackboard. After the carols "Radient Morn" and "It came upon a midnight clear," the exercises closed with the Lord's prayer.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

A beautiful service was rendered at the First Presbyterian church last evening in honor of Christmas-tide, and the church decorations were a marked feature. The music was under the direction of William E. MacClymont, organist, and the choir of eighteen voices was assisted by P. Ludwig Conde, violinist, William DeNicke, 'cellist, and Mrs. B. T. Barnes, pianist.

The programme as published in these columns on Saturday was carried out entire, and the work of the choir and instrumental quartette was especially fine. Each anthem was rendered in a highly creditable manner.

A tenor solo, "Star of Bethlehem" by George H. Smith, was noteworthy, as was also a bass solo, "A Little Town of Bethlehem," by Bert Tallamy.

A feature of the programme was the soprano solo, "The Star," by Miss Glen. The music is by Mr. MacClymont, and the words were written by Miss Lillian Glen, a sister of the soloist. It is a grand production and its first rendition was very successful.

An alto solo, "Bethlehem," by Miss Messersmith, was finely given.

Mr. DeNicke, whose work as a 'cellist is famous, won commendation last evening, as did also Mr. Conde, Mrs. Barnes and Mr. MacClymont.

During the service, Rev. C. E. Herring, pastor, gave short appropriate talks interspersing the musical numbers. The audience enjoyed a treat which was not on the programme. It was a 'cello solo by Mr. DeNicke.

Much can be said in commendation of the whole programme and it is safe to say that all present enjoyed it.

PARK AVENUE BABTIST CHURCH.

The Christmas services of the Park Avenue Baptist church were held a week ago, but the Sunday-school held its special exercises last evening instead of the regular evening service. The church looked very pretty in its Christmas attire, which consisted of evergreen roping festooned and arranged in stars about the organ loft and platform. The exercises were under the supervision of the superintendent, Miss. Alice Spangenberg, which included a number of carols, responsive readings and an address by Rev. Robert Lowry, D. D. Dr. Lowry told how the day, now celebrated as Christmas, was once a Pagan festival and how the same day had come to be adopted. He also spoke of the first Christmas and what had happened on that occasion. The primary department then gave short exercises which were followed by two songs by all the department, a song by Grace Thompson and Lillian Cuming, entitled "The Secret of the Stars," and recitations by Florence Smalley, "Long Years Ago," and Nellie Giles, "That Holy Night." The service followed out was the one called "Hail the King," written by Rev. Robert Lowry.

SEVENTH-DAY BABTIST CHURCH.

There was special Christmas music at the Seventh-day Baptist church rendered by the choir Sabbath (Saturday) morning. The church was decorated for the occasion with evergreen roping draped about the top of the organ and around the pillars.

CONCERNING TAXATION.

INTERESTING REPORTS MADE TO THE COUNCIL LAST NIGHT.

Councilman Frost Shows How Much Property is Taxed in Every Ward and What Each Shares of City Expenses.

There was an air of frigidity circulating about the City Council chamber last evening, and to an outsider the impression would be given that the members, with their overcoats on, were taking a sleighride. It was said that the coolness even affected Clerk MacMurray, for his vocal chords seemed to have lost that clear articulation for which they are noted. Councilman Moore was the only member absent.

Mr. Fisk moved that the sewer commissioners report be taken up, and in this connection he offered sworn statements from Editors A. L. Force and F. W. Runyon that the corporation notices regarding the report had been published as required.

An opportunity was given all present to state their objections to the sewer assessments made. Boice, Bunyon & Co. objected to an assessment of $87.32, as their property is used as a lumber yard and the improvements are very little, also for the reason that the rear portion cannot be sewered because the sewer is too low for them to connect with at the lumber yards, and the same firm objected to an assessment of $69.85 on the Park avenue property formerly occupied by them as a lumber yard, for the same reasons as stated above, and in both cases they asked for a reduction.

Charles Burnett, of Madison avenue, objected to his assessment as compared with other nearby property, which was valued higher and assessed less.

A. V. Nolen, of Crescent avenue, was another objector, on the ground that he did not favor the form adopted by the commissioners upon which they made the assessments, and he did not think they had any right to withhold the knowledge concerning the method used by them.

Mrs. B. O. Bowers, who was assessed $61.60, objected for the reason that there were no sewers on the Franklin place side of her property, and she asked for a reduction. After hearing all the objections, the council went into a committee of the whole and considered the same. It was admitted by nearly all of the objectors that the direct benefits received from the sewers was worth the amount assessed, and accordingly they were granted nothing by the Council. On the contrary they ratified and confirmed the report of the Commissioners and resolutions offered by Mr. Fisk to that effect were adopted.

Mr. Dumont asked the Corporation Counsel if the Council had any right to ask the Sewer Commissioners upon what basis they assessed or to tell them how to make assessments. Mr. Marsh stated that he supposed the Council would have the right but it would be giving them extraordinary powers. The principal adopted was to determine how much special benefit was required to assess as each property might receive particular benefit. The cost of construction of the sewerge beds falls on the city at large. Mr. Marsh further stated that the general criticism seemed to be that the Commissioners had been too liberal with the taxpayers. It would be impossible to give exact justness to all in a city of 15,000 inhabitants, but if the taxpayer is benefited to the extent of the special benefits received the question is practically settled.

Mr. Frost thought that the people of Plainfield ought to congratulate themselves on securing sewers at such a low figure.

At this point the regular order of business was taken up, and Mr. Dumont moved that as the election bills had not been presented in a manner specified by law, that the Corporation Counsel be instructed to give his opinion in the matter and that the election of officers be instructed accordingly so that they can render their bills properly.

Street Commissioner Meeker reported that he had granted three sewer permits.

The Plainfield Sanitary Company asked through its president, John W. Murray, Sr., for permission to erect in the city a suitable building, as a garbage disposal plant, and the matter was referred to the street committee.

Mr. Marsh, in a communication, gave his opinion regarding the proposed transition from a third to a second-class city. He thought that as certain laws affecting second-class cities would be changed soon after the meeting of the Legislature in January, it would be unwise for the Council to take any steps at present in the matter. His opinion regarding the adoption of a method whereby back taxes can be collected, was in the line of instruction as to how the Martin act could be applied to this city. That could be done by the proper application to the Circuit Court for the appointment of three freeholders as commissioners, who would examine into the city's affairs and proceed according to the above act.

Mr. Barrows moved that the position of Mr. Marsh's opinion referring to a second class city be filed and that the portion relating to the collection of back taxes be referred to the incoming Council.

City Judge DeMeza's report showed that during the year 658 persons had been brought before him. Of that number, 108 were committed, 219 fined, 250 sentence suspended, 72 discharged and 9 were untried. The receipts from fines amounted to $1,291, and the expenses $236.60, which leaves a balance paid to the city treasurer of $1,054.40.

The street commissioner's report was received and referred to the street committee.

The report of the committee on taxation recently appointed, and of which Mr. Frost is chairman, was received and proved to be of great interest. It shows that there is $12,600,000 taxable property in the city, divided into wards as follows: First ward, $1,685,187; Second ward, $2,194,488; Third ward, $1,887,819; Fourth ward, $1,764,995. Of these amounts, $3,312,533 is real estate, $650,186 personal property and $83,544 is exempt, leaving a net balace of $3,378,675. At the rate of $2.30 per 100 the First and Second wards pay $91,143 and the Third and Fourth wards, $86,244 There is exempt $2,800.25. The area of the city is 3,838 acres or six square miles and there is the following number of acres in each ward: First ward, 810; Second ward, 1,322; Third ward, 931; Fourth ward, 775. In the business portion of the city there is 64 acres, assessed $1,278,257, which is one-sixth the total assessment.

Mr. Front recommended that the above report be referred to the incoming Council and it was so ordered.

The bond of Collector-elect Elias H. Bird was received. The amount is $25,000 and the names of Olin Jenkins, J. H. Tier, Sr., Morgan C. Bird, Henry Liefke and Jacob Voehl appear as bondsmen. The bond was referred to the corporation council for examination as to proper form, etc.

The same course was adopted with the bond of Constable G. R. Rockfellow for $1,000, bearing the names of Henry Liefke and George Cole.

Owing to error the city has been paying taxes on a lot, No. 739 East Second street, and the $24 now due was ordered refunded and the assessment made to the proper owner, who is an out-of-town man.

Regarding the bill of Collector Johnson for legal services rendered by Reed & Coddington for $250 and R. V. Lindabury for $25, Mr. Dumont thought it best to settle the matter by paying the former. The latter bill of expenses, he stated, was incurred previous to the suit between Johnson and E. H. Bird and was not in the expenses of litigation. He thought that Mr. Johnson could collect the $250 through an action and he moved that the bill of $250 be paid, provided the city receive a voucher as a receipt for all claims from Mr. Johnson. The motion was adopted.

Mr. Barrows stated that owing to the extreme cold weather it was found necessary to purchase ten pairs of trousers for the policemen at an expense of $60, and he asked that the Council confirm the action of the committee, which was so ordered.

Mr. Fisk asked that the street committee be given an appropriation of $367.11 to cover the expenses relative to the work caused by the recent snow storms. The appropriation was granted.

Mr. Barrows chairman of the special committee appointed to investigate the matter of buying property and erecting a municipal building, reported for the committee that in their best judgment it was deemed advisable to secure the property and erect such building at once, and it was recommended that all city offices, jail, courtroom, etc., be combined in said building. A resolution was adopted that steps be taken to purchase the property and erect such a building.

Mr. Dumont moved that $4,000 be borrowed for four months on account of sewer work, and the motion was adopted.

Mr. Fisk moved that when the Council adjourned it be to meet Saturday evening, January 2d, 1897, at which time all the business of the old Council will be concluded.

In connection with the above Mr. Dumont stated that he would call up the Madison avenue commissioners report at that time, as he thought the present Council should do something definite with the report. The Council then adjourned.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVALS.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL CHILDREN MADE HAPPY IN MANY CHURCHES.

Special Exercises Arranged in Which Santa Claus Characters Played Important Parts Much to the Entertainment of All There.

CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH.

Last evening was the first time that Santa Claus has visited the Crescent Avenue church in person for ten or fifteen years at least, so he told those who were present at the Christmas entertainment of the Sunday-school of the church, which was held last evening in the chapel. Those who remember the entertainments of the past years will agree, however, that he has been well represented although absent.

He didn't come in person to the primary department which held its exercises in the afternoon, but the time was spent very pleasantly, however. W. D. Murray gave the children a very graphic representation of the joys and troubles in the family life of Punch and Judy, and then they listened to several selections on a phonograph, under the charge of Thomas Schaeffer. Instead of the children receiving gifts, it was decided that all should contribute to the support and education of a son of a western missionary. A collection was taken for that object. The rest of the afternoon was spent in playing games under the guidance of W. D. Murray and C. A. Baynon.

The entertainment in the evening was somewhat different from the usual order of things which included several carols by the school and several selections on the mandolin by Mr. Feifer, of the Mandolin Club of the University of New York. W. D. Murray, the superintendent of the school, then read a very interesting Christmas story entitled, "Little Duke."

The last on the programme came Santa Claus as a surprise, and his voice sounded uncommonly like that of Fred H. Andrews. Santa came in with a rush, and after a look around the school remarked on the many years that had passed since he had been there. He then wanted to know who was boss, and on being told that Mr. Murray was, he expressed a wish to see "Little Willie" Murray, as he had a present for him. When the superintendent appeared, and after being patted on the head, he was presented with a remarkable little toy that resembled a horse and which emitted sundry noises that sounded like a bell. Then came a little wooden fire engine for Arthur Baynon. Miss Carrie Dewey was presented with a doll's piano amid the shouts of the rest. Charles L. Lewis was given a trumpet and instructed to blow it when he wanted to sing. J. A. V. Craighead received a toy drum, while there was a toy gun for Douse Van-Vliet, who was not present. A doll's cook stove and dishes were waiting for Miss Mabel Bonnell, while a delightful assortment of jumping jacks were given to A. T. Slausson and Miss Fannie Foster. A musical top was taken from the depths of the pack for I. C. Pearson. Then Santa Claus went deep into his pack again and drew out a little nickel thing that looked something like a camera. This he presented to Dr. Ben Hedges, and informed him that it was an Xrays machine. The doctor received the gift with great thankfulness, and then the members of the school and their friends adjourned to the lower floor where refreshments were served.

CONGEGATIONAL CHURCH.

A crowd of happy faces filled the Congrenational church last night, when the members of the Sunday-school and their friends came together to enjoy the Christmas entertainment.

The church was prettily trimmed with evergreens while an elaborately decorated Christmas tree stood at the right of the platform. The programme which was given was unusually well arranged, and was thoroughly enjoyed. It opened with a carol, "Ring, ring, ring the bells," sung by the school, with a solo by Miss Agnes La Boyteaux. Prayer was offered by the pastor, Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, after which a trio for women's voices, "Say, Where is He Born?" from Mendelssohn's "Christus," was sung by Miss M. G. Morse, Miss E. A. Whitney and Miss Julia Belknap. This was followed by a violin solo, "Serenade," charmingly played by Miss Nellie B. Whiton, accompanied by Mrs. M. E. Dwight. A "Chinese Motion Song" was the next number, sung by Misses Marion Dwight, Ethel Weseman, Enid Fonda and Fanny Condon, dressed in pretty and becoming kimonos, and carrying Chinese parasols and fans. Mr. Bristol, precentor of the Sunday-school, next sang a comic song and gave a comic recitation. This was followed by a recitation and tableaux, "The Mar-

UNDER A FLORAL BELL.

HARRY C. RUNYON AND LOUISA BAKER PLEDGED TOGETHER TO DWELL.

Hymen Completes the Scene for Which Cupid Prepared the Way—Ceremony Performed Amid a Host of Friends.

A pretty home wedding took place last evening when Miss Louisa Baker and Harry Chase Runyon, one of Plainfield's young lawyers, were united in marriage at the home of the bride in the Crescent flats on Watchung avenue.

The rooms were artistically decorated for the occasion with evergreens, roses, carnations and smilax. A floral bell, which was made of evergreen and was lined with carnations and roses, was hung in the centre of the parlor and under it the ceremony was performed by Rev. J. Kennedy Newell. The bridal party marched in through the sitting room to the Lohengrin wedding march, played on the piano by Miss Ida E. Dunham. The ushers, Robert M. Clark and Francis J. Blatz, led the party and then came the bridemaid, Miss Minnie L. Stiglitz, gowned in white organdie over blue silk, and carrying a bouquet of white carnations, and the best man, Charles J. McNabb. The bride and groom followed to the wedding bell under which he ceremony was performed.

The bride was gowned in white brocaded silk and carried a bouquet of white roses.

After congratulations, an elaborate collation was served. Then the couple were escorted to a coach decorated for the occasion with white streamers by friends of the couple. The left on the 9:23 train for New York, from where they went this morning to Washington, D. C., to spend the rest of the week. Just as they were seated in the car, some of their friends, who had accompanied them to the train, showered them with rice to the amusement of the other passengers, who enjoyed the fun as well as the friends.

UPSET BY THE FENDER.

Ned Waring Did Not Get Out of the Way of a Car Soon Enough.

Donald Stuart and Ned Waring, both of Park avenue, had an adventure with a trolley car last evening while on their way down town. It was about 9:30 o'clock and the boys had reached the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street. There was quite a number of people waiting for the car, which was in sight down the street, and the boys decided to stop the car. They stood in the middle of the track, and waited for the car. The car came and the motorman, seeing that the boys were joking, kept on. Stuart jumped out of the way just in time, but Waring was too late, for the fender struck his feet and knocked them out from under him. He was just about to sit down on the fender when Stuart, who had taken in the situation, made a grand effort, seized Waring by the coat tail and threw him into the gutter and away from in front of the car. Some of the spectators of the scene screamed when Waring started to fall, and all expected a serious ending to the little fun.

STILL ZERO WEATHER.

The Kind That Brings Joy to the Ice Dealers.

There was but slight abatement in the cold this morning and the mercury still remained close to the zero mark. It began to grow cold yesterday afternoon and the sun began to sink below the horizon and the mercury fell rapidly. There was no wind but the cold was the kind that left frozen ears, noses and finger. This morning the thermometer registered 4 degrees above zero at seven o'clock and then gradually rose as the heat of the sun had its effect.

The continued cold weather is very promising for the ice men and they will soon be able to cut ice in the pond in Washington Valley. The skating is, of course, excellent and coming as it does in the Christmas holidays, it is thoroughly enjoyed by the young people.

Thomas Morrison, of Mountain avenue, formerly editor of the News, has an experimental printing establishment in the rear of his residence. Sunday night the fire went out and the pipes running to the boiler were frozen. Yesterday morning the pipes burst. Outside of losing the day's work the damage was slight.

Another case of frozen pipes resulted yesterday in the basement, occupied by B. T. Barnes, adjoining the press room of this paper, where he makes his candies. Mr. Barnes was in the basement at the time the pipe burst, which allowed the water to run to a considerable extent. Mr. Barnes hastily shut the water off in the adjoining part of the basement before any damage was done.

RAN WITHOUT A DRIVER.

Carl Kaerth's Team Indulged in a Fractious Dash Last Night.

An exciting runaway was witnessed last evening about 8 o'clock, when Carl Kaerth's fractious team of horses, that have run away so often, took another wild dash. They were attached to the heavy delivery wagon.

Mr. Kaerth says that the horses left him at Sandford avenue and they ran down Front street to Park avenue. They did not attain any speed until they passed into Park avenue. The wagon struck the fire hydrant on Kenney's corner and sparks of fire flew in every direction. This did not stop them, however, and they went on at terrific speed. Winfield Coddington caught one horse in the flight, but he was thrown in the roadway and narrowly escaped injury.

At the corner of Park avenue and Second street, the team ran up on the sidewalk, near the night lunch-wagon, and before they had an opportunity of going through Marsh, Ayres & Co.'s store, a young man named Pierson caught the team and held them until Patrolmon Vanderweg appeared and took charge. A few minutes later Mr. Kaerth appeared and succeeded in getting his wagon to his bottling establishment on East Second street. The front part of the wagon was a complete wreck, but no other damage resulted.

TROLLEY UP THE NOTCH

WASHINGTONVITLE PEOPLE RAISING MONEY FOR THAT PURPOSE.

The Railway People Are Willing to Go to Mt. Park Inn That Way and Property Owners Are Willing to Do Their Share.

Washingtonville wants the trolley, or at least most of her citizens do, and the trolley wants Washingtonville. And as it is agreeable to both sides, another year is likely to see the street railway extended up the Notch to Washingtonville; meanwhile the residents of that little place are working to get the road in that direction.

It has long been the wish of the Plainfield Street railway to extend its lines up to the Mountain Park Inn. It was originally planned to have the road run up this side of the mountain, following Jenning's lane and reach the Inn by that path. It was then suggested that the trolley should run over to Washingtonville on the other side of the valley and up the easy grade in the Notch. At Washingtonville the line would turn to the right and then go up the side of the mountain which is not as steep on that side as on the other. It would, of course, make the road considerably longer and there would be some grading to be done.

The trolley would benefit Washingtonville while that place would also benefit the road. The company was willing to go that way providing the people of that neighborhood would be willing to bear part of the expense of running the tracks up there and the grading. The company agreed that if the residents of Washingtonville would give $500 toward the extra expense incurred in running the trolley through that village, they would pay the rest of it.

Those in favor of the trolley were headed by Robert Clark, Jr., Theodore Luersen and W. H. Rogers, all of whom reside in the valley, and own property there. They worked among their fellow residents and succeeded in raising about $300 toward that object. They have now decided to call a meeting of the citizens interested in the project, to talk it over and raise the rest of the necessary amount. The meeting will probably be held this week.

The funds subscribed will be paid as soon as asked for and will be deposited in the bank to the credit of Mr. Clark, who will turn it over to the company as soon as the line is completed. The promoters of the trolley in Washingtonville are very confident that before another winter the trolley cars will be running up to Washingtonville as regularly as they now run to Dunellen.

M'KINLEY FAVORS IT

Approves the Proposed Bill for International Bimetallism.

SENATOR WALCOTT'S VISIT TO CANTON

Went To Consult the President-Elect as Chairman of the Committee Appointed To Draft the Measure. More Cabinet Talk.

Canton, O., Dec. 29.—Senator E. O. Wolcott, who spent two hours with Major McKinley yesterday afternoon, was seen at the depot last evening just before his departure, and, in reply to a question, said: "I came to Canton as chairman of the committee of five appointed by the republican senators in caucus to draft a bill to carry into effect that plank of the St. Louis platform on the subject of international bimetallism. The bill meets the hearty approval of the president-elect. It authorizes the president to appoint delegates to an international monetary conference when such a meeting shall be called. Several European countries are interested in the matter, and sentiment in favor of further recognition of silver through international agreement is spreading abroad. There may be a conference within a short time after Major McKinley is inaugurated." Senator Wolcott talked on a number of other topics and remarked that a pronounced anti-silver man with a record of opposition to bimetallism would probably not be looked upon in the west with favor as secretary of the treasury. Politicians from Minnesota, who were also here, declared that there is active opposition to the appointment of ex-Gover Merriam to the cabinet, and that if he were appointed, Senator Davis would oppose his confirmation. Frank S. Witherbee, an active factor in New York politics, spent half an hour with Major McKinley. He said the republicans of New York had united in asking for the appointment of Mr. Bliss to the cabinet, and declared Mr. Platt would be the next senator from the state. Mrs. Maria S. Saxton, an aunt of Mrs. McKinley, by marriage, has been invited by Major and Mrs. McKinley to make her home in the White House with them and has accepted the invitation. She is one of Mrs. McKinley's warmest personal friends. Major McKinley is overwhelmed with visitors to-day.

FATAL LANDSLIDES

Nine Persons Known To Have Been Killed in County Kerry, Ireland.

HOUSES BURIED OUT OF SIGHT

The Victims' Bodies May Never Be Recovered---Horses and Cattle Also Buried---A Whole Village Annihilated in Italy.

Dublin, Dec. 29.—A landslide has occurred near Rathmore, County Kerry, doing great damage to property and causing the loss of at least nine lives. Heavy rains have fallen in that part of Ireland lately, with the result that some places that are generally dry now resemble vast morasses. Near Rathmore there is an eminence about 1,000 feet high known as Boy hill, and it was here that the landslide occurred. The rains percolating through the ground gradually loosened a huge mass of earth, and on Sunday night, apparently without the slightest warning, a large part of the surface of the hill began to slide towards the valley. Gaining momentum as it moved, it swept downward with a roaring sound, carrying rocks, trees and everything before it for miles. In some places the path of the landslide was a mile wide, and as it moved along it buried everything, entirely changing the aspect of the section over which it passed. The residence of Mr. Donnelly, steward of Lord Kenmare, one of whose seats, Killarney house, is at Killarney, was engulfed in the mass of earth and debris, and all of its occupans, Mr. Donnelly, his wife, and seven children, were killed. It is supposed that the house was swept from its foundations by the onrushing mass, overturned, and buried to a great depth. As its present locality is not known, it is hardly probable that the bodies will ever be recovered. All the cattle, pigs and horses on the place were also buried, and there is now a scene of utter desolation where on Sunday stood the neat dwelling and outbuildings of Mr. Donnelly. The movement of the landslide was to the southwest, in the direction of the river Flesk, into which a large portion of the earth and wreckage slipped, blocking it up. The current of the river was employed in running dynamos which furnished electric light for the Kerry Lunatic asylum and some buildings in Killarney. The blocking of the river stopped the current and rendered the dynamos temporarily useless. All the buildings using the light from this source were plunged into darkness, and it was some time before other lights could be obtained. The part of the hill where the slide began was a bog, and much of the ear h that moved was very soft. Huge quantities plunged into the river, and there is danger of the backwater flooding the country roundabout unless the current is able to carry the debris down with it. If anybody had been passing along the roads at the time the slide passed over they would surely have been buried. There have been no reports of anybody being missing, and on this is based the belief that there was no loss of life outside of the Donnelly family. The thatch which formed the roof of the Donnelly house was found floating in the river, and some people surmise that the bodies of some of the family may have been carried that far as well. The bog is still moving this morning, but no further damage can result unless it be the more effective damming of the river.

A NOVEL WELL BUCKET

The Stranger Who Called for a Drink Was Mystified.

A traveler who was journeying through Florida, not far in the interior, stopped one day for a drink of water at a house by the wayside.

"Cert'ny, stranger," said the sunburned, barefooted woman, who had met him at the door. Then she stuck her head through the crack and begun to call: "Sal! Here you, Sal! Take a gourd an' go git the stranger a fresh drink."

He watched and saw a tow-headed girl disappear down a path which led through a truck patch, until she stopped upon a small board platform. He saw her let a rope rapidly down, but there appeared to be no bucket attached, and he heard no knocking against the sides of the well, such as a bucket usually makes in its descent. When it was drawn up again, the girl had changed her position so that he could not see what was on the end of the rope, but he did not hear her set a bucket down, and, after she had left, saw only what looked like a bunch of weeds dangling from the rope. But she brought the water, and it appeared all right.

"How did you manage to get it," he asked, "without a bucket?"

"We've got a bucket," said she. "Dad brung us a new one yesterday. He fished it up quite awhile ago, but it had to be cleaned up."

Anxious to see the bucket that had been "fished up" and "cleaned," the traveler made some excuse to step to the well, and what he saw was a large sponge which, when it was let down, would absorb as much water as one person could draw up and hold a good share of it until it was drawn to the top and emptied by squeezing.—Detroit Free Press.

THE RHINOCEROS BIRD.

It Acts as Sentinel for the Savage and Uncouth Beast.

The rhinoceros is probably as clumsy in appearance as any animal that lives, yet is exceedingly fleet of foot, and few horses can overtake him. He can keep up a brisk pace for hours together, with little seeming fatigue, and if finally brought to bay can put up a great fight against his pursuers. He is always accompanied by a little bird known to hunters as the rhinoceros bird, which clings to the animal's hide by means of its long claws and elastic tail, feeding on the insects that infest the leathery skin. In doing this it renders great service to the huge brute, but a trifling one as compared to its other duty. It acts as a sentinel to warn its movable feeding place of immediate danger. While it is eating it is ever on the alert, and at the first stern sign of the hunter it flies in the air, uttering its warning note, which is ever quickly heeded, the rhinoceros starting off at once in the direction taken by its watchful friend. It is said that when the rhinoceros is asleep the bird on hearing the approach of an enemy will awaken him by picking at the tender skin inside his ear and raising a loud alarm.

QUEER ANIMAL PARTNERSHIP.

There are several species of rhinoceros which avoid encounter with man, and will only fight when hard pressed or when their young are in danger. Others, however, and more particularly the keitloa, will attack man or beast simply to gratify their love of fighting. The lion never risks an encounter with a rhinoceros, save when absolutely necessary for his own safety, and it is but seldom the elephant cares to measure strength with him, for the larger animal is far less quick in his movements than the smaller.

The rhinoceros of Asia is much better tempered than its African brothers. Nothing is definitely known as to the average age of this animal, but it is generally believed that the duration of life of an Asian rhinoceros is hardly less than 100 years.

do you eat iron

Some persons are always taking iron. If weak and easily exhausted; pale and without appetite; if the nervous system is weak, and sleep difficult, what do you take? Iron? But iron cannot supply food to the tissues; nor does it have any power to change the activity of unhealthy organs and bring them back to health. Cod-liver oil is what you need. The oil feeds the poorly-nourished tissues, and makes rich blood. Iodine, bromine, and other ingredients, which form part of the oil, have special power to alter unhealthy action.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, is the most palatable way to take cod-liver oil. The hypophosphites supply healthy nerve action, which controls all the processes of life.

SCOTT'S EMULSION has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. (Ask your doctor.) This is because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

Put up in 50 cent and $1.00 sizes. The small size may be enough to cure your cough or help your baby. All druggists.

SUPERIOR BANK TROUBLES.

Officers of the Suspended Institution Say All Will Be Paid in Full.

Superior, Wis., Dec. 29.—Officers of the Bank of Superior, which closed its doors yesterday in anticipation of a run, say to-day that all depositors will be paid in full. There is little excitement over the failure, as it is the general belief that the bank officers' statements are true. Henry S. Butler is assignee and has assumed charge of the bank's affairs. The failure is due to poor business and heavy withdrawals since the recent failures in St. Paul, Chicago and this city. The capital of the bank was $25,000 with surplus of $6,000. The deposits were nearly $100,000, including $13,210 of city funds. This makes nearly $30,000 of public funds tied up this week.

Minneapolis Bank Failure.

Minneapolis, Dec. 29.—The Scandia bank of this city did not open its doors this morning. This bank was organized fifteen years ago by Mons Grinager, a prominent Scandinavian politician of this state, who died in 1883. Its president is R. Sunde, who came to Minneapolis ten years ago from Wilmar, where he had made quite a fortune as a money-lender. The last obtainable statement of the condition of the bank was made on Oct. 6 last. It showed loans and discounts amounting to $189,288 and deposits aggregating $225,3337. Its business has been almost wholly with Scandinavians.

COLOMBIA MUST SETTLE.

Indemnity Will Be Demanded for Discrimination Against American Vessels.

Washington, Dec. 29. — Leopold Schapp of New York and his attorney appeared at the state department yesterday afternoon to make formal complaint against the goverment of Colombia for what they term the persistent persecution of American shipping, particularly in the case of the schooner George L. Whitford, owned by Mr. Schapp, and employed by him in bringing cocoanuts to the United States. This vessel was seized at Porto Cabello last March and detained at Colon several weeks on trumped up charges of landing contraband arms. Consul Pearcy of Colon, who was at the department, corroborated their statements to the effect that discriminations were made. It was also stated that vessels of other nationalities were not imposed upon. It is understood that Secretary Olney will take the matter up energetically with the Colombian government and insist upon fair treatment. An indemnity for the Whitford incident will also be demanded.

NEW YORK CITY BANKS.

The Reports of Forty Show a Prosperous Condition of Affairs.

Albany, Dec. 29.—The reports of the forty state banks in New York city which have been filed with the state banking department show a prosperous condition of affairs as compared with the former reports filed with the department. The total resources of the New York city banks amount to $168,559,191, an increase during the quarter of $10,548,092. The undivided profits amounted to $3,752,360, an increase of $687,873. The amount due depositors increased $6,167,237 to $112,709,108. The total surplus decreased $877,334 to $11,887,700. The loans and discounts increased $181,064 to $92,303,292. The amount of specie, United States legal tenders and circulating notes and cash items were increased by nearly $7,000,000.

McCoy Defeats Doherty.

London, Dec. 29.—A dispatch from Johannesburg, South African Republic, says that the fight between the American middle-weight boxer "Kid" McCoy and "Billy" Doherty of Australia for the middle-weight championship and £1,000 a side, the gate money to be divided, was won by McCoy in nine rounds. The men were to fight twenty rounds. Until the fourth round Doherty was the favorite.

American Steamship Repaired Abroad.

London, Dec. 29.—Three hundred riveters and caulkers have gone to Southampton from the shipyard of J. & G. Thompson of Glasgow for the purpose of overhauling the American line steamer St. Paul. It is stated that the entire hull of the St. Paul below a certain level must be reriveted. It will take a long time to do the work.

Effort for a Banker's Pardon.

Madison, Wis., Dec. 29.—Gov. Upham heard arguments yesterday afternoon for and against the release of John B. Koetting, sentenced to five years in state prison from this city for receiving deposits in the South Side Savings bank when he knew the bank to be insolvent. The governor took the matter under advisement.

British Steamer Lost.

London, Dec. 29. — The British steamer Volo, bound from Hull for Stettin, struck on the southern coast of Sweden during a fog Saturday and shortly afterward foundered. Her passengers and crew landed safely and went to Gothenburg. The cargo of the steamer was unusually valuable.

Gave His Life for Another's.

Pottsville, Pa., Dec. 29. — Robert Weston, aged 18, a graduate of the Pottsville Commercial college, was drowned at the Tumbling Run dam while endeavoring to rescue a companion who had broken through the ice. The body has not been recovered. Weston's companion was saved.

Matthews and Laughlin Fight a Draw.

Buffalo, Dec. 29.—Mattie Matthews of New York and John Laughlin of this city fought fifteen rattling rounds to a draw at the Conners Athletic club last night. Matthews was the aggressor all through; nearly all the fighting took place in Laughlin's corner.

COURT HOUSE FIRE.

Binghamton's County Building Completely Destroyed.

MOST OF THE RECORDS SAVED

One Fireman Seriously Injured---Flames Also Destroy a Large Furniture House in Washington---Lumber Yard Blaze at Boston.

Binghamton, N. Y., Dec. 29.—Fire which started at 10 o'clock last night in the county court house completely destroyed that structure, only the walls remaining. As it stood in the middle of a big square the fire did not spread. The county records were in another structure and were not harmed, but the surrogate's records were totally destroyed. The surrogates library was in a fire-proof vault and was saved. The library of Appellate Judge Martin, valued at $5,000, was half destroyed, the other portion being rescued at considerable risk before the dome fell. The building was erected fifty years ago, and some notorious criminals, among them Ruloff and Menkin, who murdered his sweetheart, have been sentenced in its judicial halls. During the progress of the fire the Hayes truck, with three men on its ladder, gave way, the men falling to the ground. George Allen, member of Excelsior Hook and Ladder company, was seriously injured.

Big Blaze in Washington.

Washington, Dec. 29.—Lansburg's "Rink," one of the largest furniture establishments in Washington, was totally destroyed by fire last night. It was situated on New York avenue, very near the treasury department, and opposite the New York avenue Presbyterian church. The Epiphany church on G street is just in the rear of the burned structure, and the Foundry church (which Mr. McKinley will attend) is also in close proximity. As the night was calm, however, none of these edifices were endangered.

Large Lumber Fire.

Boston, Dec. 29.—A fire in the large lumber dry-house of W. H. Leatherbe & Son, corner of Albany and East Dedham streets, yesterday afternoon caused great alarm, owing to the proximity of other lumber yards and inflammable material. The fire was confined to the Leatherbee building, but about 150,000 feet of lumber was destroyed.

WANTS CHINA'S TRADE.

Winchester Arms Company Accepts Li Hung Chang's Invitation.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 29.—The first American house in the east to accept the invitation given last summer by Li Hung Chang to the manufacturers of this country to send their representatives to China to show their goods is the Winchester Repeating Arms company of this city. Henry Brewer, one of the company's representatives, will immediately start for China to exhibit the model 1895, or, as it is commonly known, the Winchester army rifle, and the Lee straight pull rifle, adopted for the navy by the United States government. During his stay in China Mr. Brewer will exhibit these rifles to the government officials and viceroys.

New York Railroad Commissioner.

Albany, Dec. 29.—Col. Ashley W. Cole, Gov. Morton's private secretary, will this afternoon be appointed a state railroad commissioner to succeed commissioner Samuel A. Beardsley of Utica, who has handed in his resignation. The governor will then designate his military secretary, Col. Selden E. Marvin of Albany, to be acting private secretary for the remainder of his term. After Jan. 1 Col. Marvin will act as private secretary to the then Lieut.-Gov. Timothy L. Woodruff at a salary of $4,000.

Refused To Endorse Choate's Candidacy.

New York, Dec. 29.—At a meeting of the Republican club last night Senator Pavey offered a resolution that the club endorse the candidacy of Joseph H. Choate for the United States senate. John Sabine Smith offered a substitute, to the effect that it was not proper to endorse the candidacy of any man not already nominated by the republican party. The substitute resolution was adopted by acclamation by a good sized majority.

Acquitted of the Charge of Intimidation.

Boston, Dec. 29.—In the superior criminal court a verdict of not guilty was returned by the jury in the case of Louis Ash, Joseph Harris, Reuben Bornstein and Jacob Grauss, walking delegates of a local garment makers' union, who were tried for the alleged intimidation of Annie Levine and David Hoffman, to force them to leave the employ of Michael & Israel Barron, tailors, on October 5. The defendants were discharged.

Secretary Francis in St. Louis.

St. Louis, Dec. 29.—Secretary of the Interior Francis, who arrived in St. Louis from Washington yesterday morning, intends to return to the national capital this evening. He resolutely declined to be interviewed, and declared his visit here was on personal business.

Appointed by Gov. Morton.

Albany, Dec. 29.—Gov. Morton has appointed Harrison S. Moore of Little Neck, L. I., to be county judge of the county of Queens, and James W. Yelverton of Schenectady to be county treasurer of Schenectady county.

LET THE CITY PAY.

The sum of money which Councilman Fisk has appropriated from his own private bank account for the work of street improvement since the regular appropriation was exhausted, amounts to something like $939. As suggested by a prominent business man in a communication to this paper after the city election, the city should repay Mr. Fisk at the earliest possible moment. The city should not be under obligations of this kind from any of its citizens. It was a very clever thing for the Mayor-elect to do, this effort to keep the city streets looking presentable, but it is to be hoped that it will never happen again when well-to-do officials think it necessary to go down into their own pockets to pay for that for which they should only contribute their portion through the channel of taxation. It is not good government.

A PRACTICAL ACTION.

The fact of the Public Library officers establishing distributing points at convenient locations for those who desire to take advantage of the resources of that institution, as explained in another column, shows an active and sincere desire on their part to make the library something more than a mere creditable acquisition to the city; it evinces an intention to have it fulfill the functions for which it was endowed in a practical way.

Every Plainfielder will find the proceedings of the Common Council, last night, of more than ordinary interest. Figures may be dry reading, but they're the things that catch the eye of the taxpayer every time.

The after-election confidence that Chicago banks seem to enjoy is of the misplaced kind.

LIBRARY DISTRIBUTING POINTS.

Convenient Places Where Good Reading Can Be Secured From the Library.

Beginning with the new year the Public Library will open two delivery stations, where orders may be left for books and books called for. These stations will be located at the Y. M. C. A. library on Front street and Watchung avenue, and at Hope chapel on Fourth street, near Plainfield avenue. Collections at the former station will be made on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 10 a. m., and at the latter place on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 11 a. m.

Full particulars relating to these stations are printed on circulars, which may be obtained at both stations or at the library. These circulars are also being distributed at the large shops, factories, etc. Borrowers at the stations will have the same privileges as those at the library. If you have not already a library circular ask at one of the places above mentioned, for one. These should be preserved for reference, as they contain full information relating to this new departure in the library's work.

COTILLION CLUB'S FIRST EVENT.

A Pleasant Affair for Which the Misses VanBoskerck Were Sponsers.

The Cotillion Club met for the first time this season last evening at the Casino when they were entertained by the Misses VanBoskerck, of West Seventh street. The room was very prettily decorated in red and green to correspond with the evergreens and holly berries, which were used largely in decorating. The favors were hung on a Christmas tree, which was placed in one end of the room. Mrs. George W. VanBoskerck was assisted in giving out the favors by Mrs. J. W. Reinhart, Mrs. O. T. Waring and Mrs. Samuel Huntington.

Almost all the members of the club were present and the first dance proved a very delightful affair.

To Open a Shoe Store.

Morris VanArsdale, who formerly kept a shoe store in this city, and who is now running an establishment in Greenwich, Conn., will come to this city about March 1st and open a shoe store in the old post office building on East Front street. He is well known in this city, where he was in partnership with John H. Doane for a number of years.

Learning a Sunday-school Lesson.

The meeting of the Primary Teacher's Union held yesterday afternoon was of special interest and the attendance of teachers was large. Mrs. Powlison led the devotional exercises and the lesson was taught by Miss Beeching, who also conducted a consecration service after the lesson had been taught.

—P. Markey, the baker, makes just as delicious things after Christmas as he does before. Try him and see.

PASSING COMMENT.

An expert on the manufacture of gas makes the statement that the illuminating article can be manufactured for 44 cents per thousand feet, and yet Plainfielders are compelled to pay $2.25 per thousand feet.

Of course there is no need of suggesting that whatever the name of New Brunswick is attached to is necessarily doomed to hoodooism, but still there are those who are so superstitious that they believe that the Pennsylvania ferry boat would not have gone up in fire if it had not been named after the old Dutch town to the east of Plainfield.

With picnics and excursions in the summer and sociables and Christmas trees in the winter, it is comparatively an easy thing for the churches to retain the interest and attention of the little people, but how a similar effect may be had on youngsters in teens just blossoming into manhood is one of the things which no church has been successful in solving so as to have a general effect. From Carthage, Mo., however, comes a plan which may commend itself to those seeking a way in which to induce young men to go to church. It is having young ladies act as ushers. Besides the incentive that this system would incur in young men to go to church is the additional fact that the front pews might be filled up more rapidly.

Yesterday afternoon Corra Ryno, manager of the circulation department of The Daily Press, was told that the carrier boys wanted to interview him in the distributing room. With forebodings of a strike or some other dire calamity happening in that department of the paper, Mr. Ryno descended from the business office with nervous tread and mythical mind. Awaiting his coming were the carrier boys with here and there a face awry with suppressed smile and others sober as deacons. Tommy Muir, who has gained the sobriquet of "The Bard," at the High School, stepped forward and in a few graceful words presented Mr. Ryno with a beautiful meerschaum cigar holder as an evidence of the friendly feeling and esteem entertained by the boys. Mr. Ryno was taken completely by surprise He appreciated the gift, and the feeling in which it was presented, more than words could express.

With the ponderous majority of 1,600 that Plainfield rolled up for McKinley in the recent Presidential election, it would be a foolish effort to try to prove at this late day that Bryan was a popular man in a political way in this community, but still there was a little incident at the performance of Ward and Vokes, at Music Hall, Saturday night, that shows the "Boy Orator" still has staunch friends. During the performance of "A Run On the Bank" there is a quartette of male voices in which each member sings a verse represented to be the sentiment of Bryan McKinley, Harrison and Cleveland. The actors not only sing the part, but they also look it with as close fidelity to the original as wigs, dress and paint can make them. It was plainly noticeable that the verse sang by the Bryan emulator was accorded the heartiest applause of the four, and but few hisses mingled with the approval. McKinley's man got a warm reception, but was not as enthusiastic as his late opponent. To the local theatregoer this seemed a trifle odd because heretofore whenever McKinley and Bryan's names were mentioned together, the former's friends made the efforts of Democratic followers seem, in comparative vociferousness, like the beating of a bass drum against the roll of thunder.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN AND NEW MARKET.

Mrs. Charles Carpenter is entertaining company from out-of-town.

Oscar Runyon enjoyed a sleighride to Somerville and return, yesterday.

Mrs. George CaVan, of Brooklyn, is visiting Mrs. John Cramer, of West Dunellen.

Mrs. J. W. Griggs is entertaining her sister, Miss Stella Griggs, of New Brunswick.

E. Dorcall, of Philadelphia, is visiting his aunt, Mrs. M. A. Shepard of Front street.

William Gulick was ill at his home, yesterday, and in consequence his store was closed all day.

Alvah Gray has succeeded in matching his draught horse, and now he has a team second to none in the place.

W. H. Carman drove to Milstone, Somerset County, yesterday, and brought home a self-feeding Baltimore heater.

Miss Georgianna Reusch of Cranford and her brother, Howard, are visiting Mrs. F. Otto at New Market for a week or so.

During next week, except Saturday, union prayer meetings will be held alternately in the Methodist and Presbyterian churches.

Issac Laing and Adam Dealaman went out hunting, yesterday afternoon accompanied by the latter's new Irish setter dog. Game was scarce, however, and but little was brought home.

The post office thermometer registered five degrees below zero at 8 o'clock yesterday morning, and farmers who gazed at it thought something must be wrong with the mercury.

The Rev. Mr. Custard pastor of the M. E. church, conducted services as usual in his church, Sunday night, although not feeling well. Yesterday he was confined to the house suffering from a severe cold, but his speedy recovery is anxiously awaited by his many friends.

Skating continues good on the New Market pond. Yesterday some two hundred or more young people were on the pond skating and a horse and several men were set to work clearing off more of the snow. The ice is now about seven inches thick and about ready for cutting.

Deputy tax collector Richard York has collected in most of the taxes from Piscataway township for the past year, and yesterday he made his returns to the borough collector, George W. Day. With few exceptions the delinquents came to time with little or no trouble.

It is said that an effort will be made in the spring to close up the pond in front of the Smock property on West Front street. The pond is a nice little body of water in the summer time, but it becomes stagnent although fed by springs, and is considered a sort of malaria breeder in the spring and fall.

A. A. Parker, the chicken fancier, went to New York with some twenty of his blue-breasted game bantams yesterday, and entered them in the chicken show now in progress in Madison Square Garden. Several of his birds won prizes at the recent poultry exhibition in the Cycle Academy at Plainfield.

The Emerydale station seems to be having its share of adversities. While the building was closed, early Saturday evening, some scamp tore down the chimney and pulled the stove pipe out through the opening in the rear wooden partition. A bright coal fire was burning in the cylinder stove in the wating room at the time and it is almost a wonder the stove was not upset and the building set on fire.

SCOTCH PLAINS.

John Reick and Eugene Guerrier spent Christmas and Saturday hunting near Lambert's. They shot two rabbits and caught four more in their hands. The latter had been driven into their hole by the heavy fall of snow, and were nearly starved when captured.

The spring election to elect town committeemen and other township officers is likely to be very exciting. There are some disgruntled taxpayers who think that a change in business, so far as the political aspect of the board is now constituted, would benefit all. With a single exception the board is now Republican, and during the past year things have not been going exactly satisfactory to some of the taxpayers.

If there is any one thing over which the taxpayers are sore just at present, it is the neglect of the authorities in leaving the fire department apparatus out in the street, where they have been ever since last week. Several members of the department declare that in case the apparatuses are needed it will require strong teams of horses to drag them away from their present location. The hook and ladder truck, Plainfield's original hand engine, "Gazelle No. 1," and a hose carriage with 300 feet or more of comparatively new hose, all stand out in the elements, and without one particle of shelter. The M. E. church Sunday-school had an entertainment in the engine house recently, and the apparatuses were removed into th e street where they still remain.

WASHINGTONVILLE.

The exercises at the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel were held Christmas night, the chapel being filled by the members of the Sunday-school and their friends. The programme:

Electric Bitters

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

X The flowers that bloom to please the eye and cheer the heart, are gone, but we have their fragrance preserved, and for sale, in bottles; prices from 10c. to $8 00, ONE QUALITY ONLY—size and kind of package making difference in price. Best value we ever offered. MAS

HOW SHE FOOLED HIM.

BY HELEN GRAVES.

The momentous interview between Mrs. Jefferson Wayland and Mr. Hopkins was over at last—and the lady was heartily glad that it was so. All her smiles and suavity were needed—all her slender stock of patience was exhausted.

"Of all intolerable creatures, I do think an old bachelor is the most intolerable," thought Mrs. Wayland to herself, looking at Mr. Hopkins with the sweetest and most interested of expression. "I wonder if he really means to stay here all day—and I have an engagement at two!"

But Mr. Hopkins had risen to his feet at last, with an "ahem," and a manifest intention of going, and Mrs. Wayland rose, too, with a soft rustle of silken robes and expensive laces.

"Then you think, madam, that circumstances are tolerably auspicious as regards the consummation of my matrimonial happiness within a very brief period of time?" was Mr. Hopkins' final query.

"My dear sir, I am quite sure of it," answered Mrs. Wayland, emphatically, as she followed Noah Hopkins, Esquire, to her front door.

Noah was a tall, portly gentleman, something on the shady side of 50, with massive gold eye-glasses, and scanty hair, brushed carefully to hide the bald spot on the crown of his respectable head—a gentleman who pronounced his words slowly and sententiously and somehow seemed to carry in his very presence the auriferous idea of bank stock, railroad bonds and productive coupons!

"Yes, but, madam, Miss Wayland is so very—ahem!—so remarkably undemonstrative—I might even say so decidedly cold in her manner—"

"Oh, my dear sir," smoothly interrupted Mrs. Wayland, "that is the way with all girls at this interesting period of their lives. Nothing on earth but maidenly shyness—natural girlish timidity, I assure you!"

Mr. Hopkins looked gratified, but still doubtful.

"You are quite certain, then, that she really loves me?"

"There cannot possibly be a doubt of it, Mr. Hopkins!"

And Noah Hopkins departed, treading gleefully over the ringing pavements as his thoughts reverted ever and anon to the pretty 18-year-old damsel who was, cupid willing, so soon to become Mrs. Hopkins.

But what did Bessy Wayland herself think of it? And how did she contemplate the near approach of orange blossoms and wedding ring?

She sat there by the window, as her mother returned from bidding a ceremonious adieu to Mr. Hopkins, a modern edition of Niobe, "all in tears."

She was small and fragile, with shady blue eyes, rather large and languishing; light brown hair that had an irresistible inclination to curl all over her head in tiny gold-burnished rings, and cheeks where changing dimples hid away among the loveliest roses.

"Crying again, my dear?" said Mrs. Wayland, in accents of mild reproach. "Really, Bessie, your conduct is most inscrutable."

"Mamma!" sobbed Bessie, flashing rebellion from the brimming blue orbs, "I hate Mr. Hopkins!"

"My dearest child!" exclaimed the horrified mother, "don't let me ever hear you say such a shockingly unladylike thing again! When he is so condescending as to notice a child like you!"

"Yes, but, mamma—"

"I quite understand the meaning of this new freak of obstinacy," went on Mrs. Wayland, sternly. "You have seen Charley Evans again."

"I couldn't help it, mamma," faltered Bessie; "he was at the door just as I came out of church last night, and when I—"

"The idea!" ejaculated Mrs. Wayland, holding up both her hands and looking appealingly at the ceiling, as if for inspiration. "And you can actually stoop to fancy a clerk in Mr. Hopkins' banking establishment!"

"But I don't 'fancy' him, mamma," returned Bessie, stoutly; "I love him with my whole heart."

"Hush—sh—h!" exclaimed Mrs. Wayland, authoritatively. "You will be married a month from to-morrow to Mr. Hopkins, Charley Evans to the contrary notwithstanding. And now let us sit down and make out a complete list of the dresses and things you will want."

"I don't care for dresses," pouted Bessie; but Mrs. Wayland paid no attention whatever to her remonstrance and opened her tablets, putting the pencil thoughtfully to her lips.

"You see, we must be very careful at first, for Mr. Hopkins is so exceedingly economical—it won't do to shock his ideas of what is proper and fitting."

Bessie winked away the tears and listened—nay, she almost smiled as her mother wrote down item after item. Mrs. Wayland could have hugged herself for her diplomacy.

"The girl never yet lived who could resist the attraction of new clothes and an outfit of dresses," she thought. "I knew how to bring the willful little minx to reason!"

"Bessie," she said, as she finally closed the little set of tablets and restored the pencil to its place within them, "Mr. Hopkins is coming to take you out walking to-morrow."

"Very well, mamma."

"And I think you had better wear your blue silk with the double satin folds. Never mind about putting on your new earrings and pin. Mr. Hopkins has some rather peculiar ideas, and might consider them a little extravagant for people in our circumstances."

"Yes, mamma," said Bessie, as docile as a four-year-old child.

She was all ready, looking exceedingly lovely in the blue silk dress, when Mr. Noah Hopkins called for her, according to the programme, next morning.

"What a lucky fellow I am," thought Noah, exultantly, as he drew the little gloved hand within his arm, with a sensation of proprietorship very agreeable to experience.

"Do stop a minute, Mr. Hopkins," said Bessie, as they reached the glittering splendors of a jeweler's window, "I just want to look at those pretty things! Aren't those rubies perfectly splendid. You're going to buy me a set of emeralds and diamonds, aren't you, when we are married? And a real Geneva watch with a bouquet of brilliants on the case? And a pair of those lovely link bracelets? I never had much jewelry, but when I'm married, I mean to buy everything that is pretty. And you'll get me a parure of big white pearls, won't you?"

"I—I'll think of it," stammered Mr. Hopkins, rather taken aback by the extent of his bride-elect's expectations.

"It will be so nice to have a rich husband," went on Bessie, artlessly. "Mamma says you'll let me have a carriage and a pair of darling little cream-colored ponies, that I can drive myself, with silver-mounted harness, and—"

"Y-yes, but you don't consider, my dear—horses are shockingly expensive," interrupted Noah, wiping his brow with a huge yellow silk pocket handkerchief.

"What of that? You're rich, aren't you? I shall have a housekeeper, and two maids, and a colored waiter, and white kid gloves—"

"Kid gloves are two dollars a pair, my dear," apologetically put in Mr. Hopkins.

"That's nothing, as long as one has a rich husband! We shall go to Saratoga, or the White mountains, for at least two months every year, of course. I always did sigh for a gay life and plenty of excitement."

"Sixty dollars a week for eight weeks—four hundred and eighty dollars!" mentally computed Noah, with a slight shiver. "I shall come to the poorhouse, as sure as I'm a living sinner!"

"And as many dresses as I want," pursued Bessie, clapping her little hands, "Mrs. Glenn has 32 silks, and I don't know how many of nuns' veiling and taffetas. Oh, Noah, how glad I am that you are rich!"

Noah Hopkins stared confusedly down at the blue eyes that were upturned to his so unconsciously.

"You'll have a billiard table, of course? I dote on billiards—and a yacht, for I'm so fond of the salt air, and sea bathing, and—"

"I'll have a private insane asylum and put myself in it first!" ejaculated Noah, driven to the very borders of distraction. "Miss Wayland, I must have entirely misunderstood your character, from beginning to end!"

"I shouldn't at all wonder if you had," said Bessie, demurely.

"I certainly never for an instant contemplated such frightful extravagance as you seem to coolly take for granted."

"If I marry a rich husband I certainly mean to use his money and enjoy it," said Bessie, defiantly.

"Then, ma'am, allow me to remark that you will not use mine! I—I prefer remaining single!"

"And what's to become of me, with all my wedding clothes ordered?" whimpered Bessie, trying very hard to summon the semblance of mortified tears into her mischievous blue eyes.

"Perhaps you might prefer some younger man?" suggested Noah, with the lively horror of a breach of promise suit rising up before his mind's eye. "I understand that my clerk, Mr. Evans, is—"

Bessie's cheeks glowed like carmine.

"Mr. Evans' situation does not justify him in marrying—he is too poor. I'm afraid you'll have to take me yourself."

Noah involuntarily recoiled from the idea of pony carriages, cream-colored horses and yachts.

"Yes, but—but our head clerkship is vacant, at a salary of $2,000 a year. I did intend it for old Bogsley, but Charley Evans is a very deserving young fellow, and—"

Here Miss Bessie interrupted him by standing on her tiptoe to give him a kiss that almost shook his resolutions of celibacy. But he remembered the colored waiter, with the white kid gloves, and stood firm!

"But what will mamma say?" suddenly questioned Bessie.

"I will make it all right with her, my dear," said Mr. Noah Hopkins, thinking of the gorgeous India shawl full of palm leaves and pagodas, wherewith he would propitiate the impending anger of his mother-in-law that was not to be.

"It'll cost a deuce of a sum," thought Noah, sorrowfully, "but it won't compare with the daily and hourly drain of an extravagant wife. I'm well out of this scrape, shawl or no shawl!"

So our little Bessie went triumphantly home, to work at her wedding garments with renewed zeal, sewing a happy thought in with every stitch, and Charley Evans was that very day agreeably surprised with a $2,000 position, formally presented to him with a little stiff speech by Noah Hopkins, Esq.

"Poor Evans," thought Noah, as Charley left him after a torrent of thanks, "that extravagant little puss will be the ruin of him, before he is a year older; but it's no business of mine."

Nevertheless, Mr. Evans would persist in rushing blindly upon his fate, and married Bessie Wayland on the very day originally set for the consummation of Noah's own nuptials. Mr. Hopkins went to the wedding, and muttered thoughtfully to himself, as the bridal party passed beneath the arched doorway of the church:

"Good Apollo! what an escape I have had!"

But Mr. and Mrs. Evans were quite contented with the existing state of things.—N. Y. Weekly.

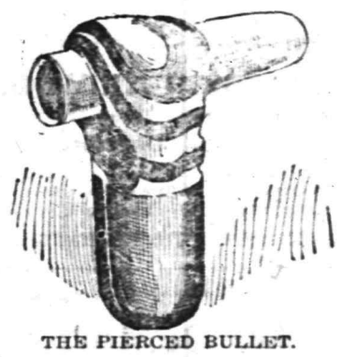
—Mr. Fabre claimed that after 16 years of cultivation he secured a variety of wheat from a common grass, the "Aegilops Ovata," which grows abundantly all over the south of Europe. Others, however, claim that he was mistaken, and that the flowers of the plants in his experiments were hybridized with wheat.

THE FORCE OF BULLETS.

Illustrated by a Remarkable Find Recently Made.

Springfield Rifle Bullet Pierced by the Smaller Missile of the Lately-Introduced Regular Army Magazine Rifle.

In battles, where bullets fly as thick as hailstones, instances are known where two bullets have met and mashed one another into a shapeless mass, for a few cases of such meetings are recorded by such shapeless masses of lead being picked up on the field of battle and preserved in the museums of our country. But a case similar to the one presented by the illustration herewith is very rare, and is probably the first of its kind known, as it shows the old lead bullet used in the Springfield rifle pierced by the bullet of the new magazine rifle now in use in the army. The strange condition of affairs was picked up on the government rifle range up the Licking river, where the troops of Fort Thomas hold their target practice, and is looked upon by the officer to whom it belongs as one of the strangest things of the kind he has ever met with during his service. The Springfield rifle was in use from the time of the late war until a year ago, when it was put aside, and what is called the magazine rifle, caliber 30, was issued to the troops. The larger bullet shown in the illustration is the lead bullet fired from the old Springfield, and the smaller one the new bullet fired from the new rifle. In rear of the targets upon the rifle range is an earth embankment which stops the bullet after it has pierced the paper target. Into this embankment the lead bullet had bored its way some time during the past years since the range has been in use. There it has remained undisturbed until the small bullet entered the earth at the same point and pierced the old one. One peculiar feature of the strange condition is that the small bullet is as tightly imbedded in the large one as if it had been fused there, showing that the small one had become so hot in passing through the ground that it melted the leaden one in its passage into it. This will not seem strange when the terrific speed and penetrating force of this little projectile is known. It travels 109 yards in



THE PIERCED BULLET.

0.160 seconds, 1,000 yards in 2,664 seconds; while in going 2,000 yards the time is but 7,556 seconds. From experiments made at different military posts the penetration of this seemingly harmless-looking little piece of metal is beyond belief.

At 10 yards the bullet will pass through two feet of seasoned white oak plank; at 200 yards through 3¾ feet of poplar or 0.20 inches of steel or 0.30 inches of wrought iron; at 2,000 yards through 4 inches of deal plank, and at 3,500 yards still has sufficient force to pass through a man. On leaving the muzzle of the rifle the bullet is going at the rate of 2,000 feet a second. The bullet is a little over one inch long and consists of a nickeled steel case filled with lead, and weighs 220 grains. Forty-three grains of smokeless powder are used to propel the bullet.

Quite recently experiments were made at Fort Riley, Kansas, by firing into human cadavers, and photographs made of the bodies and parts hit by the projectiles. During the recent practice march of the command from Fort Thomas it was necessary to kill a beef for the use of the troops. The animal was tied to a tree and a sharpshooter detailed to shoot the animal. He placed himself about 20 feet from the animal and fired into the center of the head. The beef fell on its knees, rolled over on its side and was dead. The bullet entered the middle of the forehead, traversed the neck, passed through the heart and out of the side and on into the woods, where no trace of it could be found in the trees. Such is the effect of the new rifle which has been adopted as a humane arm for our soldiers.

A Hundred Miles an Hour.

An electrical engineer has been exhibiting in London the model of his proposed single-rail electric line for speeds of 150 miles an hour. The rail is fixed on a V-shaped trestle, and runs up into the body of the car, which, as it were, runs astride of it. The car runs in 12 bearing wheels, and seats 135 passengers, and space for their baggage. One of the difficulties met with in schemes for excessive high speed travel is the tendency of the car to run off the track. By running the rail within the car the lateral tendency of the train is overcome. But in this late scheme the great difficulty seems to be the passenger. What would happen to the passenger when the train took a sharp curve while going at 150 miles an hour is not explained.

How Dogs Outwit Crocodiles.

When an Egyptian dog of the Nile region wishes to drink at the river's edge he knows exactly how to do it and at the same time escape being eaten by a crocodile. In working out his little piece of strategy he runs a short way up the river and howls for some time. The crocodiles, attracted by the sound, immediately crowd to that place, whereupon the intelligent dog hastily runs to the part of the river which the reptiles have left and drinks in safety.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

ARBITRATION TREATY.

Believed That Sir Julian Pauncefote and Mr. Olney Will Sign It This Week.

Washington, Dec. 29.—The latest information respecting the Anglo-American treaty, under the terms of which all future disputes between the United States and Great Britain, not involving the national honor of the two governments, are to be referred to an arbitration tribunal, is that it will be signed by the British ambassador, Sir Julian Pauncefote and by Secretary Olney, regresenting the United States, this week. The last point of difference between the two gentlemen was settled a few days ago and cabled to Lord Salisbury for his approval. State department officials believe that Lord Salisbury's reply, which is expected to be favorable, will reach Washington not later than to-morrow, in which event the formal signing of the treaty will immediately follow. It is predicted to-day that the treaty will be sent to the senate within a few days after the re-assembling of congress next week.

His son and many other prominent steamboat men were at the reception and celebration last night.

ECONOMISTS MEET

Ninth Annual Session of Their Association at Baltimore.

MANY PROMINENT PERSONS PRESENT

The Visitors Received and Welcomed by President Gilman of Johns Hopkins University---Address on "Relations of Economics to Jurisprudence."

Baltimore, Dec. 29.—Levering hall of Johns Hopkins university was well filled with economists from all parts of the country when Prof. Henry C. Adams, president, called the ninth annual meeting of the American Economic association to order at 8 o'clock last evening. President Daniel C. Gilman of Johns Hopkins university welcomed the visitors and guests in a few well chosen and well rounded sentences. President Adams, who is a professor in the University of Michigan, responded, and followed his words of thanks for the hearty welcome with an address on "The Relation of Economics to Jurisprudence." He said in part: "The one thing needed is a true analysis of the situation and a satisfactory expression of the advantages that would accure from the labor contract. This service is the high privilege of economy, but it must be an economy that rests on history, that is motived by a passion for liberty and that is directed and limited by a knowledge of jurisprudence. Of the labor contract itself little can be said with confidence. It is likely that it will provide for determining pay for the work after the work is done; that it will secure to each worker an industrial home; that it will provide for a board of arbitration in each industry. This indeed, in all probability will be its most significant clause, and it is likely that the by-laws of this court of arbitration and the decision which it renders upon such questions as are presented to it, will, through a process of natural selection, eventually come to be a common law of labor rights. I cannot refrain from suggesting in this connection, though it be foreign to my present purpose, that arbitration thus established would result in a valued possession or privilege of the worker, and on this account he would become a responsible party in the world of industrial association. There is no necessity for the development of a new principle, but rather for the return to an old principle, well recognized by common law. The problem to which this thought leads is the one forced upon our attention by the evolution of corporations, trusts and great industries, and it is referred to in this connection for the purpose of saying that the theory of property adjusted to the needs of our time is of a dual character. It must first express the rights of individuals associated together in an industrial unit; it must next express the duties of these industrial units to the public at large. The former constitutes the labor problem, and the test of its solution should be freedom of the individual to realize himself. The latter constitutes the monopoly problem and should aim at a just price and the preservation of industrial mobility. Provided these rights can be discovered and expressed in such a manner that they may be incorporated into a contract on the one hand and in legislative enactments on the other, there is no reason, in the nature of the case, why harmony cannot be restored to the industrial world, and why the science of political economy should not recover its symetry and form, of which it has been deprived by the trenchant criticisms of the last fifty years."

SPAIN SENT OUT A "FEELER"

Anxious To Learn Who Would Aid Her in Case of War with the United States.

London, Dec. 29.—The correspondent of the Chronicle at Rome telegraphs that the Spanish government recently questioned Great Britain, France and Italy regarding their attitude in the event of war between Spain and the United States. Great Britain, the correspondent says, declined to give a definite reply, saying that everything depended on the course of events and the subsequent relations of the contending nations. Italy offered to assist in bringing about an amicable arrangement of the trouble, without promising to support Spain. The attitude of the vatican is absolutely favorable to Spain. King Alfonso has written to the pope asking for his prayers that the Spaniards shall be victorious. The Chronicle says it learns that the Paris dispatch published by the Times Saturday regarding the attitude of the powers towards the United States is untrue.

Death of Dr. Alonzo Churchill.

Utica, N. Y., Dec. 29.—Alonzo Churchill, M. D., is dead, aged 85 years. During the war he served as surgeon of the Fourteenth New York volunteers and the Eighth regiment of heavy artillery. He was captured at Gaines Mills and sent to Libby prison. Subsequently released, he returned to active service and served until the close of the war, when he was breveted lieutenant-colonel. He was elected to the legislature as a whig in 1855. He made many contributions to medical literature.

The Stevensons Entertained.

St. Louis, Dec. 29.—Vice-President Stevenson, who, with his wife, was in this city to attend the marriage last evening of Mrs. Stevenson's niece, Miss Julia Scott, to Carl Vrooman, was given a dinner by Col. S. W. Fordyce of the Cotton Belt railroad and later was escorted on a sightseeing trip through the city. Mrs. Stevenson was tendered a reception by the St. Louis chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution at the residence of Mrs. Shields, in Westminster place.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVALS.

riage of Santa Claus;" the recitation by Miss Katherine Dwight, and the tableaux formed by Carrie Fuller, as Red Riding Hood, Hattie Messrsmith and Frank Emmons, as Jack and Jill, Harold Nomer as Boy Blue, Herbert Rockfellow as King Cole, with Herbert Glaentzer and Hazelwood and Courtenay Keller as his Fiddlers Three, Joseph Robinson as Simple Simon, Alice Morgan as Mother Hubbard, Marion Dwight as Mistress Mary, Fanny Condon as Bo Peep. It was followed by another recitation, "After the Wedding," charmingly given by Miss Aimee Emmons, completing the story.

The next number was a piano solo, Godard's "Mazurka," rendered by Miss Sadie Howell. A pretty little song by one of the primary department, Edna Conde, "Dolly, Rockaby," followed. A carol, "Hail the King," was sung by the school, then came an unusually pretty feature of the programme. The lights were lowered, and to the sound of soft music there entered from a side room eight tiny maids in long white night robes, white caps, and white stockings, each carrying a doll and a lighted candle. They ascended the platform, and executed a charming "Good-night Drill," marching and countermarching, forming pretty tableaux, and singing dainty songs, leaving the stage by twos, until one of the last couple having left her companion.

"One tiny maid with curly head
Blows out her candle and toddles to bed."

This made the hit of the evening, and was a fitting close to the programme proper. The superintendent, J. A. Robinson, then read a letter of thanks from an Italian Mission in New York, for gifts sent them by the school. This was followed by the presentation to Mrs. Goodrich of a handsome Persian rug from the women of the church, and a fine '97 Cleveland Swell Special wheel to Mr. Goodrich from the men. Mr. Goodrich thanked the church for both, in a few well-chosen words. The distribution of gifts to the primary department, and candy and oranges to the whole school, closed an unusually pleasant evening.

GRACE P. E. CHURCH.

The Christmas festival of Grace P. E. Church Sunday-school was held last evening and it was a most enjoyable gathering of the younger and older members of the church and Sunday-school. The exercises which were in charge of Rev. Dean Rodman, the rector and assisted by the superintendent, Rev. F. Appleton, were both entertaining and instructive. Mrs. Wm. A. Freeman presided at the organ, and as the service opened the regular surpliced choir marched around the body of the church singing the processional, followed by general confession, absolution, the Lord's Prayer and versicles. "A Christmas Song," with words by Miss Grace Agnes Crane, and set to music by E. Cleveland Howard, was next rendered, followed by Gospel reading appropriate to Christmas Day, and a beautiful anthem, "'Tis the Birthday of Our Saviour," was sung by the school.

After another anthem, "Ring the Merry Christmas Bells," Rev. F. Appleton spoke a few words of good cheer to the scholars and teachers of the school. In part he said: "Merry Christmas means to the boys and girls and grown up people, too, to come to Him and be merry. Christ came into the world to teach us to be glad and good and happy. He came to tell us of the great love our Heavenly Father has for us, and if we only love Him as He loves us, our happiness will be complete. We must learn to love Jesus and do what we can for Him in order to gain everlasting happiness."

The recessional and an anthem, "Hark! What Means Those Holy Voices," brought the exercises in the church to a close, after which adjournment was made to the chapel where a brilliantly illuminated and artistically adorned Christmas tree and numerous gifts and boxes of candy were in waiting for distribution among the scholars and teachers of the school. Dean Rodman announced the individual names, and as each scholar advanced to the platform for his or her gift, Master Van Wyck Brooks, impersonating Santa Claus, presented each one with a box of candy. Master Harold White received a full rigged ship, as a prize for his faithful attendance, behavior, etc., during the year, and it was jokingly remarked that Harold could now set sail for Cuba.

Special prizes of books given by the rector for attendace, recitations and behavior during the year, together with their record of standing, were announced as follows: Dudley Ferguson, 1,080; Ernest Fellows, 985; Juliel Hill, 920; Charles King, 890; Clara Crane, 860; Harris Egan, 765; Elsie Pfeifer, 760; Josephine Lapsley, 735; Clara Fellows, 720; Louise Egan, 690; Robert Crane, 680; Grace Peck, 670; Marjorie Fleming, 630; Lilla Howard, 620; Augusta Rennwanz, 590.

And here ended the 1896 Christmas festival of Grace Church Sunday School.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH.

For the eighth time the members of the Sunday-school of the St. Stephen's church gathered together for their Christmas festival. It was held yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the church and it was the most enjoyable and successful of all the Christmas entertainments held there.

The interior of the church was decorated with evergreens while the large Christmas tree occupied a prominent position in the choir loft. It was handsomely ornamented and decked with all kinds of fancy things.

First came a short service in which the carols were intersperced. Then the rector, Rev. S. P. Simpson, made a short address appropriate to the day. He spoke of Christmas as expressed to mean Christ's mass, or the feast of Christ. The duty of all Christains was to follow the example of the three wise men who came to see the Infant Savior. Their first act was to fall down and worship and then to present the gifts. It is the first duty of all, he concluded, to first worship on Christmas Day and then to present the gifts.

While he was finishing his talk, the candles on the tree were lighted and the other lights in the church darkened. Then came the presentation of the gifts and it took some time as each scholar was called up to the front to receive his or her present. Besides the class gifts from the teachers a box of candy and an orange were given to each one of the scholars. The Sunday-school has now grown until over one hundred and fifty members are enrolled and yesterday, there were one hundred and thirty-three present. There was a gift for each one and then came a little surprise for the rector in the shape of a handsome pair of lined gloves and a generous purse from the parish. His wife, who has assisted so much at the church, was not forgotten in the gift giving and received a valuable pair of decorated china fruit dishes. One of the teachers, Mrs. A. J. Beal, was given a very handsome picture by the members of her class.

The first catechism prize was awarded to Miss Laura Christiansen. It was a finely bound edition of Keble's "Christain Year," and was covered with embossed kid. The second prize was given to Miss Margaret Van-Deventer.

The singing was led by Mr. Phillips, of Scotch Plains, who has been training the children for some time and the result of his efforts was very pleasing. Percy V. Wheeler acted as organist. The gifts were presented by the rector.

EAST THIRD STREET MISSION.

The Christmas festival of the primary department of the East Third Street Mission was held in the afternoon. There were several carols by the children. Miss Maggie Rocap was in charge. The superintendent, L. W. Randolph, acted as Santa Claus and gave out dolls and toys to the children.

In the evening, the regular entertainment was held. The programme opened with a piano duet by Robert Schriener and Clifford Braider. Then came a cantata entitled "Santa Claus' Surprise Party" which was given by about 30 children of the intermediate department. Miss Alice Woodland took the part of the grandmother and Clifford Braider made an excellent Santa Claus. After a violin solo by Clarence Mills and several selections by the gramaphone, belonging to Robert Love, Santa Claus appeared from the chimney in the rear of the room and came forward to give each of the girls a book, Aesop's Fables, and each of the boys a silk handkerchief. A box of candy was given to each scholar. The superintendent presented the gifts. A selection on the gramaphone ended the entertainment.

Another pleasing feature in prospect is the dinner to all the members of the Sunday-school on Thursday evening. It will begin at 6 o'clock. In the evening a watch meeting will be held under the leadership of L. W. Randolph. The meeting begins at 10 o'clock.

Stands at the Head.

Aug. J. Bogel, the leading druggist of Shreveport, La., says: "Dr. King's New Discovery is the only thing that cures my cough, and it is the best seller I have." J. F. Campbell, merchant of Safford, Ariz., writes: "Dr. King's New Discovery is all that is claimed for it; it never fails, and is a sure cure for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I cannot say enough for its merits.' Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds is not an experiment. It has been tried for a quarter of a century, and to-day stands at the head. It never disappoints. Free trial bottles at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

Locked a Dog in the Store.

Last Saturday night a dog was unintentionally locked up in VanEmburgh & Son's store, and in the endeavor to make his escape after all the employes had left, the canine made a great ado. The animal was noticed rushing around the store by Patrolman McCue and George Dunham. The latter notified Harry VanEmburgh of the fact and after a time the dog was released. In his meandering about the store the dog had knocked over and broken a valuable lamp.

SHAKERS AND DOCTORS TALK TOGETHER.

In his able work entiled "Longevity," published a few years ago, Dr. John Gardner, of England, predicts that a vegetable agent will yet be found that shall so retard those changes that bring about old age as to prolong human life much beyond its present limit.

Acting, perhaps, upon the impulse produced by this thought, eminent physicians have called from time to time upon the Shakers of Mt Lebanon to inquire of them concerning the secrets of medicinal plants, in which these sincere, simple-minded and God-fearing people are known to be wise and skilful beyond all other men.

The Shakers willingly told what they had learned, and in return received much valuable information about disease; which they at once made practical use of. The most important point was that if a genuine and certain remedy could be found for indigestion and dyspepsia, and the ailments growing out of it, a long step would be made in the right direction. Old age, said these physicians, begins in a failure of the digestion, and so do most diseases at any and all periods of life. The result of these consul.ations was the discovery by the Shakers of the desired specific, made wholly from herbs, and now known as the Shaker Digestive Cordial. Its action is magical and worthy of its origin.

Where there is distress after eating, heartburn, sick headache, bad taste in the mouth, biliousness, weakness and weariness, cold hands and feet, aversion to food, nervousness, or any other symptom of dyspepsia, the Cordial will prove its curative virtues. Behind it is the reputation of a people hwo have never defrauded or deceived their fellow men.

In order to test whether this remedy is adapted to your case, at practically no cost, you may procure a trial bottle for ten cents of almost any druggist.

GAME MEN HAVE DINNER

AFTER THE MENU CAME A FLOW OF ORATORY AND JOCULARITY.

The Event Given in Gesang and Turn Verein Hall and a Pleasant One it Was Throughout—Game Constituted the Menu

The first annual dinner of the Protective Game and Propagating Association of Union, Middlesex and Somerset counties, was held last evening in Gesang and Turn Verein Hall, on Somerset street. The affair was a pleasant one throughout, and those fortunate enough to be present will long remember it.

The menu was very fine and consisted chiefly of game. Covers were spread for thirty-five members and a few friends. About two hours was consummed at the table, after which there was a flow of oratory from President J. Goff, Vice-President Joseph A. Blatz, Percy C. Ohl, Justice Newcorn, of Plainfield; E. H. Haws, of Newark. A song was given by James Phillips entitled, "There's Life in the Old Boy Yet."

The remarks and songs were heartily cheered throughout, and it was nearly 1 o'clock this morning when the event came to a close.

Dr. Haws, E. H. Haws, of Newark, and Neaf Apgar were present as guests. Credit is due Mrs. Joseph Haurand who so efficiently prepared the dinner and to Henry Haurand who was master of ceremonies.

Married for Thirty Years.

Mr. and Mrs H. P. Fugh, of 954 West Fourth street, celebrated the thirty anniversery of the wedding last evening. A pleasant feature of the event was the reading of a poem by Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, which was composed by him in comemoration of the celebration. Miss Winter, of Ulster County, New York gave two recitations commendably. During the evening there were several selections. The house was beautified with an arrangement of evergreens and bunting. The bride and groom received many useful and costly presents from their relatives and friends. There were about thirty guests present from Plainfield and New York.

Opportunity to Do Good.

An urgent appeal has been made through the Woman's Temperance Aid Society of the Reform Hall for shoes and clothing. If all charitably disposed persons who have articles of clothing of any discription which they can spare will leave them at Mrs. J. King's, 226 West Second street, they will be the means of making many deserving ones comfortable, who through want of employment are suffering in silence during this Christmas time.

Garret P. Smith Dead.

Garret Preston Smith, the painter who fell from the scaffold in the City Hotel last Thuesday afternoon, passed away at his home, 676 West Third street, at one o'clock this afternoon. He never fully recovered his senses after the fall. His death was caused by diabetes brought on by the concussion. He was 52 years old. He leaves two sons and one daughter.

Nearly Upset the Sleigh.

A number of young people coasting last night on the Watchung avenue hill, near Belvidere avenue, frightened a horse being driven by S. A. Cruikshank and it was only by the closest margin that a serious accident was averted, as the horse nearly upset the sleigh and at the same time came near running away.

BRILLIANT ADIEU TO MR. GILBERT'S MAYORALITY.

THE COMPLIMENTARY DINNER THE MOST DISTINGUISHED AFFAIR EVER HELD IN THIS CITY.

The Guest of Honor Fairly Surprised His Friends by the Excellence of His Farewell Remarks to the Office Which He Has So Honorably Filled For Several Terms—Good Toasts and Speeches Given By the Others Present.

After enjoying all the honors and perquisites and enduring the trials and tribulations of six years service as the chief executive for so creditable a city as Plainfield, such an outpouring of euology and esteem as found favor at the complimentary dinner to Mayor Gilbert at the Casino last night must have left a bright spot on the life escutcheon of the distinguished guest of the occassion.

To be in the midst of nearly two hundred gentlemen—friends and admirers everyone—many exceptionally distinguished in the world's eye, and all of standing and influence, to hear words of praise for things which have been accomplished and for the part that one has taken—the latter embossed with the flow of approbation of men skilled in the subtilty of oratory and words—in a phrase, to be dined, wined and toasted, the essence of goodfellowship, was the congenial position of Mr. Alexander Gilbert for five hours last night.

It was, indeed, a notable affair, this dinner to the Mayor. Never before in the history of Plainfield has there been such a gathering of men whose brilliant efforts have gained them a a place a little higher in life than their humbler neighbors. Conceived of a desire to express fitting appreciation of the time and the ability with which Mr. Gilbert has performed the functions of a chief officer for a progressive people, it was an eminent success. And it was more than the mere satisfying of an inclination to express acknowledgment of services; it proved an inspiration to Mr. Gilbert's successor, and to all his coworkers, in that a sense of knowing that gratitude is not a dormant quality in the public mind of Plainfield is sure to incur in them the aim to do even better in municipal government than has their predecessor. And to do even as well and share in such an adieu to their office as was experienced last night by Mr. Gilbert, is incentive enough.

It was 7:30 o'clock when the guests sat down to the dinner. Caterer Wertz had done his best to arrange the interior of the place in consonance with the notability of the occasion. The table decorations were elaborate in every detail. The guests of the honor table was arranged on the eastern side of the room, slightly elevated, while the remaining tables diverged from it in fan like arrangement.

On the stage, obscured from view by a pretty arrangement of potted palms and other plants, was seated an orchestra that wafted sweet strains of popular airs to the ears of guests while the dinner was in progress. The menu consisted of nine courses and was delectable in every way.

The serving of the dinner occupied a little over two hours and in the interim before the toasts were responded to the guests indulged in passing conversation and pleasantries. Once or twice as some popular air was struck up by the orchestra, a few of the more joyful and musical accompanied it with the words, but these was but few instances of this.

Rowland Cox made a dignified toastmaster, and after cigars had been lighted and all were in mood for euology and witticism, Mr. Cox actively assumed the duties, for which he had been selected, in a clever speech appropriate to the occasion. Before introducing Mr. Gilbert, who was to respond to "Our Mayor," Mr. Cox proposed a toast to His Honor. Suiting the word all arose and drank to his health.

Then Mr. Gilbert made response in an interesting and impassive manner. In part he said:

Mr. Chairman, Neighbors and Friends—I am not inclined to over much indulgence in sentiment; I am rather disposed to take a practical view of life, but I shall not undertake to conceal the emotions which hold possession of me at this time. The situation you have placed me in makes me almost afraid to feel of my own head. I am being played upon by thoughts and fancies which tend to distort my view of life and my relation to it; I am fighting these influences tonight. I have no desire to catch, even for a moment, an exaggerated glimpse of myself, or of the niche which I fill in life. If there is anything in a man's experience that would seem to justify a little bit of self-conceit, it is just such a situation as this—to live for one short hour in a world created especially for himself, in which the sweetest music that falls upon his ears are the words which sound his own praise, and where the only occupation of the people is to eat and drink and honor him. What boots it that it all may prove a delusion, a passing vision, a bit of unreality, a temporary disturbance of the grey matter of the brain, 'tis pleasant while it lasts, and the memory of it will linger way on into the future years.

I do not overlook the fact that notwithstanding all the honor and distinction you thrust upon me tonight, that after tonight my light will begin to pale; the glory with which you have invested me will gradually fade until what remains will lack sufficiency of substance to cast even a shadow upon the little world of Plainfield politics. I find consolation in the thought that my fate is not different from that which, as a rule, overtakes men in public life. It is the irony of fate that men who fill important places in public affairs of today, will be lost sight of in the estimate of in future generations; it is only the man of pre eminent genius who can hope to survive the wreck which time makes of political reputations.

I have been thinking while sitting here tonight contemplating this dinner, trying in a modest way to put a plausible interpretation upon it, that the importance of the service which, in my official capacity, I have rendered the city must be very much exaggerated by the community; in no other way can I account for this warm and cordial greeting.

Holmes says that every man has three separate and distinct personalities—himself as he thinks he is; himself as his friends and neighbors thinks he is; and himself as he is. Luckily for me the person masquerading before you tonight is himself as his friends and neighbors see him, and not himself as he really is; otherwise this great distinction would never have come to me.

But seriously, friends, I have done nothing to deserve this. I have not been a martyr; I have not suffered trial or hardship as you chief executive; on the contrary my official life has brought me much joy. I have felt the intense thrills of transient popularity; the quickened energy that comes from factious opposition; the pleasure that comes to the man who has twenty offices to bestow upon a hundred applicants. In my capacity as City Judge I have had opportunities to practice mercy for the comfort of some, and to deal out stern justice for the discomfort of others. And lastly, I have enjoyed that state of mind which passeth understanding and which can only be understoood by the man who carries in his pocket a postal card upon which is written: "Prepare to die, you will be shot on sight." Bill Nye once wrote of George III that sixty years was a long time to be a monarch, if he had to look under the bed every night for a nihilist loaded with a cut glass bomb and paris green. And I may add that the receipt of one such postal card as I have referred to has some influence on a man's desire for public life.

I can also say that I have enjoyed the distinction of being the Mayor of the city. I have not underrated the honor which the office confers; it is the highest office in the gift of the people, and the man who fills it worthily should never forget that he is the representative of the intelligence and progressive spirit of the people, and that any worthy act of his official or his private life will cast reproach upon the people he represents. When the character of the of Plainfield is considered, any man may well feel an honest pride in being called upon to represent them. A man with a less exalted opinion of the office should never be selected to occupy it.

As I look about me tonight and behold the familiar faces of the friends of many years; many of whom knew me in my young manhood; some of whom were associated with me in the struggles of our early municipal life, and others who during the passing years have been drawn within the circle of my acquaintance, and realize that this occasion is a testimonial of their regard for me, an approval of my life as they have known it, and especially of my official life, I cannot but feel flattered and satisfied, and I may add, that if it can possibly be made to appear that I have during the tenure of my official life rendered this community any important service, this manifestation of your esteem and confidence more than compensates me.

There is nothing more satisfying to my ambition than public approval; the confidence and respect of my fellow men. It is that which makes life worth living; that stimulates a man to his best and strongest efforts.

The past six years comprise, perhaps, the most important period in the history of Plainfield. They have been years of marked growth and development. Water and sewers and street railways have been introduced during this period, and the important principle has been established that no special board can create indebtedness against the city without the consent of the governing body. While this growth and development has not been without friction and struggle, it has awakened public pride and brought about a more liberal spirit on the part of the people touching the improvement of our city. It has been my good fortune during this period to have occupied a prominent public place, to have exerted an influence and to have contributed something of my thought and energy towards the solution of difficult municipal problems.

I esteem it a great honor to have my name associated with this period of Plainfield's history;—to feel that in after years when some enterprising historian shall gather together the material for a history of our city, the period from 1890 to 1896, will make an important and interesting chapter, and that perhaps it may fall to my lot to have modest mention in the chapter.

We should all feel an honest pride in doing what we can to make Plainfield an ideal city. It is our home; the place where our families are to pass their lives, and find what happiness life may have in store for them. The more beautiful we can make the city; the more healthy we can make it; the more convenient we can make it, the more pleasure we can add to our home life. We must cultivate for ourselves, and try to awaken in others the largest and most enlightened public spirit. We must get out of the habit we have fallen into of criticizing our tax bills with a miserly instinct. Our tax bills cover expenditures which are as necessary to our well-being as many other of the necessities and luxuries of life. What matters it if they are a little larger some years than others, so long as we get what we need and what we pay for. If our tax bills were presented weekly instead of yearly, they would seem to be trifling and would be paid without grumbling as our grocer and butcher bills are. Extravagance and unnecessary expenditure should always be condemned, and so should a mean short-sighted policy that will prevent the proper expansion of the city.

Along these lines as citizens we should all work; the years of our lives are swiftly passing by, if we have any desire to exert an influence for good in the community, let us as citizens do what we can, while we can, to make the city of our homes more beautiful, if possible, grander and nobler in her municipal influence—let us do it at the cost of self denial, if necessary—at all events let us do it by laying aside the partisan spirit in municipal politics and giving heed to the duties of good citizenship.

At the conclusion of his remarks there was enthusiastic applause. Mayor-elect Fisk then responded to "Our Next Mayor." His remarks provoked much laughter. They were as follows:

What has been accomplished for the city of Plainfield during the administration of Alexander Gilbert is best known to those who have been associated with him. During the last five years it has been my pride to be a member of the Council and I shall always look back with pleasure and feel it an honor to have served in the Council during Mr. Gilbert's administration.

Since 1890 the population of Plainfield has increased over one half. We have grown from a small, I might say, village, into a city government. When Mr. Gilbert went into office the finances of the city were in such a shape that it was impossible to tell, without a great deal of labour, how the money was spent. One of his first acts was to have the financial system remodelled and now any citizen can tell exactly where the money has been spent and how it has been spent by simply applying to the clerk for information. When he first took office we depended for our supply of water on wells—now we have a system of waterworks which, although not owned by the city, supplies us with the best of drinking water and with such a pressure that for fire purposes we do not need to use a steamer. Our fire department, which was then but poorly equipped, is now the best equipped fire department of any in the State, having the best and most approved apparatus and with a force of firemen all under the best discipline. Our police department has been organized and is now considered one of the best for a city of our size. During the last three years a system of sewerage has been introduced and completed.

In a word, during Mr. Gilbert's administration the city has made strides forward and he retires from office with every department in first class working condition and the city in the best financial shape and all that remains for us is to go on and complete the good work. If our foresight was as good as our hindsight we might predict the future but, so far, I have been able to find only one man who was willing to predict what would happen within the next two years.

This gentleman, as you all know, is none other than the Hon. James E. Martine, familiarly known as "Farmer Jim." Not being willing that you should be led astray without due notice, he told you what you might expect if I was elected as your chief executive officer. He has predicted a most extravagant administration—he has told you that I was no friend of the poor, that the poor would be taxed for the benefit of the rich—that I wished to change my business and drive an ash cart, thus depriving our colored friends of their means of livelihood. So persistent was he in this that one of his friends wrote a circular covering these points which was distributed after midnight the night before election, but some others not thinking this was quite true and being on to Jim's curves started out at 2 o'clock in the morning and gathered up all the circulars before sunrise. Although this circular distinctly states that Mr. Martine knew nothing about it but that it was written by a friend, in a burst of confidence Jim has admitted since election that it cost him $25 to have them printed and distributed and that little fat cuss Charlie Fisk had them all gathered up, so that he might as well have saved his money.

What I would like to see for Plainfield would be that it should be the model city not only of the county but of the world. The best and most economically governed, the best paved and lighted, the best and most healthful city to live in, the most enterprising and in every way a model municipality, and it shall be my aim during my administration to do all in my power to bring it as near this point as possible.

Just now Plainfield is in the position of a young lady with many lovers. We are wanted by Somerset and Middlesex and also by an entirely new party of friends who wish to centre around us as a new county, making Plainfield the county seat. There are still others who want to stick to the old love and have our friends and neighbors come come to us. We know that in the other end of this county there is a troublesome place called Elizabeth, that is always grasping for everything that she can secure; still, with better management, we have no doubt it can be brought under control. They are a "Fowler" city than we are—we know that they grabbed a charter and stole our water and are raising "Kean" with our wells. At times they "Rankin" our tempers and they raise a monkey and a "Parrott" time with our wills and estates. They have their Mantana Club where they corrall all the judges and high officials and set up schemes with their "Wooden" and "Ruff" house committee, but still notwithstanding this great combination and the intervention of the spirits, we succeeded last November in erecting our own little "Kirk" on the most beautiful and sacred spot in Union county, even if Elizabeth did cut our majority over 1,200. Still there are certain good things in Elizabeth—she is still noted for her good old "Bergen dy" and we not only "Foster" her no ill but love her still and willing to have Craig Marsh all the forces and stand by her.

We do not care to "Press" or "Force" any one but will send our proposals by our "Couriers" and when our friends and neighbors get ready to join us, we will have Charley-Reed the marriage ceremony and your future Mayor will be ready to welcome them into the Union.

The health of Mr. Fisk was also drank by the guests.

Congressman Charles N. Fowler, of Elizabeth, responded to the toast of "Our Country." A slight resemblance to Major McKinley in personal appearance and an interesting personality, Mr. Fowler did full justice to the toast that found its intent in these lines:

My Country, right or wrong; if right, to be Kept right, and if wrong, to be set right.

In commencing Mr. Fowler said that each one first viewed the country from the point of view of the surroundings that they first saw light of day, but as time passed on and they entered into manhood and developed their energies and capabilities the greatness of the country seemed to

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CHURCH.

Both the mind and the inner man were remembered at the Christmas entertainment of the Sunday-school of the Seventh-day Baptist church last evening, which was held in the church. The exercises included several carols by the school, concert recitations by the boys and girls of the primary department and the following recitations: "An Eastern Legend" by Grace VanSickel, "A Cheerful Giver" by Joseph Miller, "Kitty Puss" by George Miller, "Johnny's Observations on Christmas Eve" by Charles Titsworth, and "What the Mother Goose Children Want for Christmas" by Nellie Miller.

"Christmas Bells" was the title of a short selection given by a number of the children. There were representatives from five countries and each, after reciting appropriate verses, hung a letter on a floral arch situated on the platform, spelling the word "Peace." Those taking part in it were the Misses Kizzie Naegle, Bertha Mitchell and Edna Randolph, for England; Miss Edith Titsworth, Charles Titsworth and Lawrence Miller, for Scotland; the Misses Mildred Greene, Bessie Dunham and Grace Weeks, for Germany; Miss Ethel Titsworth, Charles Naegle and Wendell Mosher, for Norway; the Misses Ruth Maxson, Issie Randolph and Marie Rogers, for America. Miss Mertie Randolph made the introductory remarks to the selection. There was a quartette by four boys, Charles Titsworth, Lawrence Miller, Charles Naegle and Wendell Mosher.

To close the entertainment, three snow balls, made of presents, and covered with a white cloth, were rolled out on the platform, and Henry M. Maxson and John P. Mosher gave out the gifts, which were distributed by Harry Rogers, Stanley Mosher, Geo. Babcock, Bryant Randolph, Charles Naegle and Lawrence Miller. A very handsome easy chair was presented to the superintendent, D.E. Titsworth, by his friends in the Sunday-school.

After the presents had been distributed every one present was invited into another room where a large table, arranged in the shape of a star, was covered with a bountiful supply of good things. The table was prettily decorated, the prevailing color being yellow. The room was also artistically decorated with evergreens, holly and potted plants.

The general committee in charge consisted of Mrs. John P. Mosher, chairman; Miss Ernestine Smith, Mrs. Ed Stillman, Miss Ida Randolph and Miss Ida Spicer. The entertainment committee consisted of Mrs. J. P. Mosher, chairman; Mrs. H. M. Maxson and Miss Smith. The committee in charge of the refreshments was made up of Mrs. D. E. Titsworth, chairman; Mrs. F. A. Dunham, Mrs. W. H. Rogers, Mrs. L. T. Rogers and Mrs. Ed Stillman, The decorating was done by a committee composed of Asa Randolph, chairman; Miss Mabel Maxson, Miss Lou Clawson, Frank Smith, Miss Ernestine Smith, Arthur Spicer, Mark Clawson. The committee on presents consisted of the Misses Ida Spicer and Ida Randolph. The finance committee was composed of the following: Miss Bessie Titsworth, chairman; Frank J. Hubbard, Miss Elizabeth Ailis and Robert Randolph. The waiters and waitresses were W. H. Rogers, Bert Rogers, Louis Rogers, Mrs. William Mosher, Mrs William Hubbard, Miss Ida Spicer, Miss Lou Clawson and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Dunham.

FIRST M. E. CHURCH.

There was a large attendance at the Christmas entertainment of the Sunday-school of the First M. E. church, held in Vincent chapel last evening. After an opening devotional service there were recitations by the following: Miss Edna Moore, "In Santa Claus' Land;" Miss Gertie Grier, "Waiting for Santa Claus;" Miss Nettie Kerns, "Santa and the Mouse;" Irving Harned, "The Dressed Turkey;" Miss Edna French, "Pete's Christmas;" Miss Anna Teale, selected.

Superintendent J. W. Jackson, who was presiding, declared that this ended the programme. Then G. M. Rittenhouse jumped up and protested against such a short programme. He moved that a committee of three girls be appointed to see what was the matter. Mr. Jackson appointed the Missss Gertrude Anderson, Carrie Mulford and Maud Disbrow, who then went up on the platform where a queer looking little house had been built. It had a roof of evergreens illuminated with electric lights. Then followed the cantata, "Santa Claus' House, Up to Date." It was written by Eggleston and revised by Oscar S. Teale, of this city. J. Vincent Rittenhouse acted the part of Santa Claus with considerable originality. Miss Edna Kennedy was the Fairy Queen and the dwarfs were Willie Conover, Harry Hann, Ray McDonald and Fred Lynn. Santa Claus came out of his house and a wonderful chest was produced, in which all sorts of nice things were found.

Presents and boxes of candy were distributed among the scholars and the entertainment was over. The chapel was prettily decorated with evergreens and holly.

The committee in charge consisted of James R. Joy, chairman; N. Y. Hull, John Lewis, Wm. Symons, Robt. Davis, David S. Dunavan, Mrs. N. Y. Hull, Miss Bertha Whitney, Mrs. D.S. Dunavan, Miss Madeline Day, Miss Elsie Horne, Miss Susie Davies, L. S. Bond and Louis Dunavan. John Lewis was chairman of the decorating committee. Wm. Symons had charge of the wiring of the stage for the electric lights.

CHURCH OF THE REDEEMER.

The cosy little church on Grove street, wherein meet for worship the members and friends of the Church of the Redeemer, was filled to its utmost capacity last evening, the occasion being the Christmas exercises of the Sunday-school. A tall, towering tree occupied a prominent position at the extreme right of the platform, and was very prettily decorated. Before the audience dispersed the candles were lighted and the effect was very pleasing to the eye. The programme, although exceedingly short, was most admirably rendered, and the little and the older ones seemed to enjoy it alike. It included a carol by the school, the versicles Lord's prayer, a Scripture lesson by the pastor, creed and collection, other carols and an address by the rector, Rev. Dr. Johnstone. The offering for the evening will be presented to the Children's Home, a most worthy institution. In his address to the children, Rev. Dr. Johnstone told about "Jack and the Giant Killer." Santa Claus, he said, was so big hearted and big-pocketed for the good little girls and boys, so that on his recent annual visit he had to have his pockets enlarged, and his clothes were made ready by many hands. "Here we are, all collected," said the Doctor, "and this school invites others to come in and enjoy the Christmas festivities. Those alone can see God who loves their brothers and their sisters." Gifts of books and other useful and appropriate articles were then presented to the scholars as their names were called, and the janitor was kindly remembered in the shape of a large envelope. The musical part of the programme was in charge of Miss Phillips, the pianist, and the regular church choir.

WARREN CHAPEL.

Warren chapel was again filled last evening at the continuation of the Christmas festivities. Superintendent Lovell presided and those who assisted with the music were: Charles Wheeler, organist; Miss Maggie Shepherd, pianist; and Whit. Frazee, cornetist. The opening hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name," was sung with a will, and this was followed by Charles Dickens' story of "Little Nell." The story was illustrated with stereopticon views by Messrs. A. J. and Joseph W. Gavett, and it was very entertaining. Rev. J. O. McKelvey read the descriptive part. Some of the closing pictures displayed on the canvas were comical in the extreme.

The pulpit decorations were simple, yet in keeping with Yuletide. Besides the evergreens festooned about the main auditorium, the "Star of Bethlehem" was noticeable by its prominent position back of the speaker's desk.

The serving of refreshments in the annex brought to a fitting close the Christma exercises in Warren chapel.

IRELAND'S BOG SLIDE

The Alarming Report That Killarney Is in Danger Denied.

PEOPLE ARE STILL PANIC-STRICKEN

Peasants Living at Some Distance from the Scene of the Slide Fleeing from Their Homes---Carcasses of Animals Swept into the Lakes.

London, Dec. 30.—A special dispatch from Dublin this morning denies the alarming report printed in the Daily Graphic that the bog slip threatens the town of Killarney. The dispatch adds that the slip has nearly ceased, but that great alarm, nevertheless, still exists.

Dublin, Dec. 30.—The danger from the landslide near Rathmore, County Kerry, is by no means over, but is rather on the increase. That part of the disturbed earth comprising the bog is still sliding towards the Lakes of Killarney, its movement being accompanied by a sullen noise that is heard for miles in all directions. Peasants living some distance from the scene of the landslide are fleeing from their houses and taking refuge in localities that give some promise of safety, leaving all of their belongings behind them. Debris of houses and trunks of trees destroyed by the avalanche of earth, together with the carcasses of cows, sheep, pigs and other animals which were caught in the slide and plunged into the River Flesk, are now being swept into the lakes. The river is choked with earth, rocks, trees, etc., and the extravasated water has spread over a large area. No further loss of life than that of the Donnelly family of nine members is known to have occurred, but there are still fears that other persons may have been caught in the landslide and perished.

A Religious Tragedy.

Norwich, Conn., Dec. 30.—While suffering from religious mania yesterday Isaac H. Douglass, a well-to-do farmer of Voluntown, attempted to kill his weak-minded son by striking him with an axe on the head. He then built a fierce fire, and was making preparations to burn his own body and that of his son, but neighbors broke into the house in time to rescue both. The son, who is 30 years of age, will die from the effects of his wounds. The elder Douglass claims that he was influenced by a spirit to kill his son and himself.

The Trial of Mazhar Bey.

London, Dec. 30.—Advices from Constantinople show that the protest of the French and Italian ambassadors against the exclusion of their dragomans from the trial of Mazhar Bey has been effective. Mazhar Bey is being tried by a military court at Marash for the murder of Father Salvatore, an Italian priest, who was killed in a convent at Ynikale in 1895.

Bright Outlook for Maine Ice Harvest.

Gardiner, Me., Dec. 30.—The outlook for ice on the Kennebec is one of the best known for years, and if the present cold weather continues for a few days the numerous ice companies on the Kennebec will all be harvesting. The ice is now from eight to ten inches thick, and it is probable that 1,000,000 tons will be harvested. The average quantity yearly is about 800,000 tons.

New Industry for Bridgeport.

DEVOID OF SHAME

Princess Chimay and Her Gypsy Musician at Budapest.

NO EFFORT TO CONCEAL THEMSELVES

Great Crowds of People of All Classes Surround Their Hotel in an Effort To See the Couple --- Evidently Proud of Their Notoriety.

Budapest, Dec. 30.—Janos Rigo, the Hungarian gypsy musician; with whom the Princess de Caraman-Chimay, formerly Miss Clara Ward of Detroit, recently eloped from Paris, have arrived here from Stuhlweissenberg, where they have been visiting Rigo's parents. There presence in the city where their elopment has filled much space in the newspapers has awakened the liveliest curiosity, and people of all classes make all sorts of efforts to see the couple. When it became noised about that Rigo and his American mistress were stopping at a hotel here hundreds of persons went to the hotel and stood outside for hours in the hope of seeing the pair. So large did the crowd become that traffic on the streets in the vicinty of the hotel was blocked, and it became necessary to detail special police to handle the people. The princess and the gypsy have visited the theatres since their arrival, and appear to enjoy their notoriety. Whenever they have appeared at places of amusement the princess has been blazing in diamonds, and, as she is a remarkably beautiful woman, has excited much attention. The audiences, as soon as they discover who the couple are, neglect the stage and devote all the time to watching Rigo and the princess, who evidently delight in the sensation they are creating. The contrast between the two is great. Rigo, who is about 35 years old, looks like the ordinary gypsy he is. His complexion is swarthy and his common ancestry is plainly attested in his face. The respectable people of the city are thoroughly disgusted with the manner in which the couple are acting. Many men of the world scoff at the idea of Rigo divorcing his wife and marrying the princess. They say that after he gets as much money as possible from her he will abandon her and return to his wife.

Stetson Will Contest.

Boston, Dec. 30.—Judge Holmes in the superior court has set March 9, 1897, as the date for the hearing in the case of C. H. Pattee, executor of the will of the late theatrical manager, John Stetson, against Ada Richmond Stetson, to determine the question whether the latter was lawfully married to John Stetson, and also to determine whether her case shall be heard in court or not.

Says the Story Is a Sham.

New York, Dec. 30.—Concerning a report that Archbishop Corrigan was about to be elevated to the cardinalate, Father Connelly, representing the archbishop, said that so far as he knew there was no truth whatever in the report. He said the story could safely be described as a sham.

Philippine Revolt.

Madrid, Dec. 30.—A dispatch from Manila, the capital of the Philippine Islands, says that the rising of the natives has extended to the province of Bulacan, in a northwesterly direction from Manila, and a large number of rebels have been arrested.

Newspaper Story Denied.

London, Dec. 30.—A dispatch from Madrid says that the London Chronicle's statement that there is reason for belief that Spain has sounded the French foreign office in regard to Cuba in an anti-American sense is officially denied.

Call for a Western Minister.

A TREE TURNED TO IRON.

Found a Curious Geological Specimen in a Sandstone Quarry.

While William Teas was removing sand from a sandstone quarry on his farm, near Three Tuns, Montgomery county, Pa., he came across what he first thought was a rich vein of iron ore. The find was ten feet below the surface, surrounded by sand, and only a few inches above the solid rock. Further examination disclosed a cylindrical mass of ore from six to ten inches in diameter and about 15 feet long. It had the exact outlines of a tree in a horizontal position, though the roots and branches were missing.

Unfortunately, in taking the trunk from the crumbling sandstone, it was broken into many pieces.

Mr. Teas reported his discovery to Prof. Oscar C. S. Carter, of the Academy of Natural Sciences, Philadelphia, who visited the quarry and found the mysterious mass was a ferruginized tree. The rough outside bark could be clearly distinguished, and on one piece was observed a knot which was entirely converted into iron ore.

One fact that convinced Prof. Carter that the shaft was part of a tree was that some portions had not entirely lost their identity, but showed the woody texture. They were partially carbonized, he said, resembling charcoal. In fact, they formed an imperfect coal known as lignite, which is found in some of the western states and there used for fuel. The main mass, however, had become brown hematite ore.

"The soil and rocks of the Teas quarry," Prof. Carter explained, "once contained enough iron to give them a distinct red color. As the rain water gradually drained through the soil it finally removed the iron in the form of a carbonate, and the color of the sandstone changed from red to light yellow.

"It is well known that if a fragment of wood or charcoal be placed in a chalybeate water the iron will be precipitated as a hydrate. Therefore when the water charged with iron came in contact with the tree an interchange of particles took place, the woody matter being replaced with iron.

"The sandstone in which the tree was found was of the mesozoic age, but the outlines of the trunk were not perfect enough to determine its time. It might have been a modern tree blown down years ago and then covered by sand deposited by wind or water, as the trunk was found ten feet below the surface, and the coloring matter would come from the rocks beyond, carried by the iron. Then, too, the remains may be those of a fossil tree of great age."—N. Y. Herald.

BRIGHT LIGHT BLINDS THE COD.

Fish Kept in Aquariums Soon Lose the Sense of Sight.

Several large cod are kept in one of the tanks of the Amsterdam aquarium, necessarily near the surface, and therefore exposed to a strong light from above. Now, the cod, though not a "deep sea" fish, is not a surface swimmer and lives at depths where the sunlight must be very much modified by passage through the water. It lives in what to us would be semidarkness. Every one of these cod exposed to the strong light is suffering from an extraordinary hypertrophy of the eye. The whole organ has become overgrown, as if in the effort to adjust itself to the use of more light rays it had become overequipped and then useless. The cod, in fact, are blind.

The most interesting feature in this change is the extraordinary rapidity with which increased supply of light rays has overdeveloped the organ for its use. It has taken place, not by slow degrees from individual to individual, but in a course of time to be measured by months and in every individual in the tank. If this example is a measure of the rapidity with which such changes take place among fish, the adaptation of those creatures which have migrated from the shallow waters of the deep seas, shown by the total loss of enormous development of their eyes and the growth of illuminating organs to light the abyss, may have been as rapid as it is marvelous.—London Spectator.

Didn't Bother Him.

"Is the house very quiet?" he asked, as he inspected the rooms that had been advertised for rent.

"No," said the landlady, wearily, "I can't truthfully say that it is. The four babies don't make so much noise, for they never all cry at once; and the three pianos one gets used to, and the parrot is quiet sometimes; but the man with the clarionet and the boy that's learning to play the flute do make it noiser than I wish it was."

"That's all right," said the man, cheerfully; "live and let live is my motto. I'll take the room and move in to-morrow, and the little things you mention will never disturb me a particle. Good-by."

And it was not until he was moved in and was settled that they learned his occupation. He played the trombone in an orchestra.—Detroit Free Press.

a poorly nourished horse when he is thoroughly tired? He may go faster for a few rods, but his condition is soon the worse for it. Better stop and feed him. Food gives force. learned by experience that that particular suggestion had better be heeded. never forgive him for spoiling my plans but I find it prudent to act on his advice, so this time I sadly put away my idea of making my first trip on a wheel a nocturnal one. I must face the ordeal in the cruel veracity of sunlight.

I never could quite understand how every one in the neighborhood found out that on that particular day I was going to make my first attempt at conquering the unruly spirit of a soulless mechanism. It was after nightfall when I brought the wheel home. I thought the secret was my own and all things seemed propitious to a quiet contest between the wheel and myself, in which I should have won the laurels before the neighbors were apprised that the battle was on. To further insure this result I had for several days studied the manners of veteran riders, especially when leading their wheels. I flattered myself I had this pretty near perfection. As I led the wheel out to the street I even stopped to examine a spoke critically, in precisely the manner I had seen an expert do the day before. It was in vain. The audience was in waiting.

The prospect, as I looked up and down the street, appalled me. Every door and window seemed to have its occupants. Women waited patiently on front porches. Men lounged lazily over front gates. I don't believe that there was a house within four blocks that didn't have a man about it. And then—horrors! the street seemed infested with small boys. The small boy knows instinctively at what particular time and place a man is about to make a fool of himself, and he usually manages to be on hand to add zest to the performance. His comments on such occasions are not original, witty or wise, but are woefully effective.

I believe I am a brave man. I once voluntarily acted as judge of debate in a young ladies' literary society, and I stand ready, for a sufficient inducement, to be one of a committee on awards at a baby show. Nevertheless, this once I was frightened. Not at the wheel. I had an affectionate contempt for that airy-looking skeleton of wood and steel, but I object to being stared at, particularly when I feel as if I am going to make an exhibition of myself.

I put one foot firmly on the step, hopped along on the other, in the regulation style and stepped up. Now, I am certain that I had that wheel balanced all right. I had raised myself with extraordinary care, and if the wheel had been a steady-going machine of a year or so's service, it would have been all right. This was a new wheel, though, and its chief characteristic was concentrated villainy.

That's why, just as I got my foot well off the ground and was putting my sole dependence on the step, the thing lunged over. I expected to see the wheel broken to pieces, but it was not injured. It had a mission to perform yet, and could not afford to break until it had accomplished it. That mission was to preach to me the doctrine of the total depravity of inanimate things.

After picking up the wheel I looked around at my audience. I hardly expected applause, but thought I might reasonably look for mirth. I was even prepared to laugh heroically with them, but not a smile was visible. They all seemed interested, but not amused. They were reserving their merriment.

The next time I had better luck. I succeeded in getting on the seat. This made it more interesting for the spectators, because when the wheel lunged, ran around in circle and then collapsed, the situation was a good deal more ridiculous. As a source of amusement I saw it was going to be a success. After this fall, the men who had been lounging on the front gates sauntered up to where I was. The small boys, who had been viewing operations from a respetful distance, also drew around me. I was at the flood-tide of my misery.

I no longer regarded the bicycle as a soulless thing of steel, nickel and wood. It was a treacherous and emphatically animate monster to be put down at any cost. I grasped it savagely, placed it roughly in position and mounted. It threw me, but I tried again. I had forgotten the audience. The men advised, the boys jeered and the women laughed; I heard, I saw, but did not heed. I was mad. I was going to do or die, and several times the chances seemed greatly with the second alternative.

At last I got the wheel to go around. A thrill of joy went through me. I saw the landscape slip by. I felt myself passing rapidly through space. The crowd which I had feared I now disdained. I was leaving them far behind. I felt that until that moment I had not known life. The hitherto existing relation of space to time was radically altered. It was almost as though a new world had been opened to me, and chief among all my delights was victory. On I spun over the fine country road; at last I was master—

I ought to have noticed that gravel bed. Exaltation is a good thing in its place, but its place is not astride a brand new wheel. I picked myself up laboriously. The wheel was only partially ruined. Just a matter of bent pedals and crimped handle-bars. I was a good deal worse used up myself, but that didn't matter. I had conquered the wheel, and henceforth I knew I would be master of that or any other wheel; and I am.—Outing.

BREAKING A BIKE.

BY FRANK H. BENSON.

When Horton said he had no trouble learning to ride a bicycle—just got on and rode right off—I believed him. Some people are too prosaically clever to ever half enjoy life, and Horton belongs to this class. I do not. When I became possessed of a brand-new "bike," I knew I was going to have trouble, and nerved myself therefor. I was not mistaken. I did have trouble.

Horton said he would come over and help me learn to ride. That's the trouble with clever people. I knew how Horton would help me to learn to ride. All clever people adopt the same methods.

He would lead the wheel out into the smooth road with an air of supreme mastery, steady it for me to mount, and, having enticed me to a seat on the treacherous machine, deliver himself in this wise:

"Now, take good hold of the handles—no, not too tight—they won't get away—just grasp them lightly but firmly; now put both feet on the pedals—steady now—don't be afraid, and—keep your balance." Then he tips the machine over to an angle of 75 degrees, gives me a start, and away I go. Now a bicycle that's well trained and knows it's mounted by a man who is its master would just as likely go at an angle of 75 degrees as any other way—I know because I have since taken pains to experiment. Not so a green and stubborn wheel that conceives it to be its duty to take the conceit out of a novice. Such a machine must be ridden exactly upright, both feet must sit exactly the same on the pedals, the handle bars must be grasped just so, and a thousand precautions must be taken that would cause that same wheel to feel insulted a month later.

That's why my machine don't go the way my clever instructor had calculated. Instead it makes one or two miserable wobbles, turns into the only rough piece of road in the vicinity, shakes itself uncomfortably a couple of times, and then smashes into the ground with a force entirely unwarranted by the degree of momentum it has attained while comparatively upright.

Then my friend comes up with a look of pained surprise on his face, as though I'd been going through all these maneuvers on purpose to disregard his instructions. He shows me just where the course I have pursued is diametrically opposed to his directions. Particularly he remarks that I must endeavor to keep my equilibrium. I thank him, perhaps facetiously, because a vigorous fall is not calculated to improve the temper, and remark that if he had only suggested that before it would have saved all the trouble. Then he gets offended, and I have to apologize. Then we try again.

This time I am tired and disgusted. My knowing instructor is perfectly cool, but much more disgusted than myself. He insists that I am about the worst pupil he has ever seen. Then he discovers that he has an engagement and must leave. I thank him presumably for helping me with the wheel, really for going. As he disappears from sight I take the wheel back to the house, slam the door on it viciously, and seek a place where I can rest and reflect.

Maybe I did Horton an injustice, but that's about the way I imagined that he would help me to learn to ride. I told him I didn't think I'd have any trouble; besides I had almost decided to make my first trial at night. This moonlight-ride idea of mine was one I had thought of long before I purchased the wheel. I love the moonlight. To me it seems most singularly fit that love-lorn youths should swear "by yon pale moon." There is no truth in Luna. She lies, she flatters and exaggerates. And yet we all must love her, for her falsehoods are of kindness. She draws the veil of charity over our shortcomings. The crude, unsightly nooks and crevices the sun, truth's mighty ally, delights to show, she passes by or touches with soft romantic light that makes the very things we most dislike by day at night seem beautiful. There is no stretch of nature's handiwork so mean, so rough and so devoid of charm but, touched by this divine magician's power, may be transformed into a fairy land.

I take my wheel out into the broad avenue that passes the house. The moonlight shimmers through the leaves of the tall poplars that align the road. A gentle breeze makes the leaves rustle and dance. The tall trees quiver; and, save for the rubbing of the branches and the soft murmur of the winds, all is silent. A sovereign feeling of independence possesses me. The world is sleeping. I am alone with nature and the delights of night are mine. I mount my wheel triumphantly and start down the vista that stretches before me. My wheel skims like a bird over the smooth road. I emerge from the tree-lined avenue to an open country, where broad grain fields stretch away into the hazy distance. The deceptive moonlight lends to the waving grain the appearance of a vast lake. My eyes drink in the beauty of the scene, and the fresh, bracing atmosphere fills me with a peculiar intoxication. I throw back my chest, drink deep the airy nectar. I feel as though I would like to scream, sing, anything to vent my exuberance—

Horton said I couldn't learn to ride at night. I'd be everlastingly running into chuck-holes and other obstacles, and if I didn't break my neck (which didn't so much matter), I would probably cause the bicycle irreparable damage. That's the way with Horton. Whenever I get any particularly attractive idea he always spoils it with some of his practical suggestions. Now, if his suggestions were not practical it wouldn't be so bad. I don't a bit mind suggestions from friends, when I can show them the utter folly of acting upon them, but it is not so with Horton. Whenever he makes a suggestion I have

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

(Furnished by Weather Observer Neagle.)

Generally Cloudy Weather; Probably Light Local Showers This Afternoon and Tonight, Followed by Clearing Weather by Thursday Afternoon. On Thursday Afternoon Cooler.

A GOOD NAME WE HAVE.

The tenor of all the toasts responded to at the dinner given in honor of Mayor Gilbert last night, was of good government. And Plainfield was held up as an example of what is considered best. This is certainly a great honor for Plainfield.

Seasonabe Advice.

The New York Sun, of today, says:

The commuters on the Central Railroad of New Jersey might be in better business than in forcibly supporting one of their number in a position which cannot be defended either in law or morals. A railroad company has the right to contract for the performance of the express business over its line, and having so contracted, it is its duty to maintain the privilege to the contractor. The mere purchase of a passenger ticket, especially at a reduced rate of fare, gives the purchaser no right to run an express business over the road on his own account, any more than it does to run a news business or to sell packages of candy in the cars. Let us have law and order and common sense among the Jersey commuters, who are in most respects an uncommonly sensible crowd.

Surprised by her Class.

One of the most pleasant events of the holiday season was the surprise tendered to Miss Linda Butler, of East Front street, by her Sunday-School class of fourteen young women, which took place Monday evening. Previous to the arrival of the guests a handsome antique oak desk was sent to the house as a gift from the class.

It happened that Miss Butler was out when the class arrived at the house, and they had taken posession when the former came home. Of course Miss Butler was thoroughly overcome with surprise, but an evening of genuine pleasure followed, and concluded with the serving of refreshments.

A Mean Thief.

One of the women members of the Warren Mission Sunday-school kindly contributed a large Christmas cake for the Christmas entertainment, last night, and it was taken to the chapel in a baby carriage. For a moment the cake was left just outside the door, while the donor was inside, and when she returned the cake, plate and napkin were missing. Some mean thief had walked away with the whole business.

Succumbed to Apple Jack.

Another Elizabeth man came to Plainfield yesterday and partook of that fiery fluid known as apple jack, succumbed to it and spent the night in jail. He was arraigned this morning and gave his name as James Dutty, a horseshoer, of Elizabeth. Sentence was suspened on the offender on condition that he would leave town at once.

To Enter the Diocesan Union.

The Plainfield Catholic Club has decided to enter the bowling and poo tournament of the Diocesan Union this year. The tournaments will begin about the middle of next month. A meeting of the Union will be held on Monday evening, when the details of the tournaments will be arranged.

Washington Park Euchre Players.

A delightful euchre party was given last evening by the Misses Ball, of Myrtle avenue, at their home to the members of the card club of which they are members. The first prizes were won by Miss Helen Worman and Allen B. Laing. There were four tables.

Broke Her Equalizer.

Central Engine No. 86, attached to an east-bound mixed train, broke down near the North Avenue station early last night, and the entire train had to be backed on to the siding. The engine broke her equalizer and had to be sent to the shop for repairs.

Mrs. Cruikshank Entertains.

Mrs. S. A. Cruikshank, of Belvidere avenue, gave a card party last evening at her home in honor of her sister, Miss Moore, who is now visiting her. The evening was a very delightful one for those who were present.

A. S. of V. Recruit.

One recruit was given the third degree at the meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., last evening. The quarterly reports were also presented, showing the camp to be in a good condition.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

The Daily Press in reporting the Christmas exercises held at the First Baptist church last Sunday afternoon, unintentionally omitted the name of Miss Bessie Blair, who sang a solo in her usual acceptable manner.

Clarence L. Eick, the well-known Brooklyn organist, gave a concert in the German Reformed church, Brooklyn, last evening, and P. Ludwig Conde, Plainfield's artist on the violin, took part in the concert.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVALS.

dall; piano solos, Lucie Coriell, Evelyn Berg.

The affair was in charge of Mrs. J. M. Tier, Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, Miss Minnie Arnold and Miss Smith. They were assisted by the teachers of the department.

After the entertainment the young folks were served with ice cream and cake. Thus an afternoon of pleasure was passed.

There was a novelty about the Christmas entertainment given in the Sunday-school room of Trinity Reformed church last evening, and the members of the school together with their friends, were thoroughly pleased with the annual event.

The programme consisted of a cantata entitled "A Jolly Christmas Eve" and it was superbly presented. William Van Deventer, who was to have taken the part of "Brierly Click," was unable to be present, and at the last moment the part was taken by Ephraim Vail, who assumed the role very commendably, as did also the others who took their parts, as follows:—"Harry Steel," John H. Van Winkle, Jr., "William Lyster," Horace Martin, Jr., "Emily Dwight," Miss Cora Laire, "Violet Zeen," Miss Nettie Krietling, "May Green," Miss Adelaide Baxter, "Daddy Wicket, the Toll-gate Man," Horace J. Martin; chorus of singers, Miss Lillian Zeisz, Miss Nettie Young, Miss Grace Emmons, Miss Emma Line, Miss Etta Grizley and Hiram Humes, Raymond Poole, Charles Dunlap, William Swalm and Fred Van Horn. The cantata was brimful of life and amusement, thus giving to all an evening of genuine pleasure. A large fat turkey was an accessory in the cantata, and at the close, E. E. Anthony, in one of his well-chosen speeches, presented the birds to Clarkson Mundy, the faithful janitor of the church, who appreciated the gift exceedingly.

An unlooked-for pleasure was the reading of a message of greeting, from Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., pastor of the church, who is at Lakewood for his health. The loving message wished all a joyous celebration and a bright and happy year in the service for the master. Miss Mabel Wilson, Miss Jennie Quick, H. J. Martin and Fred E. Smith composed the committee, who deserve unlimited praise for their untiring efforts in arranging the entertainment. The usual distribution of a box of candy was made to teachers and scholars.

William Townsend, violinist, accompanied the pianist very acceptably, in the music for the cantata.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The chapel of the First Presbyterian Church was well-filled last evening, when the annual Christmas festivities were held. There was an opening vocal selection by the girl's choir of the Sunday-school, and then recitations were given by Miss Leah Hammond and Miss Edna Burr.

The main part of the evening was devoted to an exhibition of pictures by Rev. C. E. Herring, together with a delightful talk by way of explanation. Most of the pictures were taken by Mr. Herring while abroad last summer, and all were thoroughly pleased with them and the talk.

The stereopticon was operated by Augustus Searing, Jr., who arranged the entire affair. After the lecture candies and oranges were distributed to all by the following persons who were in charge: Superintendent Lounsbury, Mrs. H. A. Pope, Miss Maag, Miss Remson, Miss Blanche Fellows, Miss Bessie Blair, Mr. Hinman and Augustus Searing, Jr.

The primary department were given their entertainment in the afternoon, and it consisted of an exhibtion of various views by Mr. Hinman. The young people were delighted with the entertainment and at the close Mrs. H. A. Pope, Miss Bessie Blair, Miss Petrie and Miss Maag distributed dolls, toys and candies to the scholars. A feature of the event was the brilliantly lighted Christmas trees, loaded with gifts for the scholars.

GRACE M. E. CHURCH.

The Sunday-school of the Grace M. E. church held its Christmas festival in the church last evening and it was largely attended. There were a number of carols by the school and by the primary department, and the following recitations: "A Surprise for Santa Claus," by Miss Mabel Geary; "Christmas Morning," by Miss May Fairchild; "Scaring Santa Claus," by Miss Viola Higgins; "Hush," by Miss Grace Woolston; "Ready for Santa Claus," by Miss Mildred Long. There was a song entitled "Who is Santa Claus?" by the Misses Eva Higgins, Edith Taft, Alice DeMott and Charlie Powell, John Valiant and Eddie Krausse. The feature of the entertainment was a cantata entitled "The Capture of Santa Claus." Santa Claus was impersonated by Dyckman Winckler; Jack Frost by Benj. Schuck and the Snow Man by Charles Sheppard. The Misses Alice and Grace Carroll acted as accompanists for the different parts of the programme.

Mrs. H. J. Johnston was presented with a handsome present from the members of her Sunday-school class, and then followed the distribution of gifts for the members of the school. The entire programme was very good indeed and reflects much credit on the committee in charge—Mrs. A. Taft, chairman; Mrs. Albert Most, Mrs. Charles Hummer, Miss Belle Lunger, Mrs. H. J. Johnston and Miss Grace Carroll.

The church was prettily decorated for the occasion with evergreens and holly.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

The primary department of the First Baptist church Sunday-school had a jolly good time yesterday afternoon, at which time they celebrated their Christmas festivities. The following programme was presented and every number deserves praise: Recitations, "A Stranger in the Pew," Hazel Grant; "Nobody," Randolph Chandler; "Gladys Letter," Beulah VanWinkle; "Little Prue's Opinion," Bertha Manning; "No Room for Jesus," Gladys Leland; "What Grandmother Says," Wallace Pearce; "Birthdays," Miriam Hall; "Dandelions," Clara Francisco; "Christmas at Black Mammy's," Gideon Fountain; "Christmas Song," Edith Runk; "A New Santa Claus," Ira Dayton; "A Little Girl's Advice," Helen Myers; "Song of Life," Helen and Clarence Smalley; "A Novel Plan," Orvetta Culyer; "Nellie's Dolls," Lena Crane; "Lost, Strayed or Stolen," Edna Crouce; "Dolly's Lesson," Josephine Serrell; "When I Am a Grown Up Lady," Julia Crane; "A Sad Story," Beulah Rogers.

Tho distribution of gifts, consisting of books, candy, etc., followed the entertainment and those in charge were Mrs. Powlison, Miss Anna Boice, Miss Woodland, Mrs. Harold Serrell, Mrs. B. Vail, Mrs. F. Jones and the teachers of the department.

The scholars of the First Baptist church Sunday-school, East Third street Mission and Mt. Olive church Sunday-school, together with their friends gathered at the First Baptist church and enjoyed one of the best Christmas entertainments ever given at the church.

The principal feature was a cinematograph in charge of Mr. Hutchinson, of New York. It was the first exhibition of the kind given in Plainfield. The pictures thrown on the canvass were all taken in Paris, and the machine which made the objects move, worked perfectly. Among the pictures shown was a regiment passing by, people coming from church, an intoxicated man being arrested, street sprinkling in Paris, children playing on the lawn. Everybody present was thoroughly pleased with the exhibition. As an additional feature the Midmer Glee Club, consisting of Robert Clark, Edward Clark, Herbert Schutt, B. T. Barnes, A. H. Cornish, Wm. Holmes, Geo. H. Smith, was present and rendered several amusing selections during the evening. They were assisted by Howard Case on the organ.

Those in charge of the entertainment were Superintendent R. K. Case, Charles H. Smith, Harold Serrell, Herbert Case, and G. F. Brown.

PARK AVENUE BABTIST CHURCH.

The Christmas festival of the Sunday-school of the Park Avenue Baptist church was held in the chapel last night and was largely attended by the members of the Sunday school and their friends. The entertainment consisted of an exhibition of stereopticon views by Oscar S. Teale, of the Plainfield Camera Club. A number of sets representing well-known children's stories like "Tom Thumb," "The Three Bears," and "The Sweeper and the Whitewasher." Miss Florence G. Hawkins read the stories which were greatly enjoyed by the children.

Then came the presentation of gifts. A large and generous purse was given to the pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson, from the congregation, and then all the members of the primary department were given a present and the rest of the school a box of candy.

The committee in charge of the festival consisted of Mrs. W. S. Lowry, chairman, David M. Runyon, Thomas A. Cuming, E. Frank Vail, Miss Alice Spangenburg, and Miss Mira Runyon.

HOLY CROSS CHURCH.

The Christmas festival of Holy Cross Sunday-school took place last night in the parish building. The exercises consisted of singing of carols, responsive reading, an address by the rector and distribution of gifts by Santa Claus. There was a large attendance of teachers, scholars and their friends. A very large tree, beautifully decorated, occupied the entire upper end of the building. The singing of the carols, under the direction of George Hosking, choirmaster, was one of the pleasant features of the evening. The rector made an appropriate address and Superintendent Benjamin R. Western then read a letter, which had just been received from the Indian Mission of Pine Ridge Agency, thanking the school for the fine Christmas box recieved by them for the Indian children.

Then, amid a merry jingle of sleigh bells, Santa Claus came in the person of Charles C. Western. The old gentleman was received with shouts of delight by the little ones, and as he distributed the gifts caused much merriment. Everyone was remembered by the Old Saint. There were sleds, skates, toys, games, dolls, books, pen-knives, in short everything to make glad the heart of the small boy or girl. Superintendent B. R. Western was the recipient of a handsome mahogany table from the teachers of the Sunday-school. Rev. T. Logan Murphy and Mrs. Murphy were also remembered, as were also the organist, sexton and members of the church choir.

SLEIGH UPSET, HORSE RUN AWAY.

The Animal Not Recovered by the Owner Till This Morning.

A lively runaway was witnessed on West Front street, last evening, in which a horse and sleigh owned by W. O. Baldwin, cut a great figure. The horse was being driven by Mr. Baldwin's son. The sleigh caught in the street car tracks in front of the Babcock building and upset, throwing the driver out. The horse then ran down West Front street, and in the flight the sleigh was completely wrecked.

About 12.30 o'clock this morning some boys found the horse at Washingtonville and returned with it to this city, when Patrolman Totten took charge of the animal and placed him in Roberts' livery stable. This morning Mr. Baldwin called and got the horse. His son was not injured, neither was the horse. Wilbur F. Cornwall, of Waynewood place, in attempting to catch the horse when he started, was thrown down and just escaped injury.

Electric Bitters

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

A GOOD NAME WE HAVE.

The tenor of all the toasts responded to at the dinner given in honor of Mayor Gilbert last night, was of good government. And Plainfield was held up as an example of what is considered best. This is certainly a great honor for Plainfield.

Seasonabe Advice.

The New York Sun, of today, says:

The commuters on the Central Railroad of New Jersey might be in better business than in forcibly supporting one of their number in a position which cannot be defended either in law or morals. A railroad company has the right to contract for the performance of the express business over its line, and having so contracted, it is its duty to maintain the privilege to the contractor. The mere purchase of a passenger ticket, especially at a reduced rate of fare, gives the purchaser no right to run an express business, over the road on his own account, any more than it does to run a news business or to sell packages of candy in the cars. Let us have law and order and common sense among the Jersey commuters, who are in most respects an uncommonly sensible crowd.

Surprised by her Class.

One of the most pleasant events of the holiday season was the surprise tendered to Miss Linda Butler, of East Front street, by her Sunday-School class of fourteen young women, which took place Monday evening. Previous to the arrival of the guests a handsome antique oak desk was sent to the house as a gift from the class.

It happened that Miss Butler was out when the class arrived at the house, and they had taken posession when the former came home. Of course Miss Butler was thoroughly overcome with surprise, but an evening of genuine pleasure followed, and concluded with the serving of refreshments.

A Mean Thief.

One of the women members of the Warren Mission Sunday-school kindly contributed a large Christmas cake for the Christmas entertainment, last night, and it was taken to the chapel in a baby carriage. For a moment the cake was left just outside the door, while the donor was inside, and when she returned the cake, plate and napkin were missing. Some mean thief had walked away with the whole business.

Succumbed to Apple Jack.

Another Elizabeth man came to Plainfield yesterday and partook of that fiery fluid known as apple jack, succumbed to it and spent the night in jail. He was arraignded this morning and gave his name as James Dutty, a horseshoer, of Elizabeth. Sentence was suspened on the offender on condition that he would leave town at once.

To Enter the Diocesan Union.

The Plainfield Catholic Club has decided to enter the bowling and poo tournament of the Diocesan Union this year. The tournaments will begin about the middle of next month. A meeting of the Union will be held on Monday evening, when the details of the tournaments will be arranged.

Washington Park Euchre Players.

A delightful euchre party was given last evening by the Misses Ball, of Myrtle avenue, at their home to the members of the card club of which they are members. The first prizes were won by Miss Helen Worman and Allen B. Laing. There were four tables.

Broke Her Equalizer.

Central Engine No. 86, attached to an east-bound mixed train, broke down near the North Avenue station early last night, and the entire train had to be backed on to the siding. The engine broke her equalizer and had to be sent to the shop for repairs.

Mrs. Cruikshank Entertains.

Mrs. S. A. Cruikshank, of Belvidere avenue, gave a card party last evening at her home in honor of her sister, Miss Moore, who is now visiting her. The evening was a very delightful one for those who were present.

A S. of V. Recruit.

One recruit was given the third degree at the meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., last evening. The quarterly reports were also presented, showing the camp to be in a good condition.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

The Daily Press in reporting the Christmas exercises held at the First Baptist church last Sunday afternoon, unintentionally omitted the name of Miss Bessie Blair, who sang a solo in her usual acceptable manner.

Clarence L. Eick, the well-known Brooklyn organist, gave a concert in the German Reformed church, Brooklyn, last evening, and P. Ludwig Conde, Plainfield's artist on the violin, took part in the concert.

Don't worry about your health. Keep your blood pure by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and you need not fear the grip, colds, bronchitis, pneumonia or typhoid fever.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVALS.

dall; piano solos, Lucie Coriell, Evelyn Berg.

The affair was in charge of Mrs. J. M. Tier, Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, Miss Minnie Arnold and Miss Smith. They were assisted by the teachers of the department.

After the entertainment the young folks were served with ice cream and cake. Thus an afternoon of pleasure was passed.

There was a novelty about the Christmas entertainment given in the Sunday-school room of Trinity Reformed church last evening, and the members of the school together with their friends, were thoroughly pleased with the annual event.

The programme consisted of a cantata entitled "A Jolly Christmas Eve" and it was superbly presented. William Van Deventer, who was to have taken the part of "Brierly Click," was unable to be present, and at the last moment the part was taken by Ephraim Vail, who assumed the role very commendably, as did also the others who took their parts, as follows:—"Harry Steel," John H. Van Winkle, Jr., "William Lyster," Horace Martin, Jr., "Emily Dwight," Miss Cora Laire, "Violet Zeen," Miss Nettie Krietling, "May Green," Miss Adelaide Baxter, "Daddy Wicket, the Toll-gate Man," Horace J. Martin; chorus of singers, Miss Lillian Zeisz, Miss Nettie Young, Miss Grace Emmons, Miss Emma Line, Miss Etta Grizley and Hiram Humes, Raymond Poole, Charles Dunlap, William Swalm and Fred Van Horn. The cantata was brimful of life and amusement, thus giving to all an evening of genuine pleasure. A large fat turkey was an accessory in the cantata, and at the close, E. E. Anthony, in one of his well-chosen speeches, presented the birds to Clarkson Mundy, the faithful janitor of the church, who appreciated the gift exceedingly.

An unlooked-for pleasure was the reading of a message of greeting, from Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., pastor of the church, who is at Lakewood for his health. The loving message wished all a joyous celebration and a bright and happy year in the service for the master. Miss Mabel Wilson, Miss Jennie Quick, H. J. Martin and Fred E. Smith composed the committee, who deserve unlimited praise for their untiring efforts in arranging the entertainment. The usual distribution of a box of candy was made to teachers and scholars.

William Townsend, violinist, accompanied the pianist very acceptably, in the music for the cantata.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The chapel of the First Presbyterian Church was well-filled last evening, when the annual Christmas festivities were held. There was an opening vocal selection by the girl's choir of the Sunday-school, and then recitations were given by Miss Leah Hammond and Miss Edna Burr.

The main part of the evening was devoted to an exhibition of pictures by Rev. C. E. Herring, together with a delightful talk by way of explanation. Most of the pictures were taken by Mr. Herring while abroad last summer, and all were thoroughly pleased with them and the talk.

The stereopticon was operated by Augustus Searing, Jr., who arranged the entire affair. After the lecture candies and oranges were distributed to all by the following persons who were in charge: Superintendent Lounsbury, Mrs. H. A. Pope, Miss Maag, Miss Remson, Miss Blanche Fellows, Miss Bessie Blair, Mr. Hinman and Augustus Searing, Jr.

The primary department were given their entertainment in the afternoon, and it consisted of an exhibtion of various views by Mr. Hinman. The young people were delighted with the entertainment and at the close Mrs. H. A. Pope, Miss Bessie Blair, Miss Petrie and Miss Maag distributed dolls, toys and candies to the scholars. A feature of the event was the brilliantly lighted Christmas trees, loaded with gifts for the scholars.

GRACE M. E. CHURCH.

The Sunday-school of the Grace M. E. church held its Christmas festival in the church last evening and it was largely attended. There were a number of carols by the school and by the primary department, and the following recitations: "A Surprise for Santa Claus," by Miss Mabel Geary; "Christmas Morning," by Miss May Fairchild; "Scaring Santa Claus," by Miss Viola Higgins; "Hush," by Miss Grace Woolston; "Ready for Santa Claus," by Miss Mildred Long. There was a song entitled "Who is Santa Claus?" by the Misses Eva Higgins, Edith Taft, Alice DeMott and Charlie Powell, John Valiant and Eddie Krausse. The feature of the entertainment was a cantata entitled "The Capture of Santa Claus." Santa Claus was impersonated by Dyckman Winckler; Jack Frost by Benj. Schuck and the Snow Man by Charles Sheppard. The Misses Alice and Grace Carroll acted as accompanists for the different parts of the programme.

Mrs. H. J. Johnston was presented with a handsome present from the members of her Sunday-school class, and then followed the distribution of gifts for the members of the school. The entire programme was very good indeed and reflects much credit on the committee in charge—Mrs. A. Taft, chairman; Mrs. Albert Most, Mrs. Charles Hummer, Miss Belle Lunger, Mrs. H. J. Johnston and Miss Grace Carroll.

The church was prettily decorated for the occasion with evergreens and holly.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

The primary department of the First Baptist church Sunday-school had a jolly good time yesterday afternoon, at which time they celebrated their Christmas festivities. The following programme was presented and every number deserves praise: Recitations, "A Stranger in the Pew," Hazel Grant; "Nobody," Randolph Chandler; "Gladys Letter," Beulah VanWinkle; "Little Prue's Opinion," Bertha Manning; "No Room for Jesus," Gladys Leland; "What Grandmother Says," Wallace Pearce; "Birthdays," Miriam Hall; "Dandelions," Clara Francisco; "Christmas at Black Mammy's," Gideon Fountain; "Christmas Song," Edith Runk; "A New Santa Claus," Ira Dayton; "A Little Girl's Advice," Helen Myers; "Song of Life," Helen and Clarence Smalley; "A Novel Plan," Orvetta Culyer; "Nellie's Dolls," Lena Crane; "Lost, Strayed or Stolen," Edna Crouce; "Dolly's Lesson," Josephine Serrell; "When I Am a Grown Up Lady," Julia Crane; "A Sad Story," Beulah Rogers.

Tho distribution of gifts, consisting of books, candy, etc., followed the entertainment and those in charge were Mrs. Powlison, Miss Anna Boice, Miss Woodland, Mrs. Harold Serrell, Mrs. B. Vail, Mrs. F. Jones and the teachers of the department.

The scholars of the First Baptist church Sunday-school, East Third street Mission and Mt. Olive church Sunday-school, together with their friends gathered at the First Baptist church and enjoyed one of the best Christmas entertainments ever given at the church.

The principal feature was a cinematograph in charge of Mr. Hutchinson, of New York. It was the first exhibition of the kind given in Plainfield. The pictures thrown on the canvass were all taken in Paris, and the machine which made the objects move, worked perfectly. Among the pictures shown was a regiment passing by, people coming from church, an intoxicated man being arrested, street sprinkling in Paris, children playing on the lawn. Everybody present was thoroughly pleased with the exhibition. As an additional feature the Midmer Glee Club, consisting of Robert Clark, Edward Clark, Herbert Schutt, B. T. Barnes, A. H. Cornish, Wm. Holmes, Geo. H. Smith, was present and rendered several amusing selections during the evening. They were assisted by Howard Case on the organ.

Those in charge of the entertainment were Superintendent R. K. Case, Charles H. Smith, Harold Serrell, Herbert Case, and G. F. Brown.

PARK AVENUE BABTIST CHURCH.

The Christmas festival of the Sunday-school of the Park Avenue Baptist church was held in the chapel last night and was largely attended by the members of the Sunday school and their friends. The entertainment consisted of an exhibition of stereopticon views by Oscar S. Teale, of the Plainfield Camera Club. A number of sets representing well-known children's stories like "Tom Thumb," "The Three Bears," and "The Sweeper and the Whitewasher." Miss Florence G. Hawkins read the stories which were greatly enjoyed by the children.

Then came the presentation of gifts. A large and generous purse was given to the pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson, from the congregation, and then all the members of the primary department were given a present and the rest of the school a box of candy.

The committee in charge of the festival consisted of Mrs. W. S. Lowry, chairman, David M. Runyon, Thomas A. Cuming, E. Frank Vail, Miss Alice Spangenburg, and Miss Mira Runyon.

HOLY CROSS CHURCH.

The Christmas festival of Holy Cross Sunday-school took place last night in the parish building. The exercises consisted of singing of carols, responsive reading, an address by the rector and distribution of gifts by Santa Claus. There was a large attendance of teachers, scholars and their friends. A very large tree, beautifully decorated, occupied the entire upper end of the building. The singing of the carols, under the direction of George Hosking, choirmaster, was one of the pleasant features of the evening. The rector made an appropriate address and Superintendent Benjamin R. Western then read a letter, which had just been received from the Indian Mission of Pine Ridge Agency, thanking the school for the fine Christmas box recieved by them for the Indian children.

Then, amid a merry jingle of sleigh bells, Santa Claus came in the person of Charles C. Western. The old gentleman was received with shouts of delight by the little ones, and as he distributed the gifts caused much merriment. Everyone was remembered by the Old Saint. There were sleds, skates, toys, games, dolls, books, pen-knives, in short everything to make glad the heart of the small boy or girl. Superintendent B. R. Western was the recipient of a handsome mahogany table from the teachers of the Sunday-school. Rev. T. Logan Murphy and Mrs. Murphy were also remembered, as were also the organist, sexton and members of the church choir.

SLEIGH UPSET, HORSE RUN AWAY.

The Animal Not Recovered by the Owner Till This Morning.

A lively runaway was witnessed on West Front street, last evening, in which a horse and sleigh owned by W. O. Baldwin, cut a great figure. The horse was being driven by Mr. Baldwin's son. The sleigh caught in the street car tracks in front of the Babcock building and upset, throwing the driver out. The horse then ran down West Front street, and in the flight the sleigh was completely wrecked.

About 12.30 o'clock this morning some boys found the horse at Washingtonville and returned with it to this city, when Patrolman Totten took charge of the animal and placed him in Roberts' livery stable. This morning Mr. Baldwin called and got the horse. His son was not injured, neither was the horse. Wilbur F. Cornwall, of Waynewood place, in attempting to catch the horse when he started, was thrown down and just escaped injury.

Electric Bitters

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

A MODERN KNIGHT.

BY GEORGE THOW.

It was dark enough on the wharf. Lamps here and there showed barely to outline where the quay ended and the black void of water began. No vessels lay alongside, for a coal strike had sent them elsewhere seeking cargoes, and this east coast harbor was deserted. The cranes stood gaunt and silent, and the coal-trimmers' huts were empty.

A light shone out of the unshuttered window of a wooden box placed close to the quay wall, and bearing the signboard of the Albion Steam Shipping company. Inside, the shipping clerk sat in weary expectation of the Tuskar, due from a German port. He had prepared the custom house papers ready for the captain's signature, had studied the manifest of the cargo, come to hand by post, and, as for the ninth time he refilled his pipe, he gazed mournfully at the hands of the loudly-ticking little ship-timepiece that ornamented the dingy wall boards. "Ten o'clock," was his unspoken soliloquy, "which means that light as she is—and the captain might have carried all the cargo this trip in his coat-pocket—light as she is, she won't get berthed until the tide makes say 12 o'clock;" and after this effort he relapsed into a comatose state, tobacco smoke at times slowly filtering out of his mouth. A rush of cold wind betokened the opening of the door, and a head appeared, hairy, with cloth cap and ear laps tightly fastened down.

"She ain't in sight yet. I hev been to the pier-head, and can't see her anywheres," and the old watchman and rope-tender edged into the box.

A somnolent grunt was the only reply.

"That ould Tuskar ain't fit for the work, that she ain't; she's missin' tides reg'lar, now."

With clumsy carefulness the old man opened the red-hot door of the little bogey stove, and added fresh fuel. Although of small size, the shipping box, with its warped boarding, was not over hot. The keen wind found entry through a hundred crevices; and it was cold outside. Here and there in the plank flooring knot-holes let in the sound of the sullen wash of the rising tide as it restlessly beat among the piles of the wooden pier. The muffled roaring of the stove, and the ticking of the clock, were the only other sounds to be heard, with the intermittent gurgling as the old watchman laboriously sucked at his pipe.

For a moment a face looked in at the window, and then a light tapping came to the door. Too light for the dulled ears of the old man or the half-sleeping shipping clerk. Then the handle turned after some fumbling, and a stiff blast sent the door against the wall with a bang.

"Shut the door, dart, you," was the irritable exclamation of the shipping clerk, as he felt the piercing wind biting the back of his neck. "You customs men get to think that the whole harbor belongs to you."

"Please can you tell me when the steamship Tuskar is likely to arrive?" was asked in a timid, softly modulated voice.

The shipping clerk jumped up so hastily that the wooden chair he sat upon fell back with a loud crash, and the old watchman, who had been gazing sleepily at the glowing stove, stood erect, and backed into a corner, meantime uneasily fingering his cap. A lady, young, not more than 18, of slender make, very pretty, even that could be made out through the veil she wore, stood on the threshold in a doubtful way, and there was a nervous thrill in her voice that went straight to the not over susceptible heart of the shipping clerk.

"Come in, miss. It is a very cold night. Yes, this is the agent's office. The Tuskar is behind time this trip. She won't get alongside for a couple of hours or so, even if she did come in. Except anybody on board of her, miss?" he queried, with the least tinge of wonder in his accents.

"But I thought the vessel would be in harbor." There was a suspicion of tears in the voice.

"It's blowin' fresh from the west'ard, ma'am, and that's agin' her, ye sees," interjected the watchman. 'She's an old boat, ma'am, and ain't got the legs, askin' yer pardin', ma'am, as she once had."

"Perhaps, if you went home and came down to-morrow it would be better," added the shipping clerk, as he sympathetically regarded the girlish figure, and speculated curiously to himself who on board the old Tuskar had high-class lady friends, for a lady she was, although little could be distinguished owing to the heavy and close veil.

"Oh no, I can't go back," was the nervous rejoinder. "I must wait. Please is there a waiting-room on the pier?"

"No, miss," was the apologetic reply. "You see our boats don't carry passengers as a rule, but"—earnestly—"please take this chair. It's not a very fit place for a lady, but you will be out of the cold."

Half hesitating, and with a slight bow, and a murmur of thanks, the young girl stepped into the office and accepted the proffered chair after its former occupant had zealously wiped it down with a sheet of blotting paper.

Perched on a high stool, the only other seat in the diminutive office, the shipping clerk stared out into the darkness, as if he expected at every moment to see the green and red lights of the Tuskar heading for the harbor; while the old watchman resumed his seat on a sack of waste that was part of the engine-room stores of the steamer.

Silence again, broken at last by a shuddering exclamation from the girl.

"It's only a rat," said the clerk, as he followed the direction of her eyes, staring in wide-open anxiety at a corner of the coal-box; and the bill of lading book, hurled with a vigorous hand, narrowly missed its aim.

"The place is overrun with them, ma'am," grumbled the old man. "I have had my supper eaten out of my pocket, when I took a wink or two at nights in the sheds."

Silence again.

Footsteps sounded outside, and a peremptory knock came to the door, followed immediately by the turning of the handle, and a tall, stoutly-built man stood framed in the doorway. The girl shrank back nervously, and a low exclamation broke from her lips. The newcomer, of gentlemanly exterior, with an imperious bearing, entered the shipping box, his eyes falling at once on the young lady occupant. In an angry tone, regardless of the other occupants, he addressed her:

"You will return with me, young lady. You shall pay dearly for this escapade."

There was no response, but the girl shrank farther into a corner of the apartment, while the clerk and the watchman stared in silent amazement.

Hastily stepping forward the intruder passionately seized the girl by the arm.

"Come away, I say, or I shall drag you out."

"Excuse me, sir," slowly interposed the shipping clerk, "but may I ask what you have to do with this young lady?"

"What, sir!" was the hot response. "This girl is my ward, and has run away from my house. Do you hear, girl," he almost shouted; "come out of this at once."

"No, no," was the shuddering reply, and the girl burst into tears.

"This won't do, you know," interposed the shipping clerk, as he projected his lanky form close to the stranger. "Whether she is your ward or not, she is not going out of here unless of her own accord, and," he added, sarcastically, "if this is your usual little way I don't wonder at her not being over-anxious to go along with you."

"Curse you, you fool! What do you mean by your interference?" was the angry retort. "I tell you, sir, I'm her lawful guardian, and I shall compel her to accompany me."

"No, I guess you won't, not so long as I am here," was the quiet rejoinder. "Pardon, lady, but do you wish to stay here until the arrival of the Tuskar? The place is quite at your service."

"Yes, yes," was the low reply, amid broken sobs.

"Then, mister," continued the shipping clerk, "this office is not a public one, and perhaps you will have the goodness to get out of it."

"That's your sort; out with him," interjected the old watchman, as he gripped his stick threateningly.

"Look here, sir, there's my card. My name is Gordon, and that's my address. I shall report your insolence to your employers to-morrow moring."

"You can do what you like to-morrow, but out you go to-night," was the reply, in an unconcerned tone. And the two men stood facing each other, the stranger pale with passion and his opponent cool but firm.

The hoarse scream of a steam-horn sounded near at hand, and almost simultaneously came the roar of a deep voice:

"Stand by for a line ashore, there."

"Why, that's the Tuskar!" excitedly exclaimed the old watchman. "She must have crawled into harbor unbeknown to anybody," and with scant ceremony he pushed past Mr. Gordon and hurried on the quay.

Duty bade the shipping clerk follow; and he took a few steps, then stopped, as his eye caught an imploring gesture from the girl.

"Come," peremptorily, "out of this, Mr. Gordon," and he bustled the stranger out of the office, locking the door behind him. "Here, stand back," he added, as the excited stranger seized him violently by the throat. "Hands off, or I'll have you into the harbor."

Wrenching himself free, and paying little heed to the curses both loud and deep hurled after him, the shipping clerk leapt on board the steamer just hauling alongside and shook hands with the captain, a young, open-faced, frank-spoken seaman.

"Any passengers on board, captain?"

"Passengers!" was the amused response. "Expecting the duke of York, or the emperor of Germany? Who do you think would take passage on board an old cargo-boat, eh?"

"Well, that's strange, anyhow," said the clerk, gravely. "Come into the office, captain; there's a curious bit of business on," and he led the way to the office. "This young lady, captain," he explained as he threw open the door, "is—"

"Ethel!" "Harry!" burst from the lips of the captain and the girl; and next moment the latter lay sobbing on the breast of the Tuskar's skipper.

A dawn of understanding came over the shipping clerk and he softly withdrew, drawing the door to behind him. He stood on the pier watching the mooring of the vessel, and reflecting on the mutability of human affairs. How and when the young captain had made the acquaintance of so lovely a sweetheart he could not conceive, "and a well-bred one she is," was the firm conviction he had arrived at.

Half an hour elapsed, and the shipping clerk still stood on guard, still turning over in his mind the strange incident that had happened, a novel departure truly in the prosaic daily round of a shipping office. The second mate had come forward, cargo-book in hand, and had had his questions as to loading answered; and the old watchman had finished his rope-tending part of the work and stood near by, his thoughts, as could be seen by his frequent glances at the box, running in the same groove as those of his young companion.

A train of coal-laden wagons was backed along the pier, the red-capped "pilot" sitting outside one of the buffers of the foremost trucks, his lighted lamp swinging in his hand.

"Ten wagons here," he sung out to the clerk, "bunkers for the Tuskar will be ready for her to make a start first thing in the morning." Jumping off his hazardous seat, and picking his way carefully over the intervening rails to the office, he regarded the shipping clerk somewhat curiously.

"I passed the police station," he went on, "just afore I came away with the trani, and I seed a big gent a-talking to the sergint. In a great rage he was. They're comin' along," and he jerked his thumb significantly shorewards. "Something about a lady, I heard mention," and his eyes sought the closed door of the office.

Without a word the shipping clerk reentered the box, and repeated what he had heard.

The girl clung to her lover, for that they were lovers was plain enough, even to the unsentimental beholder. A few words from the captain put the clerk in possession of the facts, which were plain enough. It was another case of true love, an heiress, a harsh guardian, a detested guardian's son, and a miserable home. Rather than go back to the weary round of presecution the girl tearfully declared she would go somewhere and work for her living.

"Best thing you can do, miss," said the shipping clerk, meditatively, "is to marry the captain right away."

"How can we get a parson at this time of night, man?" was the captain's impatient reply.

"Don't want one; this is Scotland; join hands afore witnesses, accept each other as man and wife, and ye'r married hard and fast."

The girl started back, blushing furiously, and the captain stood uneasily.

Cautiously the door opened, and the old watchman put his head in. "Beg parding," he said, "but them police are coming up the pier with that mister ye had the words with."

"Is the railway man outside yet?" asked the shipping clerk.

"Ay, I'm here," and the red-capped "pilot" pushed in at the doorway, curiosity written large on every feature, but still the girl hung back.

Heavy footsteps rung outside, drawing nearer every moment. The girl made a frightened movement to the captain's side, and their eyes met. A nod from the captain, and—

"Clap on all steam," in a gruff voice, was sufficient for the shipping clerk.

"Come inside, both of you men. Turn the key in the door, Peter," and the old watchman did so, and placed his back to the panels.

"Ye see, it's this way. This is Capt. Harry Thomas, of the Tuskar, as both of yer know well, and this young lady is Miss—excuse me, miss, but I haven't quite got hold of your name?"

"Ethel Morrison," came in a whisper from the girl.

"Yes, this is Miss Ethel Morrison, and the one is going to have the other for a husband, and the tother is going to have the tother for a wife. That is what they call a purpose of marriage, ye understand?"

A couple of nods with wide grins was the response.

Sharp rappings at the door took place, while the handle was tried; and pressed close to the window panes were the faces of the police sergeant and Mr. Gordon, with, as a background indistinctly outlined in the darkness, the forms of some of the Tuskar's crew, and a few stragglers who had followed the pouicemen along the pier. In imperative accents, Mr. Gordon demanded admittance, and shook the door violently.

"Do you, Ethel Morrison, take this man as your lawful husband?" continued the shipping clerk, gravely punctuating each word with a shake of his extended forefinger.

"Yes," was the almost inaudible response.

"Ye heard that, Peter, and you, Bill?" Nods again; gravely this time.

"Do you, Harry Thomson, master of the steamship Tuskar, take this woman as your lawful wife?"

"I do," was the firm response.

"And ye heard that likewise, you two? Speak out, men."

"Ay, I did that," and "Yes, right enough," were the replies.

"Then I declare you two, Harry Thompson and Ethel Morrison, now man and wife. And those whom God has joined, let no man dare put asunder. Now wait till I write out the charter-party." And calmly unheeding the repeated knocking at the door, and the wondering faces glued to the window, the shipping clerk took a blank customs bill of entry form and wrote on the plain reverse the necessary certificate of marriage, which was signed by all.

"Now, Captain and Mrs. Thomson," he went on, as he damped a sheet of the copy-book and proceeded to take a book impression of the document, "I wish you all happiness. Here's your certificate, Mrs. Thompson. Open the door, Peter."

And later, as the shipping clerk walked homeward along the pier, pipe in mouth, he observed reflectively to himself, as round a sharp bend his eyes fell on the lights of the Tuskar: "Some men have luck."—Idler.

Inconsistency of Mankind.

He needed a shave and he knew it. He started down the street, but had not gone far when he met a friend.

"Say, why don't you get 'em trimmed?" said he.

Soon another friend came up.

"Have you decided to grow a beard?" asked the last one. "Pretty hot weather for that sort of thing."

A few steps on the bewhiskered man met another.

"Trying the effect of the wind on 'em, I suppose," this one said, with a grin.

At the next corner he met still another.

"Why don't you go somewhere, put on a clean collar, take a shave, and otherwise disguise yourself?" asked this last one in a hoarse tone of voice.

And yet this was none of their business.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? For this, half-ripe fruit is best. Squeeze the pulp from the skins, put skins in one dish and pulp in another. Boil the pulp until the seeds are loose, then strain. NEWARK IN DARKNESS.

Big Electric Lighting Plant Burned, Causing a Loss of $175,000.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 30.—The regular and reserve sections of the People's Electric Light & Power company's plant at City dock, River street and the Passaic river, were destroyed by fire early last evening, plunging the city into darkness which may not be relieved for several days. The entire plant is wrecked. Thirty-seven dynamos, ranging in value from $2,500 to $7,500 each, were consumed. Leo Gamp, foreman of the regular dynamo room, was at the switch board when a sheet of flame came through from the outside. This passed over Gamp's hands, burning him severely. In an instant every wire in the plant was a tongue of flame, shooting to the "shut offs" and igniting everything which they touched. Two alarms were sent in, more particularly to save the works of the T. J. Preston Oil company, adjoining, as the electric light plant was already lost. Fortunately the flames were confined to the four walls of the electric light plant. Not one of the dynamos were saved, and in order to serve even a small portion of the city with light by to-night at least twelve first-class dynamos must be set up in the meantime. Phillip N. Jackson, president of the company, telegraphed all of the leading dynamo makers in the country to send machines here at once. The plant cost $200,000 two years ago. The loss is placed at $175,000 with an insurance of $75,000.

BOSTON CITY PRINTING.

The Municipality To Establish a Plant and Do Its Own Work.

Boston, Dec. 30.—The city printing contract with Rockwell & Churchill, who have done the city work for twenty years, has just been abrogated by the committee on printing by a vote of 7 to 1, and the firm will receive notice to this effect in the course of time. But the contract will not expire until February 1, 1897, according to the existing agreement. Mayor Quincy concurred with the committee, it is said, and advised this course in order that the city may establish its own municipal printing plant and do its own printing. An appropiation will be made by next year's city government for this purpose. Meanwhile Rockwell & Churchill will do the city printing until the city is ready to undertake its own work.

DEFENSE OF THE PAPACY.

The Pope Says He Has Received Offers of Aid from Ireland and Elsewhere.

Rome, Dec. 30.—The address of the pope yesterday to the body representing the old pontifical army, in which he declared that the papacy would finally triumph, and adding that he had received offers from Canada, Ireland and elsewhere from people who were ready to hasten to the defense of the papacy, and that he hoped for the moment when he would see himself surrounded anew by sons of the faithful, and as well beloved as those which had comprised the pontifical army, has produced a deep impression in all circles throughout Italy.

Dinner to Gov.-elect and Mrs. Black.

Albany, Dec. 30.—Gov. and Mrs. Morton gave a dinner in the state dining hall at the executive mansion last night in honor of Gov.-elect and Mrs. Black, and also to give them an opportunity to meet the state officers and their wives. The others present were Secretary of State and Mrs. Palmer, Comptroller Roberts and Mrs. Roberts, State Treasurer Colvin and Mrs. Colvin, State Engineer Adams and Mrs. Adams, Lieut.-Gov.-elect Woodruff and Mrs. Woodruff, Attorney-General Hancock, Miss Morton, Miss Lena Morton and Col. Selden E. Marvin, jr. Mrs. Hancock and Lieut.-Gov. Saxton sent regrets.

Pardoned by Gov. Morton.

Auburn, N. Y., Dec. 30.—Several convicts in Auburn prison have received happy New Year remembrances from Gov. Morton in the shape of pardons and commutations. Another installment arrived last evening, comprising one pardon and three commutations for long-term men. A pardon was received by Henry E. B. Pardee, an Ontario county forger, who entered prison in June, 1894, under a sentence of six years. He was discharged at once. The terms of the prisoners who received commutations will not expire for some time yet.

Hon. John Bigelow in a Sleighing Accident

Highland Falls, N. Y., Dec. 30.—Hon. John Bigelow and his two daughters narrowly escaped serious injury while sleigh riding last evening. While proceeding along the road near this place, the horses which Mr. Bigelow was driving became frightened at a number of children coasting and ran away. The sleigh was soon overturned, and all were thrown down an embankment, but fortunately all escaped serious injury. The sleigh was smashed to pieces before the horses were caught.

Big Mercantile Failure.

Hollidaysburg, Pa., Dec. 30.—Pheasant & Wagner, proprietors of large mercantile establishments at Hollidaysburg and Kipple, this county, have failed. The firm's embarrassment is due to the recent suspension of a banking house in which they were heavy depositors.

BULGARIA EXCITED

Mme. Stambuloff's Charges Cause a Sensation.

GOVERNMENT OFFICERS MURDERERS

The Bereived Woman Not Likely To Be Again Permitted To Attend the Trial of the Alleged Assassins of Her Husband.

London, Dec. 30.—Dispatches from Sofia say that the entire country is convulsed with excitement over the sensational denunciation of the members of the present government as the real murders of ex-Premier Stambuloff of Bulgaria made by his widow before the tribunal trying the assisins of the late statesman. The Bulgarian newspapers contain long comments on Mme. Stambuloff's denunciation, and the organ of the government asserts that Stambuloff was either deranged or that he sought death in the streets because of his many misdeeds. Mme. Stambuloff had been repeatedly urged to be present at the trial, but it is believed that a second appearance would be very unwelcome to the government. As soon as the widow entered the court room she addressed the judges. In impassioned language she declared that the "miserable wretches" on trial were not the assassins of her husband. She said that the president of the tribunal knew who were the real murderers. "They are [the men] who now form the government of Bulgaria," she said impressively. All the people in the court room were amazed at her denunciation of high officials, and none of the judges asked her a question. After her statement Mme. Stambuloff immediately left the room. She was dressed entirely in black and wore a long veil, which concealed her face.

Paying for the Battleship Iowa.

Washington, Dec. 30.—The navy department has made the twenty-fourth payment of $90,300 to the Cramps on the battleship Iowa. Altogether thirty payments are to be made on the vessel, of which the final three are reserved until after her acceptance by the navy department. She will, therefore, be turned over to the government when the twenty-seventh payment is made. The twenty-fifth instalment will be due about the middle of next month.

Cadets at the Inaugural Ceremonies.

Washington, Dec. 30.—Secretary of War Lamont has ordered the corps of cadets of the United States military academy at West Point to proceed to Washington at the proper time to participate in the inaugural ceremonies of the president-elect. It is also understood that Secretary Herbert will order the cadets of the naval academy to Washington at the same time. The two corps will probably be quartered in the state, war and navy buildings.

New Jersey Convicts Pardoned.

Trenton, Dec. 30.—The board of pardons has just set several inmates of the state prison free, but they were cases of men serving very short terms for ordinary crimes. The only exception was James Rowe, who got a three-year term last April in Passaic county, for swindling members of the Improved Order of Red Men. There were mitigating circumstances and the board gave him his freedom also.

Death of Herr Waldemar Nissen.

Hamburg, Dec. 30.—Herr Waldemar Nissen, president of the Hamburg-American Steamship company and a prominent merchant of this city and well known throughout the country, died here last evening from a complication of diseases. He was 68 years old and was a member of one of Germany's patrician families.

Gov. Morton's Portrait at Albany.

Albany, Dec. 30.—Gov. Morton has had added to the gallery of governors in the executive chamber an excellent three-quarter length, front view, oil portrait of himself, painted by Artist Hughes of this city. It hangs over the fire place.

Excise Special Agent Resigns.

ADIEU TO MR. GILBERT.

spread out before them. There were some people now in their dotage who had an idea that the country was not as good as it was when they were in their prime. Time and age had given them a warped view, and as a matter of fact there was never a time when the citizens possessed a clearer conception of their duties to the Government than at present, as, he argued, had been shown in the recent campaign It was the fault of some people that they lacked the spirit to progress, but this could not be charged to the vast majority. Mr. Fowler divided the existence of the nation into three great periods. First, the fight for National liberty and the right to rule; second, personal and political liberty; third, personal responsibility. The essential which makes our hope in a Nation, said the speaker, is the endeavor to make the home in which we live a little better than the one in which we were born. And so of city, State and Nation—the constant effort to uplift and make it better. The attitude of Plainfield's citizens in municipal affairs, he said, was an enobling example in that direction.

Richard V. Lindabury was assigned to respond to the toast of "Our State," and he did in a capable manner. Mr. Lindabury said that the election of such men as Gilbert and Fisk explains why Plainfield is considered to have partially solved the problem of municipal government. And yet we could never had enjoyed the excellent administration that has been our privilege in city affairs if after election the representative citizens had left their Mayor without active support. It was this participation in public business of men like those in attendance at the dinner who had made it possible for Plainfield to possess such a government, and the speaker's wish was that all the cities of New Jersey might be like Plainfield. Coming down to the State, Mr. Lindabury said that there was many improvements needed in the organic laws. Legal acts were too voluminous and too dense for a practical and economical government. Where a few years ago the statutes only covered one thousand pages they now filled four thousand and it was impossible for any officer, lawyer or citizen to understand them as they should be. In public life there was altogether too much extravagance with the finances on the part of office holders. These were evils, he said, that were injuring the fair name of New Jersey and if we retain our position as a State they must be remedied. We have an excellent foundation to work on as has been shown when the patriotism and good citizenship of the State had been appealed to and the people rallied to the ballot box and met the situation in an emphatic manner. He advised Plainfielders to act towards the State government with the same spirit as they do towards the city government, and then much good would be accomplished.

Mr. Lindabury was followed by Senator Foster Voorhees on "Our County." The Senator was in his best mood and in jest and practical thought gave such a talk as comes very acceptable after an indulgence in things that made up the menu. He remarked that he had always believed that "In Union there was strength," and especially so of Union county. But it seemed that he was mistaken, since there was so much talk of Plainfield taking leave. The rest of the county were going to insist, however, that she remain a part of Union for the rest of their life. It was the one of city in the county that was the most beautiful, most homelike and most progressive, far to progressive to lose. While the climate of the rest of the county was not of the best the salubrious atmosphere of the Eldorado of the East was far famed. Union is a county, he said, that always holds a welcome hand to all good people from other sections. The third county of the State, she has given more judges to the Supreme court and Chancellors than any other county in the State. Her citizens take pride in an economical administration of public affairs, and were one of the first to break away from the conditions that prevent progression, as was evidenced in the fact that Union county was the first to recognize the benefits of good roads in this section of the country and her liberality in this direction has served as an example for many others. It should be the endeavor of every one of her citizens to make the country posess such a fair name that when any one goes out to dwell elsewhere it will be their proud boast that they were born in Union county.

"Our City" gave Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh an opportunity to briefly and interestingly tell something of why the people take such an interest in municipal affairs. The people, he said, had been educated up to their present activity by a long line of citizens who had lent honor and credit to municipal affairs by personal participation in the affairs of government, and as time passed on this spirit seem to manifest itself to a still greater degree. And this active personal interest in the city has made it what it is. The machine political element has been eliminated from the administration and men of business standing and integrity fill its offices. Mr. Marsh closed in a glowing peroration of Mayor Gilbert's honesty and ability as the city chief executive for the past six years.

At this point William L. Saunders read the following poem composed by him for the occasion:

OUR GILBERT.

Way back in '66 he came,
The town was small and poor and tame,
And he a modest lad—his name,
A. Gilbert.

Our streets were rough, our lights were dim
The cops were cross and out of trim.
The firemen few and lacking vim,
O, Gilbert!

There was no town beneath the stars
So dry and slow as this of ours;
We longed for pipes and trolley cars,
And Gilbert.

He came—he reigned as Magistrate,
How things have changed out here of late:
Plainfield is now the pride of State,
With Gilbert.

His was the scythe that fell'd the six,
That ruled the town by arts and tricks;
He mowed in spite of politics,
This Gilbert.

With zealous care and earnest zeal
He labored for the commonweal:
And heeded every just appeal
To Gilbert.

Long may he flourish, live and rise!
Long may we honor, love and prize
This servant, faithful, tireless, wise,
Our Gilbert.

Though Wm. Brookfield, the eminent New York lawyer, who occupied a seat on the right of the guest of the evening, was not down for a toast, he was called on and made a few brief remarks. He has been a personal friend of Mayor Gilbert through all the latter's business career, and spoke eulogistically of him.

Then came the finale of the evening, the toast of "Ourselves," by S. St. John McCutchen, far-famed for his quiet, infectious humor. The guests knew him and gave him an enthusiastic welcome in applause. Mr. McCutchen did not disappoint, for laughter reigned throughout his toast. His remarks were not along any particular line of thought, but were a hit here and a hit there. To be appreciated they had to be heard. At the outset Mr. McCutchen read a few rhymes with a humorous touch anent several of the distinguished guests. He brought down the house when he referred to Mayor-elect Fisk as "Little Cute Cupid." But in all his jocularity there ran the vein of light flattery and his toast was a happy ending to the evening.

The following were the subscribers to the dinner:

A FEAST OF YULETIDE.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVITIES OF THE FRIENDS HELD LAST NIGHT.

Young People Made Especially Happy, and the Older Ones Entered Into the Spirit of the Occasion, Too—Programme.

The Christmas-tide festivities at the Friends' First-day school, held last evening, was a source of great pleasure to all, and all the good things attendant upon such an occasion was provided. In addition to the members of the school there were present many friends, who entered heartily into joyous event. The enthusiasm of the scholars knew no bounds and their young hearts were gladdened with a feast of good things.

A programme of excellence was given as follows:—Concert reading, "The Children's Offering," the school; recitations, "The First Christmas Tree," May Wiegman; "The First Christmas Tree in New England," Mamie Mehl; "Sing a Song of Santa Claus," Harvey Vail; "The Electric Santa Claus," Robbie Mattox; "The Christmas Doll," Anna Morrison; "Birdy's Christmas Breakfast," Arthur Kiederling; "Scaring Santa Claus," Harvey Morrison; "Our Visitor," Clifford Vail; "Keeping House in a Shoe," Bessie Pound; "Christmas Morning," Horace Vail; "Santa's Cake," Edith Mattox; "Old Santa Claus," Ethel Lorton; reading, "Polly Anderson's Holiday," Mabel Vail; concert reading, "The New Year," the school. A recitation was also given by Percy Ross. During an intermission in the programme, Aaron M. Powell gave the scholars an interesting short talk.

The superintendent, Miss Margaret Vail, made a few remarks and then invited the members of the school to the upper room, where they were served with ice cream and cakes in abundance. Afterward they returned to the meeting room and received gifts of candy and oranges. The refreshment committee consisted of Mrs. Clara S. Rushmore, Mrs. Keturah S. Palmer and Mrs. M. Jennie Pound.

A BOWLING TOURNAMENT.

Plainfield Catholic Club to Enter the Diocesan Contests.

Interest in bowling among the members of the Plainfield Catholic Club has been slumbering of late, but now it has awakened at the prospect of some exciting games. The Diocesan Union, in which the team from the club bowled last year, will start again this winter. A meeting was held at Elizabeth on last Monday night and the Plainfield club was represented by two delegates, Patrick Revelle and Richard Burmingham. The league will probably consist of six teams, of five men each. Besides the club from this city those that will probably enter are the Elizabeth Y. M. C. L. A., the Orange Valley Y. M. C. L., two teams from Newark and one from Orange, the Y. M. C. L. of that city. All the clubs, but the latter, are in favor of the five-men teams, the Orange club want ten men on the team and have been holding out on that account, but it is likely that at the next meeting of the union, on Monday night, they will consent to the will of the majority. The games will begin as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made, which will be about the middle of January.

There is also to be a pool tournament, which will be contested by the same clubs. There will be one representative from each club and Plainfield will probably be represented by John Daly.

HAPPINESS WAS THERE.

CHRISTMAS TREE ENJOYED AT THE CHILDREN'S HOME.

The Family of Little Homeless Ones Spent an Hour in the Fairy Land With Old Santa Claus Yesterday Afternoon.

It would have made one's heart glad to have been present at the Children's Home yesterday afternoon to witness the little tots enter into the festivities of their Christmas celebration.

It was 4 o'clock when the tree, brimful of good things, was lighted. At the same time the little children formed in line and marched into the large room, where everything so bright made them dance with delight. As they marched around the tree they sang a familiar carol.

Then they formed about the tree and received the numerous gifts provided. Some were given dolls and pretty picture books while others were remembered with toys of all kinds. Frequently exclamations of joy would be heard. One bright tittle tot was given a large picture book, and she exclaimed in her sweet childish way, "Ain't that sweet," and so it was with each one, for they all evinced a strong affectionate feeling for each other and were glad to share the mutual enjoyment of the affair. It was fully an hour before the tree had thrown aside its brilliancy, and during that time there was joy.

Those who managed the affair with Mrs. Hendrickson, the matron, were Mrs. Kimball, Mrs. Cahoone, Miss Serrell, Miss May Serrell, and Miss Ella Serrell.

Their were a number of guests present who shared the pleasure of the children and their kind words left a lasting impression.

In addition to the above gifts, candy and oranges were given to each of the twenty-three children in the home.

To any one who witnessed the celebration, it can safely be said, that they have never regretted all that has been done for the Children's home, and too much cannot be said in praise of the management.

CYCLERS DOWN THE DRUMMERS.

A Hot Bowling Match on the Ulrich Alleys Last Night.

The Cleveland Cyclers and a team from the Independent Fife and Drum Corps bowled a match game on the Ulrich alleys, last evening, and the Clevelands won by a score of 1333 to 1165. During the contest the room was well filled with spectators. The following are the individual scores:

CLEVELANDS.		FIFE AND DRUM CORPS.

Biddle	150	Terry	117
Babcock	114	Adams, H.	98

Sowden	114	Squires	133
Kiely	147	Adams, H. G.	91
	1333		1165

Be it said to their credit that Blatz rolled the highest score for the Fife and Drum Corps, 147, and Wilson with 59 for the Clevelands.

The American Queen.

The American Queen and the year 1897 come in arm in arm, and American women are to be congratulated upon the addition of so attractive a magazine to the list of publications devoted to their interests. The first issue of The American Queen, that for January, is a home journal in the truest sense of the term, covering in its twenty handsomely illustrated pages the best and dearest phases of a woman's life. Each department is a pocket magazine in itself, the whole being supplemented by a charming love story "The Grand Duchess." Beautiful pictures of the five new ladies of the White House, etc. The American Queen is published by Edward White, Plainfield, N. J.

A Dance at White House.

The second annual ball of the Independent Order of Foresters, of White House, was held last evening, and S D. Frazee, of this city, furnished the music. The attendance was unusually large and the dancing was continued until the wee-small hours this morning. A bountiful supper was served at midnight. Many guests were present from High Bridge, Neshanic, Glen Gardner, Newark, Somerville and other places. The Misses Cora Conover and Stella Haver, of Round Valley, were among the most prominent entertainers.

Plainfield Workmen in Demand.

A. D. Phillips, Plainfield's well-known electrician, is completing a system of electric lighting, together with electric bells, etc., in a handsome residence at Pennington. The order for the work was taken by a Plainfield competitor, and for some reason he failed to go on with it. Mr. Phillips was then selected by the owner of the house to complete the work, which he is doing in a thoroughly satisfactory manner.

EXEMPTS ARE AROUSED

OLD FIREMEN TO MAKE A PLEA TO THE LEGISLATURE.

To Vigorously Oppose the Movement to Remove the $500 Tax Exemption Which They Now Enjoy—Corporation Influence.

A largely attended meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association was held in their rooms in the Coward building last night, when the proposition made in some quarters that the tax exemption conceded to firemen who have served seven years in a department be abolished by Legislative act, was taken up and vigorously discussed. The unanimous sentiment was that this proposition was an injustice that almost borded into an outrage on exempt firemen who have hazarded life and undergone many inconveniences in the performance of fire duty, the only compensation being the exemption from $500 taxes and jury duty. The proposition is said to eminate from Frank Bergen of Elizabeth, and will be pushed at the approaching session of the Legislature by several members who have been interested in the movement. But it will be met with an energetic opposition coming from exempt firemen all over the State. Newark and Patterson exempts have already taken the initiative in the movement against it. Plainfield is bound to figure prominently in the matter because the work of opposing the adoption of any such law will be invested in the Legislative committee of the State Exempt Firemen's Association, of which Daniel W. Littell, of this city, is the chairman. Mr. Littell told a Press reporter this morning that the reason of Mr. Bergen's interest and activity in pushing the scheme was easily explained. There is a manifest desire in some quarters to compel corporations to pay a larger share of taxes since public expenses were on the increase, and Bergen, an extensive corporation lawyer, was seeking to provide a method whereby tax receipts might be increased and the idea established that it was not necessary to assess corporations any more than now.

To compel all firemen who are exempt and own property in the State to pay taxes on this present exemption would increase tax receipts very materially.

But it is the firm intention of the firemen to oppose the act in the Legislature with all the vigor and resources that they can call to hand.

A pretty marriage took place at 615 West Third street, last evening at 9:30 o'clock, when Miss Laura Anderson, of this city, and George Carter, of Fluvannia, Va., where made as one. An informal reception followed the ceremony, after which the bride and groom left on a late train to spend their honeymoon and begin the new year in Boston. The young hostess received several appropriate gifts from her friends in commemoration of the event.

Constable Robert Mattox has gone to Easton and Bloomsbury, today, to look after and, if possible, catch a man who skipped away "by the light of the moon" from an instalment agency, here, a few days ago.

RITES OF LIFE'S ENDING.

AN IMPRESSIVE SERVICE AT MRS. D. C. HORTON'S FUNERAL.

Dr. Honeyman, a Long Time Friend of the Departed, Spoke Words of Praise of Her Life and Drew Consoling Conclusions.

The funeral services of Mrs. Dency C. Horton, widow of the late Stephen O. Horton, were held from the house, 55 Somerset street, yesterday afternoon at 2:30. Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, of the Crescent avenue church, read appropriate Scripture selections and offered prayer. Remarks were then made by Rev. W. E. Honeyman, who was a neighbor of the departed for thirteen years. Mr. Honeyman advanced several helpful thoughts. In the first place he spoke regarding the domesticity of Mrs. Horton and what a faithful, prudent wife she had been. She had no desire for the frivolities of the world.

Secondly, he spoke of her kindness of heart in the performance of many deeds. As an illustration, he cited the first funeral mentioned in the Bible, when Abram buried his wife Sarah, and showed what comfort Abram derived from the fact that he believed God's promises.

In comparison he said that the promises of God was just as sure today as in the early ages.

An important thought brought out was that there is no such thing as mishap, but that everything is ordered and God governs all. It is not in wrath but mercy He afflicts. In closing the speaker gave words of encouragement to the living and urged them to accept Christ now and not wait until it was too late.

A closing prayer was then offered by Dr. Richards, after which those present viewed the form of the departed for the last time. Interment was in North Plainfield cemetery.

Those who served as pallbearers were H. N. Spencer, Alexander Thorn Stephen Staats, and David Pope.

IN HONOR OF SCHOOL FRIENDS.

Miss Nora L. Rockwell Entertained a Party of Young Society People.

Miss Nora L. Rockwell, of East Front street, who is home from boarding school spending the holiday season, gave a charming dance last evening in honor of a few school friends who were guests at her home. Among those present were: Miss Chackwin, Miss Morris, Miss Griswold, of Ossining, N. Y., Miss Hoffman, Sing Sing, Miss Georgi, Jamestown, N. Y.; Miss Heinish, Newark; Lieutenant Heinish and Mr. Buckley, Mt. Pleasant Military School; Mr. McDonald, Riverview-on-the-Hudson; George Watson, New York; Mr. Hoffman, Somerville; Miss Bessie Cornwell, Miss Alice Haines, Miss Mabelle Smith, Miss Laura Lovell, Miss Grace Bonney, Miss Grace Kampman, Miss Grace Miller, Miss Cordelia Miller, Miss Pauline Sandford, Mr. McClure, Thomas Smith, George Cornwell, Albert Runyon, Maxwell Honeyman, H. C. Van Emburgh, Charles Squires, Howard Miller, Van R. Schuyler, Erwin Cooley, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Sandford. The music for dancing was furnished by Rogers.

COUNCILOR, MRS. RADIN.

Martha Washington Council, D. of A., Elect Officers for the Term.

At the regular meeting of Martha Washington Council, No. 23, Daughters of America, the only confined auxiliary to the Jr. O. U. A. HOPE OF BEAUTY GONE.

JUSTICE NASH TO PUT A BILL BOARD IN THE RESIDENTIAL ELYSIUM.

And Two Little One Story Stores Will Also Find a Place in the Fashionable Section—The Residents Thereof are Indignant

The fashionable people who live in that residential elysium of Plainfield of which the section of Park avenue, Seventh and Eighth streets and Crescent avenues is a part, have been hoping against hope that Justice Vincent W. Nash would not take the action that he proposed doing on the little triangular piece of ground which he recently purchased of John Delaney, situated between the Revere house and All Souls church; but yesterday they witnessed the act that doomed all their hopes to disappointment. It was the arrival of a half dozen workingmen equipped with picks and shovels and the commencement of the work of excavating for the two one story stores and the ten-foot-high bill board which the justice said he was going to build on the property. The facts leading up to this action were told exclusively in The Daily Press a few days ago.

The publication of the story caused a tremor of indignation to run through the people who live in that immediate vicinity and by the fact of All Souls church adjoining Mr. Nash's recently acquired possession, the feeling of exasperation permeated the whole city through the members of the congregation who worship there.

Plainfielders are noted for their pride in keeping the residential appearance of the city in consonance with the general prosperity that characterizes its citizens, and with the prospect of two squatty stores and a bill board ten feet high, to be covered with multi-colored lithographs of frowsy soubrettes, aspiring tragedians and melo-dramatic scenes, planted in their very midst, thier rage can better be imagined than explained. There was talk and talk, and if there is any truth about one's ears burning when hard things are said, Justice Nash's ears must have been red hot for the last few days.

But it was to no avail, the justice said that he bought the property for investment and profit and the best way to get a return was to put something there that would do this. Of course, it was out of the question to build a house only eleven feet deep, the size of the lot, and it was impracticable to grow agricultual products their with such weather as winter brings. Then Mr. Nash's business instinct impelled him to build the stores and bill boards. And that is just what he is doing. And their is great wailing and gnashing of teeth of all the inhabitants of the elysium.

Some of the church people visited Mr. Nash and sought to have him change his mind, because the stores and bill board would cast an awful reproach on the beauty of the church edifice, and besides in the early morn it would prevent sunbeams from straggling in through the stained glass and casting its pale, but beautiful, glow on the interior of the church Mr. Nash was not moved by this sentiment, however. George B. De Revere, the landlord of the Revere House, is also much concerned about the new structures, but he has settled down to taking solace in the axiom that "what can't be cured must be endured." And all he can do is to hope for the best.

Meanwhile Mr. Nash's workmen are cutting down the three apple trees that graced the triangular lot and the work of building the stores and bill board goes on.

Bethel Chapel Festival.

The members and friends of Bethel Chapel and the Sunday-school met in the chapel last evening and participated in their annual Christmas festival. Contrary to the general rule here was no set programme and those present had a much better time. The chief feature was sociability and at intervals Albert Hankerson and his orchestra discoursed appropriate music Later in the evening ice cream and cake was served in abundance to all after which a box of candy was given to each one. Those who had charge of the festivities were Superintendent S. A. Ginna, assistant superintendent A. W. Duxbury, and Daniel F. Ginna. Each scholar received a suitable gift in addition to the above.

Let Him Fall in the Street.

A son-in-law of George Demler, of Washingtonvile, drove a party of friends to the North Avenue station at 7:30 o'clock this morning, and on the way home, while passing through Park avenue near Front street, the king bolt on his wagon broke, allowing the body to fall to the roadbed. The driver was thrown into the roadway, but he escaped with a few slight bruises.

COMMUTER RAN AMUCK.

TRIED TO TRAVEL WITH PACKAGES ON THE JERSEY CENTRAL.

Railroad Detectives Insisted That He Was Trying to Help Out a Package Expressman—Wouldn't Let Him Ride.

In the endeavor to suppress the package expressmen between the towns along the line of the Jersey Central railroad and New York, the railroad corporation is having a hot time in encounters with commuters who are in sympathy with the expressmen. Especially pugnacious have been the commuters from Elizabeth in their intention to outwit the railroad detectives in trying to stop the local messengers, and every day this week there has been a lively time in the Jersey City depot between the two forces. Monday night the commuters won by sheer force of numbers, and enjoyed a laugh on the railroad people; Tuesday night they tried the same trick again but were met by a detail of police and one of their number arrested, and then the railroad officials smiled grimly. Last night the example of the night before had had a salutary effect and only one defiant commuter tried to run the gauntlet, and he met with an effectual the squelching. This man was E. Runyon, of Elizabeth, and though he gave the detectives, all of whom live in Plainfield, a good deal of trouble, they finally compelled him to desist in his purpose.

On the boat that left New York at 4.45 was Mr. Runyon and Joseph Sheppard, fifteen years old, of Elizabeth, a messenger said to be employed by Mr. Stoddard, of Stoddard's New York and Elizabeth Express. Mr. Runyon told newspaper men that he stopped in Stoddard's office in Cortlandt street, and engaged a messenger to carry his parcels. When Mr. Runyon entered the ferry station in Jersey City he was carrying a handsatchel and two packages. A big crowd of commuters were in the train shed expecting fun. The passengers who preceded Runyon went through the aisle of policemen to their train. But when Mr. Runyon was within a few feet of the gate, Railroad Detectives Large, Ritterbusch and Blackford, who all reside in this city, got in his way and refused to move. They told Mr. Runyon they had orders not to let him through. Mr. Runyon protested that he was a private citizen and wanted to take the train for his home. He tried to dodge by the three detectives, but failed.

After two or three minutes of argument Mr. Runyon turned and went through the waiting room to the restaurant. The boy Sheppard and the detectives followed.

Mr. Runyon, while he ate, said: "I am a florist and live in Elizabeth. I thought I had a right to employ a boy to carry packages. I have a ticket for Elizabeth. I am not a commuter, and, therefore, not bound by commuter's condition. These are my parcels. I have a ticket without conditions as to parcels. What right had they to stop me?"

The railroad detectives said they believed Runyon did not own the parcels; that he took them from the boy to carry through the depot so as to aid the messenger and Mr. Stoddard.

When Mr. Runyon finished his steak, he started for the ferry slip. Detectives followed. At the Communipaw station Mr. Runyon bought a ticket for Newark. A local train started at 5:45. Mr. Runyon picked up his parcels. Large, Ritterbusch and Blackford got between him and the track. Mr. Runyon made a most determined effort to board the train He landed on the car steps and had his foot nearly on the platform, when Large got hold of the tail of his overcoat and yanked him off. When the railroad employes comprehended the situation the train went on.

Runyon then checked his satchel for Newark, and leaving it at the depot, took his departure, and later boarded a Pennsylvania train from Jersey City.

Whitfield Frazee, of this city, does one of the largest package-express businesses along the line of the road, but somehow or other he has evaded any direct trouble with the railroad people as yet, and is carrying packages, though not in the same old manner of openly boarding trains with a pack on his back.

—C. V. D. Corle, proprietor of the Metropolitan boarding stables, A. D. Thompson's old stand, 138 East Second street, wishes to inform the public generally that he has a large and commodious stable with plenty of stall room for transient boarders. He can give good accommodations for horses or teams coming to Plainfield for a few hours only, and that his prices are very reasonable.

—A watch-night service will be held at the Salvation Army tonight commencing at 10:30.

DEATH OF MGR. FABRE

Head of the Montreal Catholic Arch-Diocese Passes Away.

CLOSE OF A MOST BRILLIANT CAREER

He Stood Out at Many Critical Periods in Canada's History for Its Best Interests — Devoted Champion of Temperance.

Montreal, Dec. 31. — Archbishop Fabre, the head of the Roman Catholic arch-diocese of Montreal, died shortly after 11 o'clock last night from cancer of the liver. He was 69 years old.

The late Edouard Charles Fabre was the third bishop of the former diocese of Montreal and first archbishop of the present archdiocese of Montreal and metropolitan of the province of Montreal, comprising with this diocese those of St. Hyacinthe, Sherbrooke and Valley Field. As the Catholic population of the archdiocese exceeds 400,000 it is one of the most populous in North America. The late archbishop was in his 70th year, having been born in Montreal, Feb. 28, 1827. After a classical course extending over some seven years his parents sent him to Paris in 1843, where he spent some eighteen months. On Sept. 7, 1844, he assumed the cassock at Chatenay, and on October 18 he entered the Sulpician seminary at Issy. In 1846 the young ecclesiastic visited Rome and had the honor of an audience with Gregory XVI.—In after life he had the same honor conferred on him on several occasions by Popes Pius IX. and Leo XIII. Shortly after he returned to Montreal and became attached to the bishop's palace. He was ordained to priesthood in 1850 and for nearly twenty years was one of the prominent priests in the diocese. In 1876 he became bishop of Montreal. In 1886 at the time of the elevation of Mgr. Taschereau to the rank of cardinal Mgr. Fabre was made archbishop and placed at the head of the ecclesiastical province of Montreal. At many critical periods in the city's history he stood out for its best interests, notably at the time of the Northwest rebellion and in the small-pox epidemic. Temperance had a devoted champion in him, and he never turned his back on an undertaking which could advance its interests.

DEADLY DYNAMITE

Mother and Daughter Killed at Their Home in Tuckerton, Pa.

THE HOUSE CONSUMED BY FIRE

The Husband and Father, ex-Sheriff Becker, Had Placed Dynamite in the Kitchen Stove Oven To Thaw—Mysterious Explosion at Great Barrington.

Reading, Pa., Dec. 31.—Mrs. Becker, wife of ex-sheriff Elias Becker, aged 54, and Mrs. William Seidel, her daughter, aged 30, were killed by an explosion of dynamite at Tuckerton, near this city, last evening. Mr. Becker had placed a quantity of the explosive in the oven of the kitchen stove for the purpose of thawing it out. Shortly after doing so he went out. He had not been gone more than five minutes when there was a terrific crash, and he hurried back to the house. He was horrified to find the mangled remains of his wife lying on the floor. His daughter, Mrs. Seidel, was not killed outright, but her body was so badly shattered that she died twenty minutes later. The dwelling, a handsome stone structure, caught fire and was consumed by the flames despite the gallant work of the neighbors. Mr. Becker is completely prostrated by the terrible affair. Another dynamite explosion of a somewhat similar character also occurred here yesterday, but with less fatal results. Willie Gantz, aged 12, picked up three small dynamite caps at one of the industrial establishments in this city. These he took home and spent a portion of the afternoon in throwing small quantities of the dynamite into the open stove. In some manner he accidentally dropped one of the caps into the coal bucket. Later his mother, Mrs. John Gantz, put some coal on the fire as she was about preparing the evening meal. Suddenly there was an explosion, and two of her fingers and a thumb were blown off. Her right eye was also badly injured, and she may lose the sight of it. Bertha, aged 9, and Earl, aged 3, children who were standing near by, were severely burned about the face and arms, but their injuries are not serious.

Explosion in a Police Chief's Home.

Great Barrington, Mass., Dec. 31.—An explosion occurred at the home of Chief of Police Pilon yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Pilon was in the front part of the house when a loud explosion was heard in the kitchen, and an investigation showed that the range had been blown to pieces. Pots and kettles were scattered about the room, and one of the stove lids was blown through the ceiling. In the fire box was found a short piece of pipe, with a thread on each end, and it is surmised that some person, who had a grievance against the chief or his family, was seeking revenge.

CONNECTICUT BANKS.

Greater Number of Depositors and a Larger Amount to Their Credit.

Hartford, Dec. 31.—The annual report of the bank commissioners of Connecticut to Gov. Coffin says that the savings institutions have been severely tested in point of strength and security during the year 1896. The volume of business transacted during the year has shown a satisfactory increase. There are a greater number of depositors as well as a larger aggregate amount to their credit. The increase in deposits is not confined to banks in the cities and larger towns. The condition of all the savings institutions with the exception of a few is prosperous and satisfactory.

Owes $1,000,000; Assets 5 Per Cent.

Mount Vernon, N. Y., Dec. 31.—Arthur H. Darling, aged 35, one of the largest builders in this city, disappeared from his home here on December 21, and nothing has been heard of him since that date. He had many contracts under way in Westchester, Wakefield and this city and it is said his liabilities on these will reach $1,000,000, while his assets will not average 5 per cent. of that amount. He is unmarried and came here from Boston about a year ago.

Counterfeiter Arrested at His Work.

New York, Dec. 31.—Anton Schuck was arrested at No. 205 North Fourth street, Brooklyn, yesterday, by secret service agents on the charge of making and passing counterfeit five and ten cent pieces. He was found at work moulding some of the coin, and a counterfeiting plant was seized in his room. The officers say that the coins are not especially well made and believe Schuck to be a novice in the business.

Accused of Infringement of Patent.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 31.—The Newark and South Orange Railway companies have been cited to appear in the United States district court at Trenton to defend a suit brought by the Thomson-Houston company of Philadelphia for infringement of patent. These roads have, it is claimed, been using the Westinghouse electrical apparatus without legal authority.

OMAHA TO ST. LOUIS.

Four Hundred Mile Tramp of a Bride of Three Months.

A bride of three months, and deserted.

Such is the story of Mary Malcott, a tall, handsome young woman of 19 years, who had come to one of the private charities for women, in St. Louis to secure the counsel and material aid of which she was in great need.

Her mother was with her, a stout honest-faced woman, little past middle age. Both were plainly dressed, and both were undeniably respectable.

It was a story of the unreasoning infatuation for the young and impetuous George Malcott had but little money it was true, and his parents, who lived in Clinton, Ia., opposed his marriage because he was too poor, and both were too young. Nevertheless, they wed, as young people are in the habit of doing, and they went to Omaha, where he believed a paying situation awaited him. Remunerative situations don't wait long in these days, and when the newly-mated pair arrived in Omaha they found the expected "place" gone. The small sum of money dwindled away, and after Mary's July dream of bliss came an October awakening of disillusion. Early that month she found the last cent was gone, and with it her bridegroom. She believed that he had arrived at the same conclusion as his parents, that he was too young to marry, and had returned to the bosom of his elder family. Through the police authorities of Omaha she made inquiries as to his whereabouts, and discovered that he had indeed returned to his father's home. Too proud to ask the aid she believed would be denied, she set out to return to her mother, who lived in St. Louis. There was but one means of returning, and that was to walk, and this the brave girl did.

THERE WAS BUT ONE MEANS OF RETURNING.

Charitable ladies, says the St. Louis Republic, provided her and her mother with the means of going to Moberly, where Mary has secured work.

Mrs. Beecher Better.

Stamford, Conn., Dec. 31.—Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher is this morning reported more comfortable, and it is believed there is now a fair hope of her recovery.

WILD SCENE IN A COURT ROOM.

A St. Louis Man Wounds His Wife, Her Uncle and Tries To Shoot Himself.

St. Louis, Dec. 31.—During the progress of his wife's suit for divorce in the circuit court yesterday Jacob Fischel attempted to kill his wife, her uncle Julius Schrieber and himself. Mrs. Fischel was in court attended by a number of friends, and by her attorney, Walter McEntire. During the proceedings Fischel arose with a motion to have Judge Wood set aside a decree for alimony. While he was talking Attorney McEntire motioned Mrs. Fischel to leave the court room with him. They started out, followed by Julius Schreiber, and had just reached the door when Fischel drew a revolver and began shooting. One bullet passed through Attorney McEntire's overcoat and struck Mrs. Fischel in the back of the left shoulder. Her uncle ran to her assistance, and as he was bending over the prostrate woman Fischel fired a bullet into Schreiber's breast. He turned the weapon on himself, but Attorney McEntire struck his arm and the bullet lodged in the floor. The wildest confusion reigned in the crowded court room. Spectators rushed screaming from their seats, lawyers jumped behind the benches, and Judge Wood ran from the bench and sought safety behind a cabinet. The doors were barred before Fischel could escape, and he was finally taken to the police station by a squad of policemen. Dr. William F. Kier attended Mrs. Fischel and Mr. Schreiber, and says their wounds, although serious, are not necessarily fatal.

ZUKER BACK IN THE TOMBS.

The New York Fire Bug Taken from Sing Sing on a Writ of Habeas Corpus.

New York, Dec. 31.—Isaac Zuker, the convicted fire bug was brought to the supreme court from Sing Sing yesterday on a writ of habeas corpus obtained from Justice Pryor for his production, it being held that his confinement there was without a warrant of law in face of the stay granted by Justice Pryor pending an argument for a certificate of reasonable doubt. His wife and daughter were in the corridor when he came into the court room, but were excluded. Lawyer House stated in court that it was necessary to have the prisoner remanded back to the Tombs under the stay. The argument on the order to show cause why the deputy sheriff should not be punished for contempt of court in not notifying the warden of the stay and for violation of the stay would be heard later, Mr. House said. Justice Pryor remanded Zuker back to the Tombs. Lawyer House said the proceedings against the deputy who took Zuker to Sing Sing would be pushed. The sheriff, however, was in no way liable, he said, the fault being with the deputy.

Miners Denounce Ohio State Officials.

Columbus, O., Dec. 31.—The state miners' convention has adopted resolutions severely denouncing state officials for purchasing coal for the state institutions from mines in which scab miners are employed. THE FRANKLIN FUND

Originally $1,000, It Has Now Swelled To $360,000.

LEFT FOR NEEDY BOSTON MECHANICS

Efforts Now Being Made To Have It Expended in the Erection of a Trades School at the Hub.

Boston, Dec. 31.—The appointment of trustees to administer the Franklin fund was considered in the Suffolk probate court yesterday by Judge Grant. When Benjamin Franklin died, in 1790, he gave by his will to the inhabitants of Boston $1,000 sterling to be loaned out in small amounts to needy apprentices of the town at an annual interets of 5 per cent. This plan was to be pursued for a period of 100 years from the time of his death, when the fund, with its accumulations, should be applied to specified public objects. The management of this fund was directed by his will to be under the selectmen "united with the ministers of the oldest Episcopal, Congregational and Presbyterian churches of Boston." The fund today amounts to $360,000, and the board of aldermen would like to appropriate it to the erection of a trades school. The case before the court yesterday was the petition of Mayor Quincy and the aldermen for the appointment of themselves and Revs. Stopford W. Brooke, Duane and McClellan, as the ministers of the three oldest churches enumerated in the will, as trustees to administer the fund. Ever since 1822, when Boston became a city, there have been no selectmen, and it is a question whether or not, since that year, there has been any trustee for the fund at all. The case was continued until Monday.

Arranging To Have a Series of Races on the American Thames Next June.

New London, Conn., Dec. 31.—A movement for a Henley-like series of races on the American Thames is assuming definite shape, although the first move is not for a week of racing. The board of trade of New London is sending circulars to more than 400 colleges and athletic clubs announcing the "Thames Regatta" at New London in June, 1897. The circular says: "As to the Thames course, the press of the country is unanimous in joining in its praise as the only proper and desirable course that college crews should select, either for a triple contest or a national regatta of college oarsmen." The circular is signed by ex-Gov. Waller, A. H. Chappel, president of the board of trade; C. B. Jennings, superintendent of schools, and others.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

Fair Tonight; Increasing Cloudiness and Probably Threatening Friday; Slightly Colder Tonight.

A VERY GOOD YEAR.

Tonight ends one of the most eventful years of American history in every department of life and energy. It has been one filled with surprises in the political, scientific and business world, but surprises, happily in most cases, that are of benefit to mankind and at any rate far overpowering the disastrous phases in the total consideration. Pessimists there may be, but the world, taking at an average, is better in every way th n it was a twelve month ago. A happy New Year it should be to all humanity who lay claim to the home of the free and the brave.

A SLIPSHOD WAY.

Quoting the editorial that appeared in The Daily Press Tuesday evening in which it was commented that Councilman Fisk's action in expending money from his own pocket for street improvement, was not good government, the New York Tribune adds this morning:

That is a slipshod way of doing business and Plainfield cannot afford to have anything of the kind occur again. The "Colorado of the East" has a reputation abroad as a well-governed city that it must live up to.

JEALOUS NEW BRUNSWICK.

The New Brunswick Times refers to Plainfield as a surburb of Dunellen and Scotch Plains, and then confidentally admits that it "is really a very nice place." How jealous New Brunswick is.

The Daily Press will not be published tomorrow.

Electric Bitters

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

Sport for the Ruralites.

Martinsville, that usually quiet little hamlet nestling between the first and second mountain, is to be aroused from its state of lethargy on New Year's Day, and the natives and others will turn out and shoot for a 1,200-pound live bull. Only 12-guage, breech-loading guns will be allowed, and the winner will have to get the prize home the best way he can.

"You're light enough when I tackle you," said the little can of Cleveland's baking powder to the big barrel of flour.

Cleveland's is the strongest of all pure cream of tartar baking powders, yet its great merit is not its strength, but the fact that it is pure, wholesome and sure.

THEATRICAL.

The Thropp and Stemer Company will present this refined and jolly comedy. "The Other Girl," at Stillman's Music Hall, New Year's, matinee and night. Of the different members of the cast the Westchester county Reporter has the following good words for the play:

A perfectly clean and wholesome com dy in these days of problem plays and entertainments whose chief attractions are their suggestiveness, is as refreshing to the mind as is a dip in the surf, in August, to the body.

Of such clean character was the sprightly comedy "The Other Girl," presented Wednesday evening at the Auditorium. The lines bristle with witty dialogue and the business with funny situations from the beginning to the end, caused by the complications arising from the chance meeting of a young boarding school girl with a dashing young fellow with whom she immediately falls in love.

The claim is made for Lincoln J. Carter's new scenic play, "The Tornado," that its realisms are of such an imposing nature that even the pictorial matter used in advertising the play do not do the piece justice, that the scenes depicted by the posters are actually so much more impressive when seen, as Mr. Carter presents them in his play, that one must acknowledge for once the printers ink has not overdone things. This, of course, is a novelty in theatrical advertising. But we promised that there should be nothing but novelties in "The Tornado," and Mr. Carter has shown in the past that he knows how to build astonishing things for the stage, so we will wait and see his new play at Music Hall, Monday evening, January 4th, before we comment further.

Stands at the Head.

Aug. J. Bogel, the leading druggist of Shreveport, La., says: "Dr. King's New Discovery is the only thing that cures my cough, and it is the best seller I have." J. F. Campbell, merchant of Safford, Ariz., writes: "Dr. King's New Discovery is all that is claimed for it; it never fails, and is a sure cure for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I cannot say enough for its merits.' Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds is not an experiment. It has been tried for a quarter of a century, and to-day stands at the head. It never disappoints. Free trial bottles at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

Manager Mills, of the United States Express company, says that a peculiar feature regarding this year's holiday business, was that the rush covered a period of about four days. Heretofore it continued for several weeks. Mr. Mills thinks that the 1896 business in this city will exceed previous years.

A salesman residing in this city when on his travels finds congenial warmth at the side of the stove in the store of VanSickle & Apgar at High Bridge. This stove is distinguished above its fellows for the reason that it has served Uncle Sam in a similar capacity during the late Civil War. As the property of Uncle Sam it did service in the office of U. S. Provost Marshal W. G. Shipman at Elizabeth. At the close of his term of office he bought the stove and on removing to Clinton, N. J., sold it to the Annandale Lumber Company, who, when they retired from business, sold it to the present owners. The stove is thirty-eight years of age but has had no repairs during these long years except the renewal of the lower half of the fire box. It is in very good order, looks well, and does service night and day. The gentlemen who own it think it should be on the pension list.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN AND NEW MARKET.

Benson Lott, of Brooklyn, is visiting among Dunellen friends.

Mrs. Charles Dodwell is spending today with friends in Newark.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Gallagher are visiting friends in Ansonia, Conn.

Bernard and John Sirisky have been spending a few days with Somerville friends.

Miss Stella Trust is spending this holiday week with friends in New York city.

Mrs. F. A. Reed and son, of New York, are visiting Mrs. Reed's mother, Mrs. L. A. Palmer.

George Staagland, and extensive shoe dealer in New Brunswick, was in town, yesterday, visiting among friends.

A delegation of young people from here will go to Plainfield New Year's Eve and take part in the Red Men's entertainment and dance.

The Misses Hunt, of Front street, entertained a party of friends Tuesday evening. There was both vocal and instrumental music, followed by refreshments.

Rev. Mr. Custard, pastor of the M. E. church, is slowly recovering from his recent illness, and it is to be hoped that his recovering will now be rapid and permanent.

The checker club will meet again in W. H. Cole's office, on Friday evening for individual playing, and it is quietly whispered that some little tokens of remembrance for the past year may exchange hands.

The report in circulation about catching the Cole safe robbers is pronounced as all bosh. There is absolutely not one iota of truth in it. Mr. Cole says he wishes it were so, but he doesn't believe the report.

Joel Giddes chaperoned a party of merry sleighriders to Lee's West Side house, at Scotch Plains, Monday, where they enjoyed themselves in singing, dancing and divers other amusements. The return trip was a half hour after midnight.

Dunellen is gradually coming to the fore. Yesterday a new steam whistle was placed on the corn cob pipe factory and yesterday at morning, noon and night, it was blown for the first. Heretofore the people have had to rely on the Plainfield whistles and gongs, and when the wind was blowing from the south or west, even these could not be heard.

Mrs. Chas. Wesley Blair, of Lincoln avenue, had a very narrow escape, possibly from death, yesterday. She had been ailing for some little time and during the morning, feeling no better thought perhaps a dose of medicine might relieve her suffering. She intended to take Gough Bitters, but instead, somehow or another, by mistake, swallowed a teaspoonful of acquinite, which had been left in the house for the treatment of a sick horse. Dr. Brakeley was summoned and with much difficulty saved the woman's life. Mrs. Blair is today pronounced out of danger.

The case of Harry Creamer against John Lebold, in tort, was tried before Justice Huff in the hall of the Park hotel, yesterday afternoon. The case is a peculiar one inasmuch as Mr. Creamer offered to give Lebold the corn stalks from his farm of this year's growth, with the distinct understanding that the latter should plow the corn while standing and husk it while cut. He was also to have a share of the corn and he got twenty-eight bushels, whereas he claimed sixty bushels were due him. Not being satisfied with what he claims a partial and unjust result for his labors, Lebold, it is alleged, carted off a considerable quantity of corn, and stalks and refuses to make amends for either. The case was decided against Lebold, and the latter declares he will appeal it to the highest tribunal in the State, if it becomes necessary.

Mrs. Thomas M. Paff, Jr., and child arrived home yesterday from Brooklyn, where they have been visiting friends since Christmas Day.

The interior of Billy Lee's west side house has been in the hands of the painters for the past few days, and the building is being freshened by new light colored paint.

The township committee having refused, it is said, to support in idleness, William Foster. Judge Clark and an officer yesterday drove him over to his former abiding place on the poor farm, where he will be comfortably cared for the winter.

The first annual ball of the Scotch Plains Social Club will be held at the Fanwood club house on the evening of Thursday, January 14. Prof. O'Reilly will furnish the music, and the committee of arrangements consists of T. Emery, J. J. Hunter, A. Alberts, W. Boyle. Several stage loads from Milburn and Springfield, it is expected, will participate.

The Misses Ivy and Reignette Marsh, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George Marsh, will be tendered a birthday party at their home, this evening. Some sixteen invites have been issued among their Scotch Plains friends and a right good time is expected by those who will attend. Miss Edith Randolph will furnish the music for dancing, and the supper will suit the tastes of the most fastidious.

Mr. and Mrs. Emery and some friends from Dog Corner were sleighriding from Berckley Heights, Tuesday afternoon, where Mr. Emery and a gentlemen friend had been spending the day hunting, when one of the horses took fright and ran away. When the accident occurred Mrs. Emery and her friend, Mrs. Waters, were following their husbands in a separate sleigh. Both ladies were thrown from the sleigh, but fortunately neither of them was injured, except from a general shaking up. The horse ran all the way home, and the only damage sustained was a broken shaft, caused by too sharp a cut into the barnyard.

A delightful entertainment was given at the Scotch Plains Baptist church by the Sunday-school Tuesday evening before a congregation that filled the large audience room. It was an echo and a very loud one, too, of the jollity of Christmas season. When this Sunday school has any entertainment the people expect novelty and surprise. In these they were in no respect disappointed. In addition to the tree that always makes merry Christmas, the platform was tastefully decorated to represent a cozy room, while outside could be seen the snow falling. This was a piece of realism, artistically arranged. The largest surprise was a Ferris wheel with a car for each class, the cars being burdened with the presents for the teachers and the scholars. The wheel was fourteen feet in diameter. There was no Santa Claus. He sent his advance agent to bring the little tots their presents. He said that Santa was laid up with enlargement of the heart after the happy and arduous toils of the late Christmas week. The representative was a stranger to the school and was dressed in ordinary street costume. The "take-off" was a complete and a glad surprise. The superintendent, G. E. Hall, was kindly remembered by the teachers. The pastor, as usual, received a liberal purse. The home department of the school, numbering 54, shared in the gifts of the Sunday-school.

MT. PLEASANT.

The Christmas festival at the Union Chapel, Mt. Pleasant, was held last evening. There were recitations by Missers Millie Boylan, Mamie Henry and Helen DeForest, a solo by Miss Came Kellogg and an exercise by Missers Hattie and Grace VanNest, Bessie and Helen DeForest, Mamie Henry and Miss Rowley showing how all nations join in Christmas, and carols by the school, after which W. D. Murray gave Punch and Judy to the entertainment and delight of both old and young. A brilliant Christmas tree, presents for the little ones, and candy for all the school, with coffee and cake for all present made up a very happy evening and all wished that Christmas came oftener than once a year.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. NO. 107 PARK AVE.

A RESULT OF A FLOOD.

BY FANNIE WILLIAMS.

"Hi, Marse John! Dat ar Pelto boy's huntin' our hogs ag'in."

John Hartwell, who was busily hammering at some piece of boyish carpentry in his father's workshop, turned a pair of kindling blue eyes toward the excited young darkey who rushed in with the above information.

"What's that you say, Tom Pete?"

Tom Pete repeated his statement, adding the remark that the Pelton boy was "a-heavin' sticks at 'em, an' makin' 'em run like de ole Nick!"

John put down his hammer and exclaimed:

"I'll see if I can't put a stop to this business, once for all!"

As he spoke, he strode out of the workshop and started across the cornfield, with such an air of angry determination that Tom Pete, running after him, kicked up his heels and grinned, in high glee at the prospect of a collision which was sure to bring the Pelton boy to grief.

John Hartwell and Tracy Pelton were foes of long standing, though neither of them could tell exactly how their feud had first arisen.

The Peltons owned a small plantation on the Sunflower river, and the Hartwells had come from the north some years before and settled on the next place.

Tracy and John, who were nearly of the same age, became acquainted and were peaceable enough for a time, though they had occasional disagreements, like all neighbors' boys.

But some difficulty more serious than usual had led to ill-feeling between them, which had broken out at last into open warfare; so they were now declared and downright enemies. It was a pity, for they were both fine boys, each in his way.

John was a stout young athlete, quick-tempered, quick-witted and merry, always ready for work or play, and throwing himself into both with equal energy; while Tracy was of a quieter disposition and did not get angry or enthusiastic in a moment, but was slow to alter his opinions after they were formed.

"Obstinate as a mule!" John said, not stopping to think that Tracy's affection was even more deep and lasting than his wrath; that he could be a very constant friend as well as an obstinate enemy.

John was in an exceedingly belligerent frame of mind when he reached the edge of the field which bordered on the Pelton place, and beheld his father's fine drove of hogs rushing pell-mell through the corn-stubble, pursued by a slender, dark-eyed boy, who was vigorously pelting them with sticks, clods of earth, or whatever he could lay his hand on.

"You stop that, Tracy Pelton!" shouted John, peremptorily.

"Mind your own business and keep your hogs at home!" retorted Tracy, as he bombarded the hogs with a lively shower of cornstalks.

"I should think this was my business, and I'll attend to it in earnest if you don't look out!" cried John, bristling with wrath and resolution. "If you hit one of those hogs again I'll hit you!"

Accepting this as a challenge, Tracy promptly threw a short stick, which took the largest of the hogs behind the ear and sent the whole drove scurrying tumultuously toward their owner's premises.

John snatched up the stick and hurled it back at Tracy, striking him on the shoulder with force enough to make him very angry, if it did not hurt him much.

He flew at John with doubled fists, and John, nothing loath, received him in the same manner.

The result was that Tracy got whipped, as usual; for the two boys had had several battles already, and, though Tracy invarialy came out second best, he never shrank from a fresh encounter with his stronger foe.

As for John, though he returned home after the battle flushed with triumph and greatly admired by Tom Pete, yet he was perfectly aware that his victory had not settled anything. It was quite certain that Tracy was still determined to chase the hogs and otherwise annoy his enemy whenever he got a chance.

However, during the days that followed neither of the boys had any time to waste in fruitless hostilities. They were sufficiently occupied with the business which was now demanding everybody's attention—that of saving their persons and property from destruction by the waters of the river, which, after rising rapidly for three days, had overflowed its banks and was fast inundating the whole region.

Water from other streams poured in to swell the torrent, cattle were drowned and buildings were swept away. And still the flood rose higher day by day.

People were obliged to move into the upper stories of their houses; then, as the water crept up higher, to take refuge on the roofs; and, at last, they were forced to flee for their lives to the high ground, at a distance of many miles.

Mr. Hartwell had built a sort of flat-boat, or scow, as he called it, which proved extremely useful to himself and his neighbors in this perilous time.

It was constantly in use, conveying people to the hills, picking up valuable floating property, and taking off the sheep and cattle which were huddled in crowds wherever some bit of high ground formed a tiny island in the very midst of the flood.

One day, when Mr. Hartwell had taken off a number of cattle, as many as the scow could safely carry, he started with another man to paddle them to a place of safety, leaving John and Tom Pete on the housetop, which was still out of water.

He intended to come back for another load of stock, and as the scow was so heavily loaded, the boys volunteered to remain behind and wait for his return.

In the meantime they amused themselves by fishing for driftwood and such floating property as the waters brought within their reach.

There was a strong current setting past the house, and anything which happened to drift into this eddy was borne along so swiftly that a quick hand was required to capture it; but the boys had a long rope and a pole with a hook at one end, and by means of these implements they hauled in quite a collection of miscellaneous articles.

"Hi! look dar!" cried Tom Pete, suddenly. "Dar's de Pelton boy's doghouse a-comin' down de stream. Is you gwine to ketch dat?"

"No; let it go," said John, with a scowl. "I'm not going to save his old doghouse for him—yes, I will, too!"

And impulsive John reached out his pole and drew in a gaily-painted kennel, which he had at once recognized as the habitation of Tracy's favorite hound.

It was a cumbersome article to manage, but the two boys contrived to get it on the housetop by dint of stout tugging. As John straightened up after the lift, he remarked, with an apologetic accent:

"It cost Mr. Pelton three dollars to get the old thing painted, and I haven't got anything against him!"

At this moment Tom Pete gave utterance to another excited "Hi!"

"Dar's a hull raft ob stuff a-comin' down f'm Pelton's place," he said. "Sumfin's done busted ober dar!"

"Must be their ginhouse; father said he was afraid it wouldn't stand," replied John, gazing regretfully at the mass of boards and timbers which came swiftly down the current. "I hope all that lumber won't come bumping against this house," he added, with a look of apprehension.

"If we do, we'll bust up, too, fo' sho'," said Tom Pete, sagely. "It ain't a-gwine to hit us, dough—it's gwine to pieces."

In fact, the mass of timbers began to fall apart and drift away separately, and John got ready with his pole to pull in the boards as they were sweeping past. All at once, with a great start, he exclaimed:

"Tom Pete, there's somebody hanging on to that board out yonder!"

"It's dat ar Pelton boy!" cried Tom Pete. "He'll git drownded, sho'!"

Before Tom Pete spoke, John had become aware that it was Tracy Pelton who clung to that drifting board, and his whole generous heart went out to his helpless foe in a moment.

"Tom Pete, you hold onto the rope," he said, hastily twisting a coil of it around his arm as he spoke. "We can't reach him with the pole, and he don't know how to swim. I'll have to go after him."

"Is you gwine to drown'd yo'self fo' dat kin' ob a feller?" Tom Pete demanded, with strong disapproval.

"Of course not. I'm going to save him."

"He ain't wuff savin'," declared Tom Pete, contemptuously.

"What are you talking about," said John, with flashing eyes. "He's the pluckiest fellow to fight that I ever saw. Do you suppose I'm going to let him drown because he doesn't happen to be the best friend I've got? What do you take me for, anyhow?"

"Don' take you fo' nuffin'!" said Tom Pete, with a scared look, and hastening to clutch the rope, as John impetuously added:

"Hang on to that rope now, and help me haul him in. If he gets away I'll pitch you after him."

And John, with a shout of encouragement to his imperiled foe, flung himself into the water, and struck out to Tracy's aid. He was a sturdy swimmer, and in a few moments he came alongside of the board to which Tracy was clinging, and fastened his rope to it.

Tom Pete began to haul in the rope with great zeal, while John, putting one arm under Tracy's shoulder, and swimming with the other, aided in propelling him to the housetop, where they quickly drew him up, wet, weak and shivering, but by no means devoid of the courage and "pluck" which John so much admired.

"John Hartwell, you're a good fellow," said he, clasping John's hand, with a look that spoke more than his words. "I thought I was gone when the ginhouse went, and I can tell you I was glad when you called out to me. You have saved my life, and I shan't forget it."

"How came you on the ginhouse? I thought your folks had all gone to the hills," asked John.

"Father and I came down to feed the stock over on the high knoll," answered Tracy. "I thought I should be safe enough on the ginhouse, while he went over there with a boatload of corn and hay. But it gave way, and went over like a pile of chips. This current was too much for it. It will cost father a pretty penny to build a new ginhouse," he added, ruefully.

When Mr. Hartwell came back to get the boys, he was very much surprised to find Tracy Pelton in their company; and when Mr. Pelton discovered what had happened, he was too grateful for the rescue of his son to complain about the loss of his ginhouse.

When the waters had finally subsided, so that people could return to their homes, the two planters, like all their neighbors, found themselves much poorer for lost stock and injured property; the flood had one good result for John and Tracy—it had made them friends.—Golden Days.

—Since the beginning of this century the use of the Italian language has greatly increased; in 1801 it was spoken by 15,070,000 people, and in 1890 it was used by 33,400,000.

—So rapid has been the change in the English language that the English of to-day bears no more resemblance to the English of 1,000 years ago than it does to German.

—"It always flies to my head!" exclaimed the man with a bald pate, as he brushed off the troublesome insect.

RESTORED TO PERFECT HEALTH.

Mrs. Castle Underwent an Operation at a Philadelphia Hospital.

Philadelphia, Dec. 31.—Mrs. Ella Castle, the wife of the San Francisco millionaire, who was admitted to the Polyclinic hospital about three weeks ago shortly after the return of the couple from their unpleasant experience in London, left that institution on Monday last, perfectly well. Mrs. Castle was suffering from an internal malady, and was successfully operated upon in order to restore her to her normal condition by Dr. L. W. Steinbach of the Polyclinic hospital. The physicians at the hospital state that Mrs. Castle is now in excellent health, and does not exhibit the least trace of her former malady. It is not known yet what are the future plans of the Castles, but it is thought that the husband and wife will take a short trip somewhere before returning to their home in San Francisco. During her stay at the hospital Mrs. Castle occupied a private room and was attended by a trained nurse. By order of the attending physician, no visitors except her husband were allowed to call upon her.

THREE YEARS FOR MURDER.

Light Sentences Imposed Upon Premier Stambuloff's Alleged Assassins.

Sofia, Dec. 31.—The trial of Tufektchieff, Atzoff and Georgieff, alleged assassins of ex-Premier Stambuloff, which has been in progress here for several days, has ended by the conviction of Tufektchieff and Atzoff, and the acquittal of Georgieff. The convicted men were sentenced to three years' imprisonment each. The light sentences imposed upon the convicted men has caused no surprise, in view of the unconcealed bias of the court in their favor. Tufektchieff was formerly an employe in the ministry of public works, and Atzoff was the coachman who drove Stambuloff from his club to the place where he was set upon by assassins, July 15, 1895, dying three days later. Georgieff was formerly a servant of Major Panitza, who was executed at the instigation of Stambuloff for alleged conspiracy against the government.

Cause of the Selma, Ala., Bank Failure.

New York, Dec. 31.—The Commercial bank of Selma, Ala., which failed yesterday, owed about $450,000 to banks in New York. The cause of the failure of the Selma bank was probably not only the refusal of the New York banks to extend the loans to it, but a demand from them for repayments of the loans. The National City bank was a correspondent in New York of the Commercial bank, and its cashier, George S. Whitson, says: "The Commercial bank owes considerable money to New York banks. The loans are to some extent secured by collateral and bills receivable, the value of which cannot in every case be determined at present."

To Operate Railroads in Honduras.

Trenton, Dec. 31.—Articles of incorporation have been filed here by the Honduras syndicate, a company which expects to secure concessions from the government of Honduras and grants of land for the operation of several railroad systems. The company's capital stock is $500,000 and the incorporators are Chauncey M. Depew of New York, William Seward Webb of Shelburne, Vt.; John Jacob Astor and Benjamin F. Tracy of New York Charles McVeigh of Morristown, N. J., and others.

Chemical Association Formed.

Troy, N. Y., Dec. 31.—Following are the newly elected officers of the American Chemical association: President, C. B. Dudley, Altoona, Pa.; secretary, Albert C. Hale, Brooklyn; treasurer, C. F. McKenna, New York; librarian, F. E. Dodge, New York; directors, H. W. Wiley, Washington; William McMurtrie, A. A. Breneman, C. A. Doremus, all of New York; councilors, C. E. Monroe, Washington, J. H. Appleton, Providence; C. F. Chandler and William McMurtrie, New York.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

SPAIN IS SATISFIED

No Complaint To Make Against Our Policy Towards Cuba.

SENSATIONAL STORIES RIDICULED

No Grounds for the Belief That She Has Been Sounding European Powers Regarding Their Attitude in Case of Trouble with This Country.

Washington, Dec. 31.—The recent reports that the Spanish government was endeavoring to secure the cooperation of the great European powers to prevent by force if necessary the intervention of the United States in the Cuban insurrection, have no better authority than many other startling rumors that have been industriously circulated during the past few months. There is authority for the statement that the Spanish government is, generally speaking, entirely satisfied with the attitude of the United States with reference to the Cuban revolt. The governments at Madrid and Washington understand each other thoroughly, and the firm and dignified position of President Cleveland, not only in preserving a strict neutrality between the contending forces, but in public announcing his purpose to do so, furnishes the strongest proof to the Spanish ministry that the intention of this country is to take no step that could be regarded as unfriendly or tending in any way to embarrass the Spanish crown. If additional evidence were needed to assure the world that Spain can find no fault with the attitude of the Washington government it will be found in the notification which the Madrid foreign office has made to the Spanish diplomatic representatives in Great Britain and on the continent. Through advices which reached the state department to-day it is learned that as soon as that portion of the president's recent message to congress relating to the Cuban situation had been translated, copies were sent to the Spanish ministers at the various Eurpean capitals with the added statement that the Spanish government was entirely satisfied with the president's utterances. In these circumstances, the reports which convey the impression that Spain is testing the friendship of the European powers with a view to securing their assistance in preventing an anticipated intervention on the part of this government are pronounced absurd. This is especially the case when it is remembered that the greater part of Cuba is now in a peaceful condition; that in many provinces the crops are now being planted, and that abundant reasons exist for believing that a successful revolt in the island against the Spanish government cannot be much longer continued.

GRANTED CLEARANCE PAPERS.

The Dauntless and Commodore To Sail with Munitions of War for Cuba.

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 31.—Instructions have been received by the collector of the port to grant clearance papers to the Dauntless with a cargo of munitions of war for Nuevetas, Cuba, and require master, owner and consignors to make oath, required in sections 4197, 4198 and 4200 revised statutes. This oath is the same required of masters of all vessels with general cargoes bound to foreign ports. In consequence of this authority, the owners of both the Dauntless and Commodore are preparing to send heavy cargoes of arms and munitions of war to Cuba. The clearance of the Dauntless was authorized in the following communication from the collector of the port to the owner of the vessels: "Sir—Responding to your application made yesterdy of clearance for the steamer Dauntless, I have to inform you that I am authorized by the honorable secretary of the treasury to clear said steamer Dauntless in a strictly regular way for the port of Neuvitas." All indications point to the loading and departnre of these two vessels within the next forty-eight hours. Regular clearance papers will be secured for them, under the secretary's ruling, from the custom house.

SAGASTA ON CUBAN AFFAIRS.

The ex-Premier Says European Governments Are in Sympathy with Spain.

Madrid, Dec, 31.—A report of an interview with ex-Premier Sagasta, the leader of the Spanish liberals, is published in El Liberal, in which he is represented as saying that Europe is in sympathy with Spain in her maintenance of sovereignty in Cuba, but that Europe also wishes to see the establishment of reforms in Cuba. Senor Sagasta further expresses his belief that Premier Canovas only awaits a report from Gen. Weyler that the province of Pinar del Rio is clear of rebels to grant reforms and later autonomy. The ex-premier is also quoted as saying that Gen. Weyler is himself an obstacle to the pacification of Cuba, being incapable of coping with the rebellion.

DR. RIZAL SHOT.

Sentence of Death Carried Out on the Promoter of the Philippine Revolt.

Manila, Dec. 31.—Dr. Rizal, who is asserted to have been the promoter of the revolt against Spanish authority in the Philippine islands, and who was some time since returned to Manila from Barcelona at the request of the military judge, was shot on the 28th inst. An engagement between the Spanish forces and rebels in the vicinity of Puinac resulted in the defeat of the insurgents, who, it is said, lost 300 men killed. The date of the engagement is not given.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The membership report of the New Jersey Division of the L. A. W. for the last week shows that 13 new members have been received and that 25 old ones have renewed their membership. This makes a total of 4,719 in the state. The membership in the League at present is 73,053.

All of the '97 wheels show some improvement over the '96 models but none so great as the Crescent Special, which is made by the Western Wheel works. Last year the wheel was known as a reliable $50 wheel of plain but strong lines. This year the wheel is a very handsome one, indeed. It combines all the good points of the last year's wheel with the elegance of the latest model. It is well enameled and the forks are half nickled. The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, which is agent for that line of wheels, has just received a sample wheel and it was greatly admired by all who saw it. Samples of the juvenile Crescent wheels have also been received and they show a number of improvements.

The plans for the coming entertainment of the Crescent Wheelmen are going steadily forward and it will not be long before the programme will be announced. Charles W. Runyon and Nathan Titsworth are at the head of the movement and although they are not making much noise at present, they are doing lots of work. It will be a minstrel show on the same plan as the entertainment last year but the members have learned considerable by experience so the mistakes of last year will be corrected and the show will be an improvement over the last effort. The same ones who made last year's show so successful will try again this year. William N. Runyon and George O. Stevens are both preparing to take part as is that king of interlocutors, Charles Lyman.

BASKET BALL.

The team that will represent the business men's class of the Y. M. C. A. in their game tomorrow afternoon with the regular basket ball team of the association, will consist of the following: Right forward, Doane; left forward, O'Donnell; centre, Fuller; right guard, F. G. Smith; left guard, Johnson. Mr. Doane is captain of the team.

WINTER SPORTS.

The Elizabeth Athletic Club has just organized a hockey team and the Plainfield cracks are arranging a game with them to be played as soon as the skating improves.

A Little Fellow Hurt.

After having been confined to the house for two weeks with illness, Chrisie Mobus went out to have a little sport on a sled yesterday afternoon. While playing he fell and inflicted a gash on his face. It was necessary for Dr. Probasco to take several stitches in the wound.

ATHLETIC MEET.

New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association Arrange Events.

A special meeting of the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association was held at Pingry's School, Elizabeth, on Monday morning, President George Proctor Smith and Carroll Runyon were present from Plainfield High School. Representatives were also present from Pingry's School and the Montclair High School. It was decided to hold a tennis tournament, open to members of the association only, in September, 1897. The annual field meet was also discussed and it was decided to hold it on the fourth Saturday in May, the 22d, instead of on the first Saturday in June as heretofore. It will be held at the grounds of the New Jersey Athletic Club at Bergen Point.

The football championship was not awarded. Pingrys, Newark Academy and the Montclair High School had each won two games and lost one, as the protested game between Montclair and Newark Academy was allowed but Newark refused to accept the decision of the executive committee. No championship will therefore be awarded this year.

The list of events for the annual games was somewhat altered. There will be a 100 yard dash, junior and senior, 220 yard dash, 440 yard run, half mile run, one mile run, one mile bicycle, 120 yard burdle, 220 yard hurdle, putting the shot, throwing the hammer, pole vault, running broad jump, running high jump. Fourteen events in all. The new events are the half mile run, 120 yard hurdle race, and the one mile walk was taken out.

The annual convention of the association will be held on the aftern on of the third Saturday in September instead of on the evening of the field day. It will be held at Elizabeth.

Two new schools applied for membership and were admitted. They were the South Orange High School and the Bordentown Military Academy. Bordentown is very strong in track athletics and Smith will have a hard time to maintain his lead in the individual championship. There are now seven schools in the association.

Regarding the eligibility of students to enter the various contests of the association, it was decided that he must take at least three studies. Several other changes were made in the constitution but they will not materially effect the Plainfield High School.

Salvationists Anniversary.

On Thursday night, January 7th, the officers, soldiers and friends of the Salvation Army will celebrate their seventh anniversary. The meeting will be conducted by the famous Adjutant March of New York. The Army has done good work since it came to this place.

The following officers were elected by Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque tribe of Red Men last night: Prophet, Chas. Stephens; sachem, Wm. Kline; senior sagamore, Lewis DeCamp; junior sagamore, Theo. Mason; chief of records, J. H. Carney; collector of wampum, Thos. Osmun; keeper of wampum, P. A. VanFleet; trustee, Andrew Saffron; representative to great council, Chas. Conover.

New Fire Department Team.

The new fire department team recently placed on trial by Bainey, the Newark horse dealer, has been purchased for the hook and ladder truck. The "Phil" horse was taken by Bainey as a part of the consideration. The team will now be clipped and systematic care will be given to prepare them for doing good work in the department.

Branching Out in His Business.

Edward Love, the wall paper manufacturer, of North and Watchung avenue, is having his building fitted up, preparatory to entering in a large way into the mail order wall paper business. He is making arrangements to advertise in several hundred newspapers in New Jersey and the Eastern States generally. In this line of business he anticipated that his mail will probably equal that of the Chatauqua, which, while it was in Plainfield, was a special feature. He has on hand already over one hundred thousand rolls of wall paper with which to commence this new department. This gives the people of Plainfield and vicinity special opportunities in making a selection.

Independent Fife and Drum Corps Elects.

A meeting of the Independent Fife and Drum Corps was held Tuesday evening at the club rooms. One new member was elected. The business of the evening was the annual election of officers, which resulted as follows: Major, F. L. Manchester, president, E. E. Vail; vice-president, J. H. Adams; secretary, L. B. Bodine; financial secretary, David Bodine; treasurer, Frank J. Blatz; fife sergeant, F. Carver; fife corporal, Joseph Bolsterli, drum sergeant, J. H. Adams; drum corporal, Daniel Force; business manager, E. E. Vail; sergeant-at-arms, J. Stryker.

Their Fun Went Up in Flames.

Little Tommy Neuman, af West Third street, went over to his cousins the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Day one night recently to see the latter's Christmas tree lighted up. The candles were light and everything was in readiness for a glorious time when the tree took fire, and for several minutes there was a lively time. George Green carried water from the pump in the yard and deluged the place, but the tree and the cotton ornamentation only burned brighter, and finally the tree was thrown from the window, and the fire extinguished in the yard.
